THURSDAY, MAY 29, 1884.

THE Republican State Convention endorsed the new Constitution, but declined to write a word for it.

DR. JOHN H. PRAYER is announced as a candidate for re-election to the House of Representatives from Boone.

THE name of John S. Carlisle is the only one freely used in connection with the Democratic nomination for the Presidency.

OUR Republican contemporary, in its full proceeding of their State Convention, on our first page, calls the People's Party platform will be found on our fourth page.

THE Republican Convention at Lexington, refused by a vote of 275 to 225, to place a colored man on the Republican State ticket. It also did not want his ticket headed with either Buckner or Bruce.

THE result of the Republican Convention at Lexington last week, is that the Republican party in Kentucky is more divided into factions than ever. Bradley was the "boss," and his friends of those who dared to differ with him bolted in the Convention.

OUR columns contain the state tickets of four parties, the Democratic, Republican, Prohibitionists and Greenbackers. We do not endorse any one of the parties in a convention and nominate one to suit you. Figure a great year for politics and if you don't collect your share of the honors you can console yourself with the reflection that you have done your own duty.

HON. E. H. HUNT is a candidate for Representative from Fleming County in the Kentucky Legislature. Mr. Hunt has had our term of service in the House, and it would be to his credit to send him there again. Mr. Hunt does not pose as a politician but is a worked and hewer in every the best let Fleming could have represented her under well do well.

EXETER has had organized two saw mills, and crops, buildings and houses have been erected, and a fine lot of land, Kansas of general business. Exeter is growing and prospering. Her citizens are a class of men that State citizens, and by hard for the welfare of Fleming.—Flemingsburg Gazette.

THE Democrats of Kentucky are not looking for any place on the ticket but to carry the State, and the interest and Kentucky Democrats are working in harmony to that end. THE SILVER QUESTION.

The Carlisle Mercury not with too much meaning modesty admits that while not smart enough to say which side of the silver question is best for the country, that "Some people who don't say which side they are on, are smart enough to get off of a railroad track in the lightning express of life."

Doesn't the last sentence fairly comprehend the situation? We after all, not the men who know the business of the most wealthy and intelligent people, who is right. Individuals may and do make often one mistake, but the other judgment of the people is right.

The people—and the people is but another name for the Democratic party—are in favor of the free coinage of silver as recorded through the votes of the Democratic party in Congress, and the determination of Democratic pulsing in the platform of the Kentucky Democracy. Assumed in the name of tariff reform, as in recognizing the demand of the people for free silver—what man is there great enough to be allowed to set himself above the demand of the Democratic party and such a demand it is more mentioned?

There's no such man.

Not is there change from the one and from set earth of Democrat Kentucky, that great day under a cloud of Jefferson, he no, would have and his own personal lips, and pure and sacrifice found to another. And ing today, as upon a previous occasion, that, when the home and the Blood Longmore joined into the Great Democratic Party, and the Democrat stamped one of the most modestly hearted of all its superb public jewels, Appleton.

Well, it is gone. Note is a bequeathed to us, but not a sentiment, a sacrifice in, who shall fill it? Shall it be another? Shall it be a man who will not be good angel in life, and who, with more than a modest reserve, turned from, though his long life, with the confidence of another world? Shall we have a man who will do as you do? Answer—each all who—Appleton, Appleton, Appleton. The National Democrat will Appleton, Appleton, Appleton! Who will? Appleton, Appleton, Appleton! Who will? Appleton, Appleton, Appleton! Who will?
