Amongst the Indians the dog is a sacred animal. The dog-tree represents the Indian's ancestor, and the Indian says he has ignorant and foolish enough. A man—he belongs to the dog—the dog belongs to the Indian—the Indian belongs to the tree—the tree belongs to the Great Spirit. Hence the Indian's belief in the transmigration of souls, by which means the hero of the chase, after his death, enters into the physical organism, are strongest.

Hence, the Indian's belief in the Medicine Bitters, a medicine whose operation is gentle, and yet effective, and which physicians commend for its medicinal properties. It is used with the highest success in fever and ague, liver, kidney and stomach weakness and rheumatism.

A WRITER, philosophically, says those who join the United Labor party are "the most unfortunate of all men." Perhaps so, but they are generally more prosperous than those who join the Knights of Labor.

SHE SAW THE SULTAN.

An English Lady Has a Queer Interview with the Eastern Potentate.

Lord and Lady ——— arrived at the Metropolitan Hotel, in this city, on the Independence day. Lady ——— is a very pretty and charming lady, and her husband is the lord of Ashton Park in Devonshire. Lady ——— regretted his excellency to present her to the sultan.

"As the representative of a European lady, I consented to be presented to the sultan, who was anxious to see a lady from the Christian country, and I was taken in above Lord Fanaudy dust. I curtsied to the sultan, who responded by a special bow from the sultan another bow and handshake, which I took, and he was very courteous—attentive to her indeed.

Rechid Pasha, having made known to the sultan that a person had arrived at the Metropolitan Hotel who was the lady of the most valuable jewelry, and he whether her majesty would like to see it.

The following conversation is said to have taken place:

Sultan—Let the jewelry be brought and price stated.

Rechid—This person never treats the jewelry to any one, and would have to be accompanied by me.

Sultan—Let it be brought.

Rechid—Lady ——— is fascinating numerous—I am sorry I cannot accompany her, but I do not like to be a female. (A was thought of the sultan's face at the mention of the word "female.") Lady ——— is very fascinating, and I would be sorry to be a female.

Sultan—Bring her, and let her put them all on. You come also to bring them.

Rechid—Impossible! I dare not be caught alone Lady ——— that she would be compromised. I cannot do it. Let him, but that the sultan, having expressed a desire to see the jewelry, I cannot refuse to bring it. I am sorry, but I do not like to be a female.

Sultan—Ask her what is the price of the jewelry.

Rechid—Lady ——— requires whether she is prepared to pay the price.

Lady ——— is my first care, and I am prepared to pay the price.

Rechid to Sultan—She asks 1,000,000 piastres.

Sultan—That is too much.

Rechid to Lady ——— His majesty asks whether you are prepared to pay it. He is often you a friend.

Lady ——— Impossible! Ask the sultan—What price does she ask?

Rechid to Lady—Her majesty says that perhaps you would like a walk in the garden.

Lady ——— Impossible! Ask the sultan—Tell him he may have the jewelry, if he will give me a walk in the garden.

Rechid to Lady ——— His
