Kelleys' win marathon

On Oct. 2, Gayle and Stephen Kelley won the Father and Son Mini-marathon title at the 1982 Apple Festival Run in Paintsville, Ky. Of the 160 runners, the Kelleys' combined time was the best of the field in the father and son category, for which they won a trophy. The course was 10,000 meters (6.2 miles).

Even though the Kelleys have been jogging for several years, this is the first year they have raced competitively. Mr. Kelley has competed in eight races this summer, usually finishing in the top percentage of his age group. Stephen more recently has begun to participate and has competed in three mini-marathons.

'Burley Jitters' appear as market time nears

by Bennett Roach

Symptoms of "burley jitters" are appearing among tobacco leaders, in spite of the promising outlook for the approaching market and bright prospects for a bumper high-quality crop.

This year's market is the first under the No Net Cost Program, with its important changes. Many are wondering what the impact will be, now and later.

The growers are asking if grade pricing will return at last, and whether the buyers will forsake the practice of the last two or three seasons, of taking any and all offerings at a single, sweeping bid.

Last week at Nashville, Tenn., attention of, all segments of the industry was focused on current tobacco questions. The occasion was the 33rd annual convention of the Burley and Dark Leaf Tobacco Export Association, with over 300 persons in attendance.

Officers and directors of the Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association, parent organization of the export promotion group, were well represented at the gathering. They were given something of a 1982 market preview, with panel speakers presenting their views.

A few of the expert's conclusions:

— That grade-pricing will be more in evidence in this year's market, especially in foreign buying.

— That exports will decline, with stronger U.S. dollar boosting export costs five percent to 10 percent.

— That some 75 million to 100 million pounds of burley may be taken under loan from this year's market.

— That no decision has been made at Washington on lowering any burley supports, though it is under study.

The changes called for under No Net Cost won't be fully felt until future marketing seasons, said Fred Bond, general managir of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corp., who gave the convention guests a review of the flue-cured market.

"The very nature of the No Net Cost program leaves little doubt that the producer associations will be the basic responsible group," said Bond. He added: "The transition is inevitable," and that the forces that brought it about "left producers with little choice — no program at all, or make the changes that would eliminate any cost to the government.

"So the transition has begun with the 1982 crop — from a very minimal government cost for more than three decades to an absolute No Net Cost program. No other basic commodity has been so singled out — either pay your way or you are out completely."

Burley growers' contribution to the No Net Cost program will be one cent per pound marketed, in this the first year. Flue-cured growers pay three cents a pound into the fund, and this year will contribute an estimated $25 million. However, this will not go far toward covering the estimated $400 million cost of financing, with Stabilization taking approximately 230 to 240 million pounds from this year's crop.

Frank B. Snodgrass, vice president and managing director of the convention host group — the Burley and Dark Fired Export Association — joined Mr. Bond in calling for all segments of the tobacco industry to "solidify and cooperate with the tobacco grower associations in attempting to meet the mandate of a No Net Cost program."

Snodgrass reported on market promotion trips made to Australia and the Far East, also to Europe, the past year. He noted that similar trips are being planned to the Philippines, Singapore, Korea and other countries in that area soon, as well as tobacco trade meetings in Northern Europe and North Africa.

Since last week the Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association has assigned Jeff Noel to the Far East trip, due to Mr. Snodgrass' inability to go. The trip runs from Oct. 24 to Nov. 15. Mr. Noel is Assistant to the President, of the Burley Association.

On the program at Nashville, Noel reported on a market development trip taken last spring to England, Germany, Austria, Hungary and France. He noted the appearance of "quality slippage and higher prices" in U.S. burley exports.

"Short supply has created an artificial market," said Noel, "and forced our German friends and others to seek other markets." But he added: "Any one tobacco market is clearly correlated among all others...and comparisons to U.S. tobacco prices and quality cannot be ignored. As yet, we as farmers cannot forget we are a part of the world market, and in direct competition with world prices and quality standards."

Kirk Wayne, president of Tobacco Associates Inc., said "tight" is the word for today's world tobacco situation — tight for cigarette manufacturers, tight for leaf exporters, and particularly tight for producers." However, he added: "Note that I said tight, not disaster."

Over the past five years, U.S. tobacco held firm at 30 percent of exports to 19 major markets, and 20 percent of consumption.

Kentucky flag flown

The importance of Kentucky tobacco production to the nation's economy was represented October 9 when the Kentucky state flag was flown at the 1982 World Tobacco Auctioneering Championship in Danville, Va.

The Bluegrass State flag, along with flags from 12 other tobacco producing states, will be flown at Auctioneer's Park in Danville's historic warehouse district.

Tobacco provides a total of $1,680 jobs and annual wages of $916,033,000 in Kentucky. Some 480,000,000 pounds of burley tobacco and 29,625,000 pounds of other types of tobacco are grown annually on 232,800 acres in the st
