Early Carlisle History—

Baptist Church Organized 1819 With Membership Of 17 Persons

Among pastors who served the Presbyterian church after Rev. Rankin were: Rev. Solomon G. Ward, Rev. McConnaughtay, Rev. W. Y. Allen, Rev. James Matthews, Rev. James P. Henry, Rev. G. M. Adair, Rev. Carson, Rev. John Rule, Rev. H. M. Scudder, Rev. F. D. Thomas, Rev. Anton Verhulst, Rev. S. B. Lander, Rev. B. B. Hestir, etc. While this list is no doubt incomplete, especially concerning earlier pastors, it contains the names of the greater portion of them.

During the early years of the church meetings were held in the courthouse. This continued to be the case until 1839 when the Presbyterians and Baptists of the town and county jointly built a substantial house of worship, which they occupied alternately until 1879, when, the house being no longer fit or safe to use the Presbyterians bought out the Baptists and remodeled the old structure, indeed almost replaced it with a new building of rare taste and beauty at a cost of about $7,500.

The church was remodeled largely through the efforts of Dr. H. M. Scudder, who served the church for nearly half a century, and on September 5, 1880, the new building was dedicated. The building several years later gave way for the present Presbyterian church.

The Baptist church at Carlisle was organized February 25, 1819, with a membership of 17. Walter Warder, a wellknown Baptist minister of that day, was the only minister present upon the occasion and his signature appears upon the certificate of organization. The articles of faith, rules of decorum, etc., appear in his handwriting. He was chosen the first pastor and served in that capacity until March, 1823, a period of four year, during which time there were 45 additions.

In April, 1819, Henly Roberts was chosen clerk, which office he held for a period of 25 years, with an interim of two years. In May of the same year, Henly Roberts and Thomas Champ were chosen and ordained as deacons. In November, 1823, a similar committee was appointed to superintend the construction of the house. The walls were raised a few feet above the ground but were never completed.

Elder John Smith, afterward a wellknown minister in the movement inaugurated by Alexander Campbell, accepted the care of the church in July, 1823, and served it one year. The association met with the church in 1824, at which meeting Walter Warder presided as moderator and preached the introductory sermon, but no mention of the meeting appears in the record of the church.

In 1825, 1826 and 1827 John Smith appears again as pastor. In September, 1827, Walter Warder accepted the pastorate a second time. During this year, under his administration, the church enjoyed a splendid growth, there being 20 additions by baptism in three months, although there appears to have been no protracted effort. William Vaughn accepted the pastorate in February, 1829, and continued for two years.

It was in the year 1830 that the strife in the Baptist churches of Kentucky, engineered by the fraction of Alexander Campbell culminated. Franklin Association had taken decided grounds against the faction of Campbell. Elkhorn, in a stormy session at Silas church, Bourbon county, had taken a similar position. Tate's Creek had withdrawn all fellowship from church and association that favored Campbellism, while the North district had been split. Later in the year contests came up in Bracken association. Splits had occurred in the Maysluck and Bethel churches. Millersburg had narrowly escaped a split, but the church in Carlisle passed the ordeal without trouble, which fact is undoubtedly to be attributed to the influence of her pastor, William Vaughn.

Rev. Vaughn was succeeded by James Duvall in 1831. From August 1832, no business was transacted until February, when Dr. Vaughn again accepted the care of the church and remained in pastor until June, 1836, and continued until the fall of 1840. He was ordained at Millersburg in January, 1830.

During the pastorate of Rev. Holladay, in the year 1846, 16 members, Henly Roberts being one of them, were dismissed by letter and formed the church at Locust Grove. E. D. Isbell, D. D., of Missouri, served the church most acceptably from 1848 until 1850, during which time valuable additions were made.

The cholera prevailed in 1849, and August 1st was observed by the church as a day of humiliation and prayer. Clark King officiated as pastor from 1851 until 1855. In 1853 the pastor was assisted in a meeting of 17 days duration by Dr. W. W. Gardner, which resulted in 13 additions by baptism and two by letter. Elder John James succeeded Clark King as pastor in 1855, for one year. He was succeeded by W. J. Bullock, in April, 1857, who resigned in December to take charge of the Maysleick church.

The church remained without a pastor for two years following, but was visited during the time by Rev. C. Keyes, who labored zealously for a number of days, the result of which was the addition of 14 members. Next Week: Carlisle Christian Church

Suggests Reclaiming Brushland For Grass

Some farmers could well afford to consider reclaiming brushland for pasture instead of buying additional land, thinks Dr. Paul McComas, farm economist at the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky.

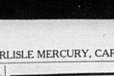
There are 2,000,000 acres of brushland in Kentucky that could be made to grow profitable grass, he added. Returns from such land is less than taxes. While some of this land is too steep or too badly eroded to reclaim, much of it could be cleared and made to grow alfalfa, bluegrass or other hay and pasture crops, he declared.

By using bulldozers and power saws, much brushland could be cleared at a cost of not more than $50 an acre, this economist stated. These machines have greatly simplified and cheapened the cost of clearing land.

Studies made in Pendleton and Grant counties showed that cleared land was naturally adapted to alfalfa, bluegrass and orchard grass, and produced good hay and grass. Land once considered worthless was made to produce enough feed to carry a cow to five or six acres, and in some instances a cow to each three acres.

Land that will carry a cow for each three acres will pay a good return on an investment of $50 or $60 an acre for clearing and seeding, Dr. McComas said.

Breathitt county farmers are pleased with Ky. 103 and Ky. 201 varieties of hybrid corn, since hard winds blew down open-pollinated varieties.



"A neighbor's house has just burned and a big crowd came to see the blaze. I was a little worried for the safety of our little newspaper but luckily the fine truck kept the flames from spreading. Oh, yes, there is another thing of interest just this minute. The court house bell is ringing and hundreds are gathering in the circuit court room to hear a murder trial —some, in my opinion, just habitually gather there to gossip and perhaps to keep warm."

The above is the first paragraph in a letter from W. P. Nolan, who, with Mrs. Nolan as business manager, runs the weekly Mountain Eagle at Whitesburg. Folksy, isn't it?

"Progress in Whitesburg and Letcher county? Let me think. Yes, we have three extension railroad lines coming into these creeks and hills, one of them a 16-mile extension of the L. & N., the other two being built by the C. & O. The two railroad companies seem to be striving with each other to get to rich untapped coal fields first.

"As you may already know, three rivers, the Kentucky, the Cumberland and the Big Sandy head in this county . . . We do not have any too much land suitable for building on here in the mountains. Valleys are too narrow, hillsides too steep. But despite the scarcity of good building lots, many new homes of modern design have been built in the last couple of years. Also good business houses. And Knott has a new bank that's doing nicely.

"Local bank deposits are over $7,000,000. Our county population is 42,000. Five high schools. Fleming, Jenkins, Stuart Robinson (find settlement school at Blackey), and Kingdom Come. Are farming? You ought to see the products brought to the school fair here by the 4-H Club boys and girls and by grown-ups who take pride in producing fine stuff.

"And, by the way, the folks voted last year to build a $25,000 city hall and fire barn combined.

"We have four civic clubs in the county. Rotary and Lions in Whitesburg, Kiwanis in Jenkins. Mons in Neon. One of them is headed by an undertaker who believes in burying 'em elaborately, another by a lawyer who likes to exactly 'em this opponents in trials), the third by a teacher who claims he is not getting enough pay, the fourth by a merchant who thinks progress is mainly good salesmanship. These clubs are doing whatever they can to better civic conditions — kindergarten, crippled children, community fairs, attractive activities, better schools.

"I mustn't overlook the fact that some of the big coal companies in the county are selling their houses to individuals, which will be a big help. When companies own whole towns and communities, the individual incentive for good home keeping is lost.

"FLASH! That murder trial I mentioned has been put off. Change of venue, to Pike county. Good riddance!"

20,670 4-H Calves Bring $2,191,263

Since the first show was held in 1922, members of 4-H clubs in Kentucky have sold 20,760 calves at the annual Fat Cattle Show and Sale at the Bourbon Stock Yards in Louisville, according to a summary of the calf project, issued at the College of Agriculture and Home Economics in Lexington.

The calves sold for $2,191,263. In addition, the boys and girls won many thousands of dollars in cash prizes.

More than 2,000 calves are being fattened by 4-H'ers in 51 counties for this year's show, to be held Nov. 10, 11 and 12. The calves are said to be in extra-good condition, and this year's show is expected to be one of the best ever held.

Last year's grand champion calf, owned by Tony Cocmanopler of Garrard county, sold for $9 a pound. The grand champion carload, also from Garrard county, brought 47 cents a pound.

BIBLE COMMENT

Book of Job Offers Faith as Solution To All Suffering

THE problem of suffering has been a puzzling one ever since men began to think.

It particularly occupied the minds of the writers who gave us the Bible, and whose distinction in life and literature is the supremacy of their interest in moral and spiritual values.

They early made a distinction between good and evil in thought and conduct. Their first solution of the matter of suffering and welfare was in the broad observation that good conduct made for happiness and well-being, while evil conduct brought its consequences, expressed in the warning, "Be sure your sin will find you out."

In a general way this conclusion is true and is upheld in experience. But more thoughtful observers soon perceived that the simple equations—good living equals happiness and welfare, evil living equals evil consequences—did not fit every case.

It was obvious that the easy, simple solutions of the problem of suffering didn't square with the facts, or at least with all of the facts.

The first effective challenge to that simple solution came in the great drama, the Book of Job. It is important to remember that it is a drama, in which actual characters are speaking.

The drama of Job is skillfully set to emphasize the problem of a good man, beset by severe afflictions, who refuses to accept the easy solutions of his friends.

What, then, does the Book of Job offer as the solution of this problem of suffering of the innocent with the guilty? Neither but the solution of faith, the placing of the mystery of suffering in the deeper mystery of the world and life, and the faith that the Judge of all the Earth will do right.

This is reaffirmed in the assurance of Jesus concerning the have and care—"Not a sparrow falleth to the ground without your Father." But it is still a matter of faith, for there is still the mystery of why the sparrow falls. But Job found a real solution in faith.

Catholic Information
HOW FREE IS FREE WILL?
Tis said by some that there is no such thing as free will. Like the sunflower, man must turn to his god in the West. Like the moth, he must flutter in the flame. Like the wolf he must slay the sheep.
What merit then in being good —what fault in being bad? What justice in rewarding the benefactor —in punishing the malefactor? What use at all in the Commandments of God or the teachings and warnings of Christ to a race with no power to choose between God and Satan?
Because I must stop my car at traffic light, have I no free will? Isn't it rather that I freely choose to stop because I approve the law or fear its fangs?
Free Will! Is it the right to be good or bad? Or isn't it the power to choose between right and wrong, between the wise and the foolish, between the difficult and the easy, between Heaven and Hell?
Because I must labor hard each day, is that proof that free will is a myth? No, I freely choose between the toil and the deprivations the lack of my wages would bring.
That is man not, such, kill, or covet, deprives me not at all of my freedom of will, but shows that I choose to obey God because I love or fear Him.
That I, a Catholic, must assist at Mass each Sunday, makes me not a mental slave but proves my agreement with the laws which my Church has enacted for me and for my spiritual welfare.
Freedom of will! A tremendous gift! An awful gift! It lifts us high above the beasts or drops us down below the worms. Stupid who missile it jam our jails and asylums. Clever men who use it wallow in wealth but drive to die. But wise men freely choose to reject the magnified trinkets of the worldly world in order to pay the price that God has put on heaven.
