KU customers' rates reduced, effective January 1

Effective January 1, all retail customers of Kentucky Utilities Company will be paying less for their electric service. This is the second phase of a two-part reduction that lowers the average residential customer's monthly bill by a total of about $1.51.

The new rates reflect the effects of the Federal Tax Reform Act of 1986. Phase one of the reduction became effective last March when the average residential bill went down about 99 cents. Beginning in 1988, the cost goes down an additional 52 cents.

"We know our customers welcome any lowering of the cost of their electric service," commented John T. Newton, president of KU. "Certainly, it pleases us to be able to continue giving reliable service and to provide it at very favorable rates. We're committed to continuing that record."

Since 1984, a residential customer's bill for 750 kilowatt hours of electricity has dropped 12 percent--from $42.88 to $37.67 with the new rates--for a savings of $5.21.

Newton said that for years KU has ranked near the bottom in comparisons of the company's rates with other electric utilities in Kentucky, surrounding states and across the country.

KU serves more than 362,000 customers in communities and rural areas in 77 counties in Western, Central, Northern, and Southeastern Kentucky.
