BIBLE THOUGHT THIS WEEK

Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind.—Rom. XII 2

PARKING SUGGESTION

An excellent suggestion was made this week by one of Carlisle's leading business men with a view of helping to solve the parking problem on Main street, especially south of Locust street, since the 30-minute time limit and prohibition of double parking is solving the problem on Main street from Locust to Broadway.

The suggestion made was that business people either leave their cars at home during business hours or park them on vacant lots available in many instances at the rear of the business place, or park on a side street off of Main street. Carlisle business people could make a good investment in following this simple suggestion, the putting into practice of which would allow customers to park nearer the places where they spend their money and not be forced off on a side street and have to carry his merchandise to his automobile, or truck, while the proprietor, or employee, of the business places take up the space front of his businesses or in front of his neighbor's business with his own car.

During these bracing spring mornings it would be a good healthful suggestion to leave the car at home, if not too far from business, and take a walk.

FOR THE RECORD

Some information has just been released by the American Petroleum Institute which is almost beyond conception. Our average fighting man overseas requires his weight in oil every three days to get him there, keep him going and protect him overhead.

It takes an average of three tons of 100-octane gasoline to deliver and drop one ton of bombs. Think it over when you read or 2,000 tons of bombs being dropped day after day on German and Japanese objects!

The fulfillment of our hopes that there will mean an ever-increasing tempo of blows until the enemy is so shot as dependent on a never-ending stream of gasoline.

The unbroken of production of gasoline by the United States is entirely the result of private initiative and enterprise. This is in striking contrast to the production from government-owned or government-dominated oil resources in foreign countries. It is just one more argument against government ownership or domination of the American oil industry.

Innocent Request By Anxious Wife Turns Up Rascal

Pastor, Naval Officer, Spy And Forger Listed in Career of Humbug.

LONDON.—An anxious wife's innocent request to a London newspaper to publish a picture of her missing husband brought him up all right—and had the additional indirect effect of turning him in. The husband, who turned out to have had a career fit to turn milk, is Lieut. Charles Reginald Browne, 46 years old, of the royal navy volunteer reserve; native of Cape Town, South Africa; former student in South Africa at Rondebosch and Durban, in England at Oxford; former artillery man, former merchant sailor, French Foreign Legion deserter, former secretary of the Natal parliament, ex-stationmaster in Kenya, once alleged spy in Mozambique, once Nonconformist minister at Hackney, England.

When Mrs. Browne became worried about the versatile Browne's disappearance from their home at Highgate, Hampstead, she asked the lawyer with their two children, the London paper helped her out by running the photograph.

Policemen Nabs Him.

A policeman — Detective Ralph Roots—saw the picture, and noticed that it corresponded with the description of a man wanted at Salisbury for check frauds. Within a few hours Roots saw Browne in the street at Lyndhurst and arrested him.

Bank officials said Browne had walked into their managers' parlors in officers' uniform, produced his naval identity card, stated that he banked with the Falmouth branch, and asked to be credited with $20.

Browne denied in evidence that he had any intent to defraud when he was brought to trial at the Winchester quarter sessions.

Speaking with the academic detachment of a university professor, he stated blandly that he "knew" he had a banking account at Falmouth, and that, by reason of the bad time he had had since being torpedoed, he only had the barest recollection of cashing the checks in question.

Wife Testifies.

Answering Prosecutor G. R. P. Murray, Mrs. Miriam Agnes Browne said she was married four years ago at Waltham Abbey, and had two children.

She declared that when she visited him for the first time in Winchester prison Browne did not recognize her.

Defense Attorney G. W. Willett submitted that Browne had no active intention of defrauding the banks.

Detective Roots then produced a record of several convictions for various criminal offenses.

The jury brought in a verdict of guilty and he was sentenced to 36 months' imprisonment.

"You're obviously a person of ability," said Judge Chute, "but we can only look on you as a thoroughly and have to carry his merchandise to his automobile, or truck, while the proprietor, or employee, of the business places take up the space front of his businesses or in front of his neighbor's business with his own car.

During these bracing spring mornings it would be a good healthful suggestion to leave the car at home, if not too far from business, and take a walk.

Triplets Get Fun Out of Nurse Job

Maryland Sisters Take Care Of War Wounded.

BENEDICT, MD.—The army air forces nurses' corps was the answer to a problem for the Chapellear triplets of this place.

They look alike and think alike; and they decided slowly to dress alike and to do the same things.

Sometimes it was difficult in civilian life, but G. I. uniforms and hospital routine made it all easy for the 21-year-old twins. They volunteered as nurses, passed entrance examinations with flying colors, made marks and were assigned together at second lieutenants at the army air forces regional station hospital occupying the former Miami Biltmore hotel at Coral Gables.

"And are we glad we did," says Ellen Rose Chapellear, who outranks her sisters because she is 10 minutes older than Elizabeth Maria and 30 minutes older than Mary Virginia.

"It's fun being a nurse—particularly when you're triplets," she claims.

Life always has been fun for the triplets. In high school at Highgate, Md., they liked to change seats in classes and they were each other. That was easy since they stood one-two-three in class throughout high school.

Now they substitute on tours of special duty. All three take turns on the telephone switchboard and as other hospital jobs.

"They have no trouble among themselves—even about boy friends.

"We haven't begun to think about that yet," says Ellen Rose. "We want to keep on being nurses."

The sisters are on general assignment at the hospital, which receives overseas casualties and serves air force personnel in this area. There is even a maternity ward for wives of service men, and Ellen Rose is on duty there. They are not particularly interested in an overseas assignment.

"We like it here," they say.

Lack of Pants No Bar to Yanks Attending Church

WASHINGTON.—Such superficialities as the absence of pants didn't keep American soldiers on chilly Attu island from going to religious services, army chaplains said in a report released by the war department.

"I was holding a service in a hospital mess tent," said Chaplain Francis W. Read of Glendale, Calif. "A lieutenant came to me after the service and said, 'Chaplain, please excuse me for coming to church without my pants.'

"All he had on was a pair of long underdrawers and a field jacket. He explained he had had his pants cut off so the doctor could get at his wounds, and that it was a choice of coming to church without his pants or not coming."

Read reported that the American soldier, beneath his periodic cursing and rough exterior, was deeply religious, possessing faith that would put many people at home to shame.

Another chaplain, Lieut. Col. Frank E. Curtis of Salt Lake City, said that almost without fail men thought turned to God when the going got tough.

Juror's Sore Jaw Used in Appeal in Burglary Case

CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA.—A sore jaw figured in a plea for a new trial here.

Viola Gallagher, appealing convictions for theft, claimed that a juror, one of the jurors, Thomas Moore, was sore he had had a painful jaw from a tooth extraction, but that he conscientiously had voted for acquittal in the last ballot. Then, with his jaw easing him more and more anguish, he said he was told that if a verdict was not reached, the jurors would stay Mine. He relented.

"I knew I couldn't stand it if I was locked up over the week-end, so I voted with the others."

Soldier Twice Reported Dead Leaves Hospital

JOHNSON CITY, TENN.—Twice during his 16 years of soldiering, Sgt. Virgil Grayson A. Brooks has been reported dead.

The last time was in the Canal Zone several years ago when a doctor examined him for malaria fever, tagged him and pronounced Brooks dead.

The last time was when his wife wrote him in North Africa from Little Rock, Ark. The letter was returned by the censor with "deceased" pencilled on the envelope.

Sergeant Brooks was in a Texas hospital during that last go-round. And he's still in the army and spoiling for a fight.

Youth's Sled Stolen; Warning Brings Two

DECATUR, ILL.—When Clarence Seig's son Ronald, nine, reported the theft of his sled, Seig informed Ronald's playmates that we knew "who took the sled" and that "if it wasn't down up the Seigs' porch with another one alongside it, he would know the reason why."

The next morning Ronald's sled was parked on the Seigs' porch—with another one alongside it.

Use Cornmeal to Clean Soot From Parlor Rugs

One of the first steps in extending the life of a rug or carpet is to keep it clean. During the winter months one of the chief hazards is soot from the stove or fireplace. While it is not difficult to remove, it calls for special treatment. Instead of sweeping or brushing, which tends to embed the soot in the material, sprinkle the spot with cornmeal. Let it remain on the carpet for a few minutes, then brush it out. Repeated treatment until the cornmeal brushes out clean.

Grease spots are often stubborn to remove from rugs and carpets, especially when allowed to remain for any length of time. Remove such spots promptly, using a grease solvent, such as carbon tetrachloride. Use the solvent on an inconspicuous part of the rug before attempting to remove the spots, in order to be sure that it does not affect the color. Then work from the outside of the stain in toward the center and repeat as necessary.

Candle wax spots can usually be removed successfully by first scraping off as much wax as possible with a dull knife, being careful not to injure the pile. Then sponge with a grease solvent. If the candle wax leaves behind a stain remains, try sponging lightly with a liquid made up of two parts of water and one part denatured alcohol. As a precaution against fading, test first on an inconspicuous part of the rug.

Method for Controlling Tuberculosis in Poultry

Tuberculosis in chickens can be controlled by killing the entire flock if the end of the flock laying season is if 1 per cent of the birds younger than 18 months are found to be carriers of the birds older than 18 months reacts to the tuberculin test, special to the tuberculin test, special and greatly they were each other. That was easy since they stood one-two-three in class throughout high school.

Now they substitute on tours of special duty. All three take turns on the telephone switchboard and as other hospital jobs.

"They have no trouble among themselves—even about boy friends.

BOYS ARE FLYING KITES ON THE HILL

The sport is old—
Unknown centuries ago
The slant-eyed lads of Old Cathay
Gazed upward at their dragon kites
On such a windy day.

The hill is old—
Scant fragments have the elements
Carved from the hillsides stiff and brown;
Thus ever has it seemed to stand, Staunch guardian of the town.

The breeze is old—
Time was triremes and galleons sped,
Full sailed, before it as it blew.
Around the world—the breeze is old—
Only the boys are new.
