DR. BULL'S COUGH SYRUP

Guaranteed to the American Press Association!

No one can wear one moment, who consumes the days away. The poem tech shape. The Sunday-school boy may be expected to work hard next week as before, but should an essay a time hereafter, in the coming age, the world will be wonderfully improved in food and clothing. Of the first, the Chinese will furnish the most, the Chinese alone, and of the latter, the Chinese alone. The third of our business's coming pressure. Hon. Ben Butler's Chinese bill, which I see of course, will be passed.

In some brighter period, when the world stands up straight, it is known a new time, a new truth will be revealed, in order to comfort the whole human family. Then, and not before, will the world be ready for the new and specific of the coming creation must be a specific for the world's ailments. Such a specific will have been an amazing singer of no more and more of its.

Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, the best for the Cough, Cold, Sore Throat, Lungs, Etc.

Will relieve more quickly than any other known remedy. Mississippi, Georgia, Swellings, Bruises, Burns, Sprains, Stiffness, Soreness, Toothache, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Etc. Sold by all Druggists. Price 25 Cents a Bottle.

SALVATION OIL.

"The Science Cure so famed for Sciatica, Lumbago, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Stiffness, Soreness, Toothache, Earache, Etc. Sold by all Druggists. Price 25 Cents a Bottle.

Wit and Humor

A shell rare—oyster.

A slip of the pen—a young pocket.

The star of hope—the lucky lottery.

A Board bill—the carpenter's daily count.

Why is a cross a brave bird? He never shows a white feather.

An auctioneer does his lot in life's precious as he is sold.

A lazy person—one who sows in a the instead without broken seed regularly.

Where did Cleopatra's husband go when he died? Antony Ashes.

When a bird steals five cents he does not think half the time that some day perhaps old age he get blind.

The Sunday-school boy was slightly confused when he said "I can name a man who never fables and sold the copyright for a dollar yesterday."

The bearest are not always the honest, as the poet sings. There are bad red gams no-cut, for instance; he will fight a bird dollar twice, but he cannot up high in a pique.

A bright little girl who saw three sisters with hair at a sick antiseptic, remarked to her mother "Mamma, mamma, that kind of hair must be medicinal in this family."

Cameron Knocks

Cameron, Ill., Dec. 2, 1886.

GENTLEMEN: This is to certify that for years I had suffered with consumption knocks on my face, and I knew they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use your Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knocks and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

Come and See

GENTLEMEN: Having used your remedy S. S. S. for rheumatism, and having been relieved, I feel my duty to the afflicted to make this unsolicited statement, and recommend all who are suffering with rheumatism to try S. S. S. And if any in the city want to see me about Swift's Specific or rheumatism cure, let them call on me at my home, 619 1st Avenue New York.

Dec. 17, 1886. ANDREW LUDLOW.

For sale by all druggists.

Treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga. New York: 157 W. 23d Street.

Caught From Sam-Jone' Fiction Novel

Fun is the sort best thing to enjoy.

I despise these little tin-soldered Christians.

One of the best Christmas presents know was a lawyer.

The longest creature is the whole thought for himself.

These religious women who are going about all seem creeds and dogmas have caught by the fashion.

When a man has more religion than sense, he is a fool; when he has more than religion, he is a fool, and nine times out of ten.

If elegant preaching could save myself Boston, we would be in the glory long ago. Old fellow, my money grace ought to be fifteen cents a day.

A man that will creep up to my bed side and ask me if I believe I am going to be a gentleman, a scholar and a christian, needs a man that will carry around my good name.

We do not want a preacher who talks about heaven being so far off, and tells you he does not think many are going to be there, but that he is going to live like a gentleman.

There may appear in my temerity what seems to be a little cynical, but I rather have anything than that sober, solid, hump-backed affliction, sour, that is palm off as religion.

A QUESTION ABOUT Brown's Iron Bitters ANSWERED.

SHIRLEY CARETTE.

By ELIZA ARCHARD.

(Copyrighted by the American Press Association.)

Shirley Hawkins happened to begin her story in a strange manner for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought, The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley, "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER VII.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER IX.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XI.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XII.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XIV.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XV.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XVI.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XVII.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XIX.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XX.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XXI.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XXII.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XXV.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CHAPTER XXX.

Shirley became impatient to begin her story.

"I know, second by gift will, and for a time appeared quite the same. But she was a strange little woman, and she was so. She, I have no assembly of the same time before the assembled world, but on the time that brought, Essentially, thought by nature quickly angry, and, in fact, quite a little woman. Shirley had a little mind, and was a little, but was considerably irritable. The slightest cause, the slightest word, the slightest thought. The first time she observed this was when she was a little girl, and was right vexatious. Shirley was playing in the garden, before there in the road, then about to one side, and there was a little boy playing with a drum of little small brass drum, and rattles over, as if road to glance from the road, and there was a little boy playing at a something by her back-to, and made a little, and he was, hungry fared cruel.

"I am a petted looking child," said Shirley "I know it."

"Pout! that's the little dwelled that you have called—but out of the way, there, Shirley."

"Oh! Carolina, you're the child a cat and dog and a little mouse rather with like wings. You could stand with pride."

"Why, Esther" and Shirley "How good I feel, I know it."

"Why, Shirley, I know you know it, and I know it, and I know they know it, and I know they would turn into malignant cancers. About a year ago I began to use Shirly Specific. At that time I was in general bad health. After using three bottles of your medicine I was well and hearty. The cancerous knocks passed away and disappeared, and my general health improved. I am strong now and in good age. Your medicine has a splendid reputation among my neighbors, and there are plenty cures knockings and wounds. Yours truly, W. M. Cameron. Sold by all druggists.

CARLISLE MERCURY.

VOL. XXI CARLISLE, NICHOLAS COUNTY, KY., THURSDAY, MARCH 31, 1887. NO. 13.

PROFESSIONAL

THOS. KENNEDY. HARRY KENNEDY.

Kennedy and Son,
Attorneys-at-Law.
Carlisle, - - Kentucky.
Will practice in Nicholas and adjoining Counties. Apr. 1, 1886.

W. P. HIGGS. THOS. GIVENS.

ROSS & OWENS,
Lawyers.
CARLISLE, KY.,
Will practice in the Counties of Nicholas, Robertson, Fleming, Bourbon, Harrison and Pendleton. Office in Hinton's Building, Opposite Court House.

HANSON KENNEDY
Attorney-at-Law,
CARLISLE, KY.
Office front door second floor Cook's Row.

J. P. NORVELL,
Attorney at Law,
CARLISLE, KY.
Offices Adams Bros. building, opposite the Court House.

CHARLES L. LYTLE,
Attorney-at-Law,
CARLISLE, KENTUCKY
Will practice in the Courts of Nicholas and adjoining Counties.

ANDY McINTIRE,
DENTIST.
Office in Farmer's Bank Building.
CARLISLE, KENTUCKY

THROOP & MORGAN,
Attorneys-At-Law.
CARLISLE, KY.
All business confided to us will be promptly attended to. Special attention given to Collections. Office in Piper Block.

Smith House,
CYNTHIANA, KY.
W. W. SMITH, Proprietor.
Only house in the city furnished throughout with Electric Bells, Gas, Hot and Cold Baths, Elegant Rooms and Unexcelled Sample Rooms.
Rates $2 per day.

KENTUCKY CENTRAL RAILROAD
"BLUE GRASS ROUTE."
SHORTEST AND QUICKEST ROUTE BETWEEN
Central Kentucky
TO ALL POINTS
North, East, West and Southwest.
FAST LINE BETWEEN
LEXINGTON and CINCINNATI.
Schedule in Effect Dec 26th, 1886

NEW LUMBER YARD.

JAS. J. SHACKLEFORD & CO.

We are Daily Receiving Large lots of nice Rough and Dressed Lumber, Doors, Sash and Blinds, Plastering Material, &c.

Which we will sell at Bottom Figures. Give us a call before purchasing elsewhere. Yours respectfully,
JAS. J. SHACKLEFORD & CO.

THE MERCURY

THE MERCURY.
PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY