Wanted: More Wise Men

Many centuries ago, three Wise Men made a long journey and they arrived safely. The purpose of their trip to Bethlehem was to celebrate the birth of the Christ child.

Now, one thousand, nine hundred and fifty-four years later, many men will journey to their own birthplace to join family and friends in celebrating that same birthday anniversary—Christmas.

These men will travel differently—by high speed motor vehicles—but if they are wise men they, too, can arrive safely.

It is ironic that this Christian occasion should be the most deadly from an accident standpoint, the National Safety Council says. Last year, 519 persons were killed in Christmas weekend traffic accidents—and December 24th is the most dangerous day of the year in traffic.

Early darkness and bad weather, which add up to poor visibility, increase holiday traffic hazards. Fogged windshields also make it difficult to see and avoid accident situations.

Rain, snow and ice mean slippery streets and highways.

Good fellowship stimulates more drinking, often before driving.

And thousands of unwise men fail to adjust their driving speeds to these hazardous conditions.

To overcome the added hazards of the season, the Council says, more wise men, bearing gifts of extra caution, courtesy and common sense, are needed. Then the traditional spirit of Christmas—"Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men"—will spread over the highways and the land.

Well-Being At Stake

Nation's Business recently summarized the coal situation, as it exists now and as it is expected to be in the future. The conclusions reached certainly show how difficult and serious the coal problem is.

Coal's long range future, says the magazine, is bright—output and demand probably will double in 20 years. But, it continues, "the present is dark." This year's bituminous production will be less than that of 1907. Mining employment is now below the 1890 figure. Some 2400 soft coal mines have closed in the past three years.

It is obvious that if coal is to be capable of doubling production in 20 years, it must be a progressive, profit-making going concern in the meantime. It is equally obvious that skilled miners can't wait years for jobs to open up—and that if coal continues in a state of depression, young men won't enter mining in sufficient numbers.

The coal industry, the other basic industries which regulate coal, and government experts—all are searching for solutions to this dilemma. America is vitally the security and well-being of the whole country.

Tid Bits Of Kentucky Folklore

By Dr. Gordon Wilson

"A MOTHER IN ISRAEL"

With the passing of my mother in 1929 passed one of the few remaining elderly women of Fidelity, women who in their lives tied us back to long-ago times before the Civil War. In her way she was as unusual as Father, the country doctor whom I have so often mentioned in this column. Mother was, in Biblical phrase, a "mother in Israel." She was the quiet, unassuming influence in our home and in our neighborhood. Her voice was low, but what she said had weight. In her hands Father was an obedient, sometimes provoking, child. Without her care he would have ridden off in a pouring rain without his slicker and his overshoes. When she scolded us, it was with a strangely gentle voice, never a word of anger. But it had its effect, for she knew that Father would take over when we did not behave. And none of us liked to have Father administer his swift, stinging justice. This same calm that he used in the home was a part of her life as a woman in the neighborhood, for she was not the quarrelsome kind. More than any one else whom I have ever known, she embodied the calm and an inner strength that did not need loudness to carry its weight.

Yet, for most of her age were denominationally regular, some conscious to the point of being a bit obtrusive in their religious convictions. Mother, a member of a church that had not congregated in our part of the world, fitted in with whatever religious group she associated with. That does not mean that she was without opinions, for she was basically the most tolerant person I have ever known. She was above the bickerings of what quarrelsome denominations but gave no satiric public demonstrations of her dislike of narrowness. Always there was an undercurrent of faith in the individual, a feeling that even the lowliest had enough sense to do the right thing, whether told to do so or not. She was not a church woman, she remained at home to answer calls for the doctor, at least, that is what she said. I am inclined to believe, a half century later, that her faith was stronger than that of most of our most ardent church people and that the vigorous attacks that we heard at our little church upon all the other denominations of the world just did not accord with her spirit of tolerance. In her old age she discussed with me deep spiritual philosophy that I wondered at, for she had had only a meager education and no travel into what the world calls cultured areas. But in her remote neighborhood mothering her big family and looking after absent-minded Father, she had done some wonderful thinking, thinking that made me slightly ashamed of my diplomas and degrees.

To the end of her eighty-one years she was the head of the household and remained the veritable mother in Israel. She never stayed back in a corner or cried over things long past, like many old women whom I have known. Life was still to be lived, she never said, so as many mourner people have said, that she would be glad to die and leave this world, with its troubles. She did not deny that there were troubles, she met them as part of the endless struggle that had made her life eventful and even happy. It would be hard to tell the younger generation just how the old-fashioned woman like her could remain the head of the household, even though all the children were grown and there were grown grandchildren. She was in no sense boss, but her wise counsel at least made you think before you rushed heading into some act that you would later regret. And she was individual enough to regard individualism in others as sacred; none of us lost caste with Mother if we honestly followed our own best ideas, whether they agreed with hers or not. And in the neighborhood she was asked many a time to help adjust troubling things, and always she used the same calmness that she used when straightening out our childish affairs in our own nervous, tight home. She was indeed a mother in Israel, an old-fashioned woman who was accepted place in the world and grumbled not.

loss of wheat price support eligibility.

In all other instances, however, all wheat produced on acreage outside the established farm allotment is subject to quota penalties. There is no provision for exempting feed wheat, even if it is fed on the farm where produced.

UK To Report On Feeding Research

Five reports on livestock research at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station will be presented by University of Kentucky scientists at the annual meeting of the American Society of Animal Production during the International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago.

They will deal with experiments in feeding dairy calves and pregnant ewes, including the use of low-quality forage for sheep, the effect of temperature on the fertility of rams, and carcass characteristics of heavy calves produced in the Kentucky corn and calf plan.

The reports were prepared by W. P. Garrigus, D. M. Seath, James D. Kemp, R. H. Dutt, E. C. Simpson, C. M. Thompson, R. B. Grainger, Ralph Woodfolk, C. M. Thompson, C. A. Lassiter, T. W. Dennis and J. W. Rust.

Fall Best Time To Set Fruit Trees

While many people think fruit trees should be set in the spring, Dr. C. S. Waltman, horticulturist at the University of Kentucky, says better results may be expected by setting trees in November and December. With certain kinds of trees, such as cherries, the loss is lower and the growth better from fall-set trees, he said.

Following are some reasons for fall planting:

Growth of the tree tops has been completed for the season but the roots are still in growing condition and can become established in the soil before the soil temperature becomes too cold to prevent further root growth.

There are no leaves on the trees in late fall, and this gives the roots a decided advantage over those of spring-set trees because there is no large evaporating surface on the top which is drawing heavily upon the soil moisture supply.

Farm, Home Week Program Includes Style Show

A style show in which about 75 Kentucky homemakers will model garments they have made will be a feature of the annual Farm and Home Week program to be held at the University of Kentucky in February. Dresses of cotton, silk, rayon or wool, and suits and coats will be shown. Children's garments will also be modeled.

Homemakers who have had projects on the basic wardrobe and accessories will show suits, coats and dresses, some of them with hats and purses they have made.

Approximately 19,626 homemakers in 41 counties had instruction the past year in clothing construction and selection under the leadership of Miss Verna Latzke and Miss Dorothy Threlkeld, clothing specialists. They will be in charge of the style revue.

Wheat Fed To Stock Included In Quotas

When marketing quotas are in effect for wheat, wheat grown on acres in excess of farm acreage allotments is subject to quota penalties even if it is fed on the farm, State ASC officials explained in answering questions about the wheat program.

This is a provision of the controlling legislation. Many farmers have raised the question this year why wheat is raised for feed and is not sold on the market at all—should have to be included under quota and allotment provisions. The law is clear on this point. It is not a matter for administrative ruling.

Smaller producers—those with acreage allotments of less than 15 acres— do not come under the marketing quota provisions if their total wheat production on the farm does not exceed 15 acres. In these cases, the penalty for exceeding acreage allotments is only the

TV NOTEBOOK

By Gene Clinkenbeard

By Gene Clinkenbeard

This business of telecasting programs which can be picked up by both conventional black-and-white and color receivers is apparently confusing to some people. The necessary scrambling and unscrambling of colors to effect this is quite a chore.

What happens is that the big color-TV cameras take three pictures, one for each of three primary colors. These are routed to provide a black-and-white picture signal and a separate subcarrier of color signals as well. Regular receivers show the picture in ordinary monochrome by ignoring the color subcarrier. On the other hand, the color receivers use the subcarrier to convert the black-and-white signal back into the three primary-color pictures, which overlap on the screen and register on the eye as full natural color.

If this sounds involved, consider the fact that one tricolor tube in use boasts 600,000 dots of phosphor material on the tube's screen. These are arranged in triangular groups, each group containing a red, a blue and a green phosphor dot!

If your television set received like it was located at the bottom of a well, it's time you called us in. For a fine JOB, in JIG time, call GENE'S TELEVISION. Give us a JINGLE now . . . No. 71-J.

County Farm, Tuesday, 7:00.

The Thursday night Prayer and Bible Study will be dismissed this week only.

There will be a special Missionary Service Sunday Morning, November 28. We will hear from five foreign countries. Plan now on coming out to Sunday School and church.

A Happy Thanksgiving to everyone.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

The vital importance of detecting the false suggestions of evil, and correcting them with the spiritual truth concerning God's unfailing goodness and all-power will be stressed at Christian Science services Sunday.

In the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Disclosed," the following passage will be read from the Bible (Isaiah 5:20): "Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter?"

From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy the following passage will be read (469:13): "Mind is God. The exterminator of error is the great truth that God, good, is the only Mind, and that the supposititious opposite of infinite Mind—called devil or evil is not Mind,—is not Truth, but error, without intelligence or reality."

The Golden Text is from Romans (8:31): "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

Moorefield

By Miss Lena Hazelrigg

The C.W.F. will observe Woman's Day at the Christian church Sunday, Nov. 28, with an all-day meeting. A pot luck lunch will be served at the noon hour in the school cafeteria. Mrs. W. D. Dugan State C.W.F. president will be guest speaker. The public is invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hazelrigg and son of Winchester were Sunday guests of Mrs. Addie Reid.

Joan Smart visited Mr. and Mrs. Palmer Smart and family in Paris over the weekend.

Mrs. Harvey Bromagen spent from Friday until Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Givin in Harrodsburg.

Mr. and Mrs. P. N. Jones visited Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Cannon and children in ohio and we are all looking forward to this being a real feast. We do hope that every one can attend.

Ellisville 4-H Club

The Happy Workers of the Ellisville school held their monthly meeting Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 17 at 1 o'clock.

The program—Roll call answered by each member naming a farm product which is sold. Tobacco History—Johnny Jackson; Going to Market—Marjorie Thornsburg; Home use for Tobacco—Donny Sampson; Auction Selling—Louise Bussell; Cigarettes—Brenda Fryman; Burley Tobacco—Wanda Hopkins.

The meeting was adjourned until the third Wednesday in December. Following the adjournment of the meeting a social was held in the Lunch Room. Home-made candy and cookies were served.—Jean McClanahan, reporter.
