USDA proposes change in beef and cattle grade standards

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has announced a proposal to revise the official U.S. standards for grades of carcass beef slaughter cattle. Five public hearings have been scheduled on the proposal.

John Ford, deputy assistant secretary of agriculture for marketing and inspection services, said last week that the proposed changes should allow leaner beef to qualify for Prime and Choice grades but not significantly lower the palatability of either grade. Beef in the Good grade would be leaner with lowered palatability.

The public hearings will be held during February in Utah, Georgia, Washington, D.C., Iowa and Texas.

The proposal is a result of latest research findings and of petitions for change that USDA has received in recent months, Ford said.

Ford said USDA officials have reviewed all available research data and information to evaluate the effectiveness of the present beef standards and to explore possible alternatives. The review, he said, indicated that some modifications of the beef grade standards may be needed.

USDA's proposal provides:

— That the minimum marbeling requirements of the Prime, Choice and Good grades in "A maturity" — cattle up to approximately 30 months of age — would be reduced to "minimum moderate," "typical slight" and "minimum traces," respectively;

— That all young beef not meeting minimum requirements for the Good grade would be graded Utility.

— That the Standard grade would be eliminated;

— That the rate of increase in marbling requirements in "B maturity" (cattle about 30 to 42 months of age) would be doubled; that the marbling to maturity relationship be increased from 1:1 to 2:1;

— That quality grade requirements for bullock beef also would be changed so they would still be the same as those for steer, heifer and cow beef in "A maturity." Bullock beef would still be identified for class.

— That the related standards for grades of slaughter cattle would be changed to reflect changes made for grades of carcass beef; and,

— That no changes would be made in yield grade standards.

Marbling is the amount of fat dispersed through a piece of meat and is one of the factors considered to contribute to the tenderness, juiciness and flavor of beef, Ford said.

USDA invites either oral or written comments on the proposal and data to support the comments, Ford said.

Written comments should be submitted by March 31 to the Livestock, Meat, Grain and Seed Division, AMS 2M-Annex, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.
