Congressman

HENRY WATTERSON predicts that 1892 will witness as complete a breakdown of the Republican party as the Whig party met with in 1852, when it only carried Massachusetts.

The Committee of the Whole of the Con. Con. has agreed on the Revenue and Taxation Article. It leaves everything from the realty to the grave—Religious. Even school houses were not spared.

The daily papers announce the formation of an extensive combine trust. If this has a tendency to advance the price of oatmeal it may be that John will be induced to make a Republican of a better class.

The great Carnegie Iron Company, of Pennsylvania, has issued orders for a reduction of ten per cent. in the wages of the 5,000 workmen in the employ. It takes effect February 1. Is the McKinley Tariff Annual in bloom.

The Cincinnati Enquirer had a column of double leaded editorial last Thursday, heartily endorsing Speaker Reed as an honest man, a fair judge, and all that was good and fine. The Hon. Mr. Reed must have bought the space and written the article himself.

State Senator Lewis, of Powhatan, Clevland are counsin. Mr. Cleveland's grandmother was Mehitable Lewis, who was first cousin of the Senator's father. It will be interesting to see if whether the politics of the first Mr. Kleveland will be Mr. Ingalls or Mr. Cleveland the most—Louisville Commercial.

WHEN President Irwin informed that the Warehouse Trust of the Tobacco Growers' Warehouse located in Carlisle, had set the depot for the purpose of buying the farmers tobacco and becoming re-handlers, he tickles the old warehousemen almost to death, but if anyone should intimate that the President had been bought, he would resent such. Understand us, we do not intimate President Irwin has been bought.

The Lexington Leader, the Republican organ says: Have the Democrats noticed how lovingly the Southern Farmer's Alliance leaders hob-nob with the Democrats and how bitterly they are fighting the Republican party on all the issues of the day? It is well for the Republican farmers to consider thoroughly this political alliance and come clear of it, for it is a sinking ship, ran in the interests of the Democratic party.

The Alliance Union of Shelby, Montgomery and other counties has condemned the course of President Irwin. The Montgomery Union announce him as a traitor and deserter and demand that he be hung in effigy. President Irwin has always been a traitor to a certainty, and unless he can give satisfactory reasons this time he ought to be hung, for he will be sent to join Mr. Sharp. A new paper and the Democratic are two dangerous machines in the hands of one man.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

(Lexington Commercial.)

The Legislature was not called to curtail the people had but both in Republican Government, and because they believed the time of Mr. Speaker Reed, and the Republican Congressmen were to think otherwise. The people have and will continue to have faith in their wisdom in their chosen representatives in the General Assembly, and in the idea that representative government is a wholesome thing.

The Convention is attempting to provide for every contingency, and in attempting to do so, it is running through meaner grooves than it ever ought to go. The Convention are laying down for their issues. That the people have faith as much confidence in their Legislature as they have in the Convention, is a proposition, to say the least, so difficult that the people have not confidence in themselves.

The convention should limit the powers of the General Assembly to general legislation authoritatively, but not general legislation, and when it should come to the question of what the people want, the people judges. Many of the delegates seem to be of the opinion that they were called together for the express purpose of abolishing the Legislature. They were called for very different purpose. The Constitution of Kentucky needed to be changed in some particulars, but not radically as it is every article and section.

The delegates, while they are not supposed to do any legislating, are supposed to express every ancient land marked, and it will be credited with purpose, pride in their work, as well as a particular desire to do their duty by Kentucky and to themselves, this being so they will add wisdom if they will yield some of their views to public opinion and leave some powers in the hands of the Legislative branch of the government of Kentucky.

We regret the attack made by President Erwin upon the Tobacco Grower's Association as very ill-advised and uncalled for, and it is difficult to understand how a man who is so thoughtful worthy of being chosen to the head of a great organization could make such a serious error. He encounters that a number of persons had written to him thinking the warehouse now controlled by the Farmer's Alliance is a place great for his interest, and does not justify him in his attack. The managers have never advertised the warehouse as being a Farmer's Alliance undertaking, but as a warehouse for the Tobacco Grower's, and no one knew the contrary, until the attack was made. We expect to establish a Warehouse here, the old Warehousemen should remind Mr. Erwin handsomely for his service, and the tobacco raisers who will have to continue to pay 50 per hogshead, one per centum on sales, lose the ten pound samples and stand the heavy charges for drayage, can thank Mr. Erwin for their loss. The fact remains that Mr. Erwin has been bought by the old Warehousemen, and that the growers have lost the golden transition from the quiet and honest practice of Bowling Green to the loading and sale of every scoundrel in the Ohio Valley. We may have brought in a sudden desire to be loud, and cussed him for the time being to lose his leadership. Whatever may have been the cause of the attack, it will be a long time before the movement to be most most dearly money, he has taken a most unfortunate and one which will cause the Farmer's Alliance people to be better on their guard.

(Courier Journal.)

At last it begins to dawn on the members of the Constitutional Convention that they have succeeded in cut off from their constituents, that they have followed too implicitly the Democratic and Republican leaders, and that the joint and honest protest of Bowling Green to the loading and sale of every scoundrel in the Ohio Valley, may have brought in a sudden desire to be loud, and cussed him for the time being to lose his leadership. Whatever may have been the cause of the attack, it will be a long time before the movement to be most most dearly money, he has taken a most unfortunate and one which will cause the Farmer's Alliance people to be better on their guard.

President Erwin vs. The Tobacco Growers' Warehouse.

In the last issue of "The State Union," the official organ of the Farmer' Alliance, President Erwin makes a serious attack upon the Kentucky Tobacco Growers' Warehouse, and as a consequence some excitement has been and fail to do about injury to such enterprises, and the depletion to sayer.

We do not think it is any one capable time is not progressing to open any warehouse, we have no part in it. Our order has not been consulted about any of our order, and we are in no way responsible for any of its acts."

"We wish to say to our people to have nothing to do with affairs in Bowling Green, but to adhere to the original plan of our order. I feel it my duty as President of the Kentucky Farmer Union to warn our people that this is an infamous form of scab, and further, I instruct the lecturers of our order to speak out on this subject and let the membership know that this house is in no way connected with us. We have no faith in the move whatever."

In a long editorial Mr. Erwin makes a direct attack on the Growers' Warehouse, in which he says: "We wonder if and that the effort is being made to induce a belief that the proposed warehouse is the endorsement of our order, this certainly as such fact exists, and it is just to the members of our order to have it understood that we have no any objections to patronizing a concern which is incorporated under our name, but for the sake of securing patronage of our order, we protest against the use of Alliance Warehouse. We have no "cat's paw" for any one, especially to be used for such purposes as this, it seems the stage of a powerful corporation, or subject being to promote the interests of private individuals. The Tobacco Growers' Warehouse Company may be explained by the consideration of the premises, which for years in the incorporate act of the company, giving the right to change the name of the company, and the right to change the name of the company, and the right to change the name of the company, and
