State to control block grants now

Kentucky will run the Small-Cities Community Development Block Grant Program in the state next year, rather than the federal government, Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. announced last week.

To prepare for the changeover, the state Department of Community and Regional Development is revising the criteria it will use to select projects to be funded.

Usually the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development administers the block grant program in all states. The agency uses its own criteria for deciding which communities get grants. But last year Kentucky and Wisconsin successfully sought participation in a HUD demonstration program designed to judge the effect of letting states pick eligible communities.

For the federal fiscal year starting Oct. 1, Kentucky will assume all other administrative duties as well, including monitoring of grants, the governor said.

"I support the concept of block grants because it reduces the administrative costs and unnecessary red tape that are associated with categorical grants. There is a parallel question such as funding," Brown said. "In order to make the block grants work, adequate funds must be provided."

Small cities' block grants are used to remove slums and blighted areas, improve public services such as water and sewer facilities, and carry out economic development activities. In 1980 Kentucky granted $10.5 million to 18 small cities.

Last year the department used selection criteria similar to those HUD used in other states, but taking into account Kentucky's needs, said Commerce Secretary Bruce Lunsford. This year the department is developing guidelines even more tailored to Kentucky, he added.

To help draft those guidelines the department is soliciting recommendations from several organizations through a policy advisory committee. A draft of the proposed criteria was submitted to the committee Aug. 4. Represented on the panel are these organizations: the Kentucky Municipal League, the Kentucky Association of County Officials, the Kentucky Council of Area Development Districts, the Kentucky Area Development District Directors Association, the Kentucky County Judges Association and the Community Development Directors Association.

After considering suggestions from that group, the department will develop a final draft of the criteria. That task is expected to be completed in early fall, according to department Commissioner Andrew "Skipper" Martin. The state's allocation for the federal fiscal year is not yet known, he added.

Kentucky is blazing a new trail, Martin noted. "Since we already have experience in selecting applicants, we should be able to hit the ground running in administering the program," he said.

MAGICWORD

HOW TO PLAY: Read the list of words. Look at the puzzle. You'll find these words in all directions — horizontally, vertically, diagonally, backwards. Draw a circle around each letter of a word found in the puzzle, then strike it off the list. Circling it will show a letter has been used but will leave it visible should it also form part of another word. Find the big words first. When letters of all listed words are circled, you'll have the given number of letters left over. They'll spell out your MAGICWORD.

WHO WAS THAT LADY?

Born in 1770 in Philadelphia, this Quaker woman, at 25, founded the first charity in the country established by women. In 1793, the yellow fever epidemic of Philadelphia had left thousands dead, and many more impoverished and miserable. Unable to rest until she had worked to help her unfortunate neighbors, this woman formed a "Friendly Circle" of 23 other women which later became "The Female Society for the Relief and Employment of the Poor." Who was that lady? — Ann Parish
