Corn-on-cob freezing problem

Freezing corn on the cob is less satisfactory than the freezing of almost any other vegetable, according to Mrs. Pearl Haak, specialist in foods at the University of Kentucky. She bases that statement on the number of letters and telephone calls that come to her concerning the problem. The corn has a flavor of the cob, housewives report.

The probable cause is due to the variety of corn grown that has large cobs, Mrs. Haak explained. By the time the corn is blanched long enough to heat through the cobs, the corn is overcooked and loses its delightful flavor. If the cob isn't heated through, enzymes change the flavor of the corn to that of the cob.

Here are Mrs. Haak's recommendations:

Select for freezing perfect ears with small cobs and young tender corn in the thin milk stage. Husk, remove silks, trim and wash. Place ears in boiling water for 7 to 11 minutes, according to size. Use a large amount of water so that boiling resumes quickly after the corn is placed in it. Immediately after the blanching period, place the corn in about the same amount of cold or ice water until the cob is chilled.

To freeze, wrap each ear separately in moisture-vapor-resistant cellophane and cover with stockinette, or pack in bags. Have the quick-freeze temperature at least at zero, or preferably 10 to 15 degrees below zero After freezing store at zero or lower

Weed spray

Research evidence shows that it is better to mix insecticides and weed-killing chemicals and apply them at the same time

For instance, Kentucky farmers so doing would find an insect pest, such as grasshoppers, moving on to fresh fields shortly. The hoppers would migrate quickly because the weed-killer would have destroyed their food supplies The grasshoppers prefer fresh plants.

Simple precautions prevent ptomaine according to health sanitarian Story

Labor day is picnic day for many families, and as N. O. Story, Sanitarian of the Nicholas County Health Department says, "Picnics are wonderful if the food is safe. Food poisoning, however, may result if food is served that has been too long out of refrigeration."

Since some foods spoil more quickly than others, precautions for a safe picnic start in the planning stage. Cream and custard filled pastries and cakes are out—they're good for well weather parties at home, but they can be murder from a picnic basket. Planter cakes and fruits make good desserts—and they're easier to pack.

Salad dressing, unless very tart, can be as troublesome as custards. Salads that have to be mixed with dressing as they're being made, like potato salad, are dangerous picnic fare. Celery, carrot sticks, and whole tomatoes make good substitutes, and like simpler desserts they're easier to pack. But if you want a more conventional salad, keep the dressing separate in a well-sealed jar, and add it at the last minute.

In preparing for the picnic, take perishable foods out of the refrigerator only when you're ready to fix and wrap them, and then put them back in the refrigerator until it is time to leave. In that way, chicken and salad sandwiches—made with meat, cheese, or egg, will still be under normal conditions, be safe to eat food hours later when the gang gets hungry.

If your picnic spot doesn't have a safe water supply, bring water in bottles from home. Milk (of course it's been pasteurized and refrigerated) will be in pre-cooled thermos bottles, and so will your coffee, cream, or perhaps you'll find it more convenient to bring a can of evaporated milk or dried cream. Canned or fresh juices and bottled drinks are also safe beverages. Those who own freezers are especially lucky, for most foods can be prepared ahead of time and frozen. Pack in an insulated box, wrap with several thicknesses of newspaper, and the food will have thawed to eating state in four or five hours

And one last word—if you regardless assistance in preparing the food make sure that Jemima's little helpers" have washed their hands thoroughly. Now all that remains is to enjoy the picnic.

'57 wheat Soil Bank program now available

The Acreage Reserve program now available for participation by farmers for their 1957 winter wheat crop is the second of four such programs authorized for wheat and the other "basic" crops, according to Roy C. Gray, chairman of the Kentucky Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

Winter wheat growers who wish to take part in the 1957 program should call at the County ASC office and sign an agreement. Applications are expected to be available toward the end of August and must be signed by September 21.

The Soil Bank legislation, enacted late this spring, authorizes such a program for basic crops over a 4-year period, that is through 1959. Each Acreage Reserve agreement, however, covers the particular crop for only one year at a time. For 1957, the program is being made available early enough so that most farmers should be able to make their plans before planting.

Chairman Gray explains that the whole purpose of the Soil Bank's wheat Acreage Reserve is to help farmers reduce the acreage of wheat below acreage allotments, thereby reducing excessive supplies of the crop. Land "reserved" under the Acreage Reserve may not be cropped or grazed for the period of the agreement. This reduction in his wheat acreage, the farmer receives a payment to offset the income he would otherwise have received from the diverted acres.

The chairman emphasized that placing wheat in the Acreage Reserve will not reduce future wheat acreage allotments.

Muskie gridiron prospect encouraging as squad preps for opener with Paris

By Bill Woodall

Facing a seven game schedule the Carlisle Musketeer football squad will play host to a Greyhound eleven from Paris Friday, September 7 in the 1956 gridiron opener.

Coached for the second straight year by Ed (Tom Thumb) Wells, a former Morehead Eagle star, the Carlisle squad has the best prospects of the past several years. Barring injuries, the Musketeers should close the season a winning team.

Wells has seven returning letermen to build his squad around. Veterans Gayle Wilson, a senior, and Asbury (Poppy) McGuffy, a junior, will act as the nucleus around which the backfield will be formed. Bobby Henry, a junior, and Stanley Wilson, a freshman, will probably get the nod as quarterback and halfback, respectively.

Last year Gayle Wilson proved a great asset to the Carlisle b
