Parks Homemakers

By Mrs. Wm. Floyd Williams

Mrs. S. R. Barlow was hostess to the Parks Homemakers Club at her home Thursday, October 6.

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Malcolm MacDuick, our vice president. Mrs. Warner Lowe gave the devotional. The roll call was answered with a "pet peeve." Ten members, and Mrs. Dorsey Lyon Watkins, who joined the club, were present.

The lesson on "Storage" was given by Mrs. Horace Bell and Mrs. Mason Bryant.

After our business meeting and lesson, we drew names for our secret friends, and held our annual auction.

Our November meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Harvey Wagner, November 3, 10 a.m.

4TH ANNUAL SPECIAL

Baby Beef Sale

Friday, Oct. 21

Paris Stockyards

Phone 322 or 781

Sponsored by—

Bourbon County Livestock Association

Object of sale is to sell fat baby beeves and quality feeders. All calves will be sorted and placed in uniform lots as to breed, sex, weight and quality by University of Kentucky Agriculture Extension Animal Husbandman.

Scales open at 6 a.m. Present plans call for starting sale about 4 p.m.

In addition to special baby beef sale, this is also regular sales day for other livestock. In last year's special sale there were about 500 calves and over 1,000 other cattle were sold in regular sale.

A BIG MOMENT IN KENTUCKY POLITICAL HISTORY—Kentucky's Democratic leaders were divided in the recent bitter primary, but they're together now and most of the members of the Campaign Executive Committee, pictured here, will be on the speaking platform or at State Headquarters, Louisville. From left: Speakers Chairman James F. Gordon, 1st District Congressman Noble J. Gregory; Democratic National Committeewoman Mrs. Susan B. Pollard; Campaign Co-Chairmen Robert Humphrey, Joseph J. Leary, 6th District Congressman John Watts; 7th District Congressman Carl D. Perkins; Senator Earle C. Clements; Senator Alben W. Barkley; 2nd District Congressman William H. Natcher; and Former Governor Keen Johnson. Three other Executive Committee members were unable to be present. Former Governor A. O. Stanley couldn't attend because of illness, 4th District Congressman Frank Chelf was in Switzerland while 5th District Congressman Brent Spence had bad fever. Shortly after this picture was taken in Louisville the Executive Committee and Democratic gubernatorial nominee A. B. Chandler discussed campaign plans for the November 8 election.

Moorefield 4-H Club

The Moorefield 4-H club held its regular monthly meeting Oct 5, at Moorefield school. The meeting was called to order by the president. The secretary called the roll and read the minutes of the last meeting.

The song leader led us in several songs. Committees were appointed for the next meeting Mr. Bernie Milas showed film strips of former 4-H members and told of different projects we could take.

A Hallowe'en party was planned for the next meeting. Games were played and refreshments were served by Barbara Willis, Joan Smart and Charles Hardin.—Rosine Letcher reporter.

Treated Legume Seed Yields High Returns

That legume-seed inoculants are likely to give a farmer greater returns for each dollar invested than any other product he buys is the opinion of Dr. J. N. Fergus, agronomist in charge of pasture and forage crops at the University of Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station. The cost is small for the returns, he said, enough inoculant for seed to plant 1 to 5 acres of alfalfa or clover costing about 50 cents, or 25 cents per acre for vetch.

Commercial seed inoculants that can be purchased at these prices contain beneficial live bacteria, which are effective both for increasing yields and for improving the quality of legume crops, he explained. Different strains of bacteria are effective on different classes of legumes. Soybean inoculants, for instance, do not work well on clovers, and the true clover inoculants are not suitable for alfalfa.

The bacteria act by attaching themselves to the roots of leguminous plants where they absorb energy from the plant and in turn, help the plant to obtain nitrogen from the air, which is always present among the soil particles. They do this by "fixing" the nitrogen in a form that makes it available to the plant.

Some strains of bacteria are more effective nitrogen fixers than others, while some are purely parasitic.

"If you are not sure whether it would pay you to use an inoculant on your legume seed," said Dr. Fergus, "a practical test using checked and uninoculated seed on your own fields will soon tell you. When the right bacteria are present, the plants are a richer green and yields are definitely higher."

Legume-seed inoculants can be obtained from seed dealers. Directions should be carefully followed, said Dr. Fergus, with seed planted promptly after it is treated.

UK Laboratory Wins New $25,000 Grant

A grant from the Wright Air Force Aerial Research Laboratory has been awarded a $25,000 research contract to the University of Kentucky Department of Geology for a study of the development of photographic techniques for the recording of intensity and local point sources used in aerial cameras. Air Force scientists will use the instruments developed at UK to measure the efficiency of cameras being considered for aerial reconnaissance photography.

Under the assignment handed the UK engineers, the testing equipment must measure the total aperture time, effective exposure time, and the shutter efficiency. Shutter speeds to be tested will be measured to an accuracy of 1/100,000th of a second.

This grant brings to $243,237.63 the total value of seven research contracts currently being handled by the aeronautical laboratory. The current $25,000 grant is for a period of one year, but Air Force officials have reported that similar renewals may be expected from year to year.
