Start Drive to Destroy Discarded Iceboxes, Refrigerators and Freezers

By IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau

Summer vacation is coming and the kids soon will be out of school. It's a nice thought for millions of boys and girls—but it is a time of increased responsibility for parents and others who look to today's happy children as the mature guardians of a much more complicated tomorrow. For, some of our playful youngsters may not be around tomorrow unless parents and wholehearted cooperation is given to a campaign being launched by the National Safety Council, with the support of the National Electrical Manufacturers Association.

This program, aimed at protecting the lives of innocent, but unthinking children, calls upon every owner of an icebox, refrigerator or food freezer to render these attractive-looking places harmless before it is too late. During the last six years 79 children, ranging in age from 3 to 12, have died in abandoned airtight boxes.

The cause of these deaths, which involved 59 boys and 20 girls, is a matter of grim statistics. They simply suffocated when the small amount of air in their "prisons" became exhausted. There was no way to get out. No one could hear their calls for help. How did they get in? For several reasons. Some were just exploring or hiding from other children. Others were put into these boxes as part of a game. A few were locked in by older children who wanted to scare younger boys and girls. In some cases, many were required, too late were entirely forgotten as play shifted to other places or more exciting games.

Approximately 3,000,000 iceboxes, refrigerators and freezers are abandoned annually in vacant lots, outback privies, in basements or other locations. There is only one sure way of dealing with them—remove their doors and tops, or at least take off the latches. Removing doors and tops is best because small, panicky children might find it impossible to lift the heavy top of a chest-type freezer or to open the doors of upright freezers and refrigerators, when the latter are placed on their backs, even though the latches are missing.

Now, a word to parents. Know where your children are playing. Keep reminding them about the hazards of getting into discarded airtight cabinets. And dealers—guard the lives of the children of your community. Destroy those traps—or make them safe. If you can't sell them promptly. Or remove the danger by removing the doors.
