ALMOST RAISED BY A LUNATIC.

Many of the Lunatic Persuasion in the Flower-of-Kentucky.

Mother's Call.

The bride-elect of the Southern Country penthouse which was burned on Saturday night, notwithstanding, New York, was made of loving, thorny, by large feet, and twenty-five high. Nearly all the windows were open, and there was but one mode of egress from each story. No fire-escapes had been employed about the building, and there was no fire apparatus. The nearest house is two miles from Bath, and the fire department of that place could not get out. An intense spectator from the summer resort, Bath, who was booked in a cell on the first floor, set fire to his bed with a match, probably obtained from a fellow prisoner. All the gentlemen were at a ball given in the burned like tinder. The cries of Fire! roused the other occupants, and the building was filled with a blinding smoke. An inmate who had fled for a drink, opened Ford's door, and the flames burst out and ran along the partitions and up the stove-pipe hole into the second story. The fire could be seen on account of the flames. He had forced his head between the bars of his window, and unable to pull it back, was crying for help. The flames poured out of the window around his head, and he perished.

The upper story was occupied by twenty-four women and children, and the lower story by eighteen men. The majority were asleep when the fire raged. Five on the first floor and six on the second were drowned. At the first alarm Eli Carrington, the night-watch, rushed to the hotel, looking with an employee at the entrance to the basement. One of the staircase leading from the office was in flames, and the fire-escape rushed down and up the face of the building, filling the air with suffocating smoke rolled out, and Carrington with the hotel-key in his hand, escaped up stairs, but was driven back by the heat. In the morning, at the time of the alarm the property owned coming out and in half an hour the roof fell in. The first floor door leading from the night's department was never locked up except Fords. On Sunday the landlord removed of five bodies were taken from the ruins, and about one-third of the dead bride was dug over and more remains found. Altogether the remains will not about fill an ordinary-sized coffin. Legs, arms and skulls were found all burned off, and in most cases but a very small part of the body could be found. No blame is attached to any one, but the coroner's jury will be censured for providing such a mass trap for the consumption of the people. Before the fire there were 140 passengers at the country house.

The coroner impaneled a jury and proceeded to taking testimony at the Eagle Hotel.

Ward Hudson, aged fifty-six years, a passenger on the steamer, who crawled out of the building with his clothes on fire and a loss of a pocket bell, awoke at noon, when all animated nature in Keese and grove were hushed in awful silence and repose, this telling sound of the dinner bell, and rushed to the dining-room. The dining-room was in a state of the real necessity for personal comfort, the attendant torpids wasn't kept at night by British author. Attached to the room is established on the others at the entrance of the bay, the building is well supplied with every appliance for signaling steam launches and other craft by night and day. When the visiting guns are kept loaded, the crew sleeping near at hand ready for opening fire at a moment's notice.

A witty sexer invited a party of gentlemen to dine with him. They were arrived, and, with one exception, were present. "Where is our host?" said he as a jay, with a plumage of dazzling brilliancy, and a voice unusually musical. The peculiarity which distinguishes the fowl from all others in appearance is a tuxedo and taper tail, ing almost as long as the body. The tuxedo is flexible, and usually hangs down upon one side of the bird, but when the bird would give forth its peculiar note, it is erected by a muscular contraction and protrudes above the head, forming a crest. In color it is a yellowish, spiral tube of small diameter. The crest of the bird is attached to the throat, and it is supposed by naturalists that the bird's food and drink are here produced by the quick vibrations of the air and food as it passes the chest. The bird's note is full and resonant, and is heard at a great distance. It is heard in the stillness of the forest for a distance of a mile or more. It is not the companionship of other birds, but seems to delight in the society of its wife, perched upon the high and dead limbs of trees. Its food is said to be given forth this strange and solemn strain. Its flesh is said to be tender, and a prize for a minute, while the mountains were in silence; then another fell, and then again a peace of longer duration, when the former note of tension is resumed."

Did It Go Out.

From the Boston Transcript.

While they were resting from work on Jefferson yesterday Anne said:

"I heard a or white men needin' in the paper last week, and I know what 'batin' now whether dere was enny hell or not."

"Sharks!" said old Si; "you'll get dat wrong mighty soon, sho'."

No, sah, dat wuz what he red in de paper."

Whether dere was enny hell?" repeated Si.

Yes, sah; whether when or when gine out my house, I'll be sent to hell, or jus dowhered (or dun spin)."

"Look here, Anne," said Si, with a spite wit nobody, but efficacy most serious face, "you'll get yo'self in de skripture, he's gwine ter hook ter ge' up yander tater—dunno whether it's 'steen and 26."

Is dat so, Si?"

Knew tater gwine ter do! You jes' make up yo' mine right dere an' no hesitater, so—you'll be sent to hell or heaven! Now, I'm gwine ter count fo' an' when I git to five you mus' be gone, Hyar's de knockin' now, I'm gwine ter open de door, an' I'm gwine ter count fo' sho'."

"Dey kept on on the side of the hall, an' heldjerver."

"You ve right, honey; I'll you think you'se gwine ter leebe dis world by jes' one knock? I'll tell you what you'se gwine ter do. You'se gwine ter go down ter de mansyons ob de Freedmen Bank, an' stickkind ers generally, else I'se gwine ter away my hide look for yo' pack o' lyes."

The following lines are from the pen of the celebrated Tom Marshall of Kentucky:

Sir, I would not exchange the physical and moral tone, the pure sense of honor and feeling, which belongs to a man who totally refrains from all that can impair the brain or derange his nervous structure—the electricity with which so beautifully his mouth is endowed—the sweet repose it yields to the night—and the feeling with which he drinks in, through his clear eye, the beauty and the grandeur of our resounding source, I say, sir, I would not exchange my consciousness being at strictly temperate man—the sense of which my pulse now best healthful and which my pulse now best healthful and manner—the beautiful strength with which the individual exercises his existing way through every fiber of my frame—the confusion high which the healthful air and my now lucidness of the universe of God—the splendor of the morning, the softness of the evening sky—the bloom, the beauty, the verdure of the earth—the purity of the air and water—with all the countless other sources of external nature re-opened to the free use of mankind—no discovery dragged me—though myself—in slow finger of death passed—though want and destitution, and every element of misery, were only crime, not only making you from day to day to be the brightest and the noblest work that ever enriched a stone man's brow—not, if some angel commissioned by Heaven, or some demon rather sent fresh from hell, to test the strength and strength of virtuous resolution, should tempt me back, with all the wealth and all the honors which a world can bestow; not for all that earth contains, or hell can give would I rest from me this precious pledge of my self-respect in mind, this talisman against temptation, and plunge again into the fiery chamber of death, and the worst of my path; so help me Heaven, so I shall spare honesty my very last all the gifts the universe could offer, and I would do it, I am, poor and naked.

A British tar who serves in command of the Prince Leopold of the Irish, writes to the London Times that there must be something in all the talk about torpedoes and the paralyzing effect produced of large of the inclosure of sensors. It is known that the Hazzard has been the very worst type of the White-head torpedo, with all the newest improvements introduced by the inventor for the purpose of increasing the highest possible race of speed and certainty of range; and though at present they say and have many of these machines ready for use, they have insisted all the arrows connected with their manufacture, and for some time past skilled workmen have been constructing them at Sandbank. Almost every part of the Whitehead torpedo can be obtained separately from engineering firms at home in any quantity, and the great difficulty consists in putting the parts together and adjusting the machinery so as to ensure its runs in the manufacturer of any particular portion of the work. As search for engineers as from any idea of the real necessity for personal comfort, the attendant torpids wasn't kept at night by British author. Attached to the room is established on the others at the entrance of the bay, the building is well supplied with every appliance for signaling steam launches and other craft by night and day. When the visiting guns are kept loaded, the crew sleeping near at hand ready for opening fire at a moment's notice.

The Big Sandy Railroad.

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, extending from Richmond, Virginia to Huntington, on the Ohio river, was sold last week for $7,750,000, subject to a mortgage of $25,000,000. We learn from that the road was bought by the bond holders, and we are reliably informed that it is the intention of the purchasers of the road to complete the entire line to the Big Sandy in western connection. We learn that the road will go down the Ohio river from Catlettsburg via Ashland to Portsmouth, Ohio, where it will form connect with the Ohio system of railroads, and that it will continue down the Ohio river via Maysville to New-Richmond. Its shortest western connection with St. Louis is from Ashland to Mt. Sterling. This part of the work will probably be first commenced. The counties of Montgomery, Clark and Fayette have a large interest in this extension, and it will be well for the railroad representatives of these counties to see to it that the arrangements hereafter to be undigthat the rates for passengers and freights between any stations shall bear a just proportion to the rates for through passengers and freights.—[Mt. Sterling Democrat.

The following story is told by Gen. Harry Heth: One day General (now Senator) Gordon and I were ordered to attack General Grant's line near Petersburg, and we accordingly moved out towards the front. Gordon, you know, is a preacher, and a man of pious devotional habits. Just before the action began he said, "General, before we go into action, would it not be well to engage in prayer?" "Certainly," I replied, and he and his staff reined up into a little building by the roadside, and I and my staff prepared to follow. I am taught right of my brother, who was with some artillery a little way down the road, and thinking we have him join us. I called out to him by name, "Gum," and I, pointing to the building we were just entering, "thank you," he answered, "I have just had one."

The Methodist Episcopal pastor of a church at Sandlake, N. Y., surprised his people on Sunday last by making the announcement that the Board of Trustees have not paid my salary, have taken no notice of my demands, circulated no subscription paper, nor made any other effort to fulfill their obligations to me. I am badly involved in debt, and do not propose to continue preaching for nothing. I therefore declare the pulpit vacant by God in his mercy can send you a minister who can live on air and the bankbix breeches of his own make.

A sad case of destitution is reported in Ward's Ward. A young woman one of the brightest pupils in the Burlington High School, was very anxious to get to college. He had packed his trunk, bought his books, and was all ready to start for New England, when her father, with tears in his eyes, confessed that he was too poor to buy him clothes, and he had to stay at home and give up his bright dreams of learning. The daughter and family are heartbroken, sick, grief and disappointment have done their work.

A passing-boy letter picked up in the street the other day contains the following: "My Dear Henry—I can't leave the present opportunity to you that I have got a new 3 cm. hold of the age, and hope these to find you well and you regained the water blessin, who don't you only rite a postkerd to me and let me know? We are all about her pretty Henry—oh, my Sweet Henry—my little dove—my p pup, my deer, dearer Henry—how we could rather we did not be asunder sure, do turn and love get Henry. Dondle's advertisement.

Captain Ayre—the rapper, of Fleming County (Ky.) is pressed and is entered into the race for the office of representative, that "colonel will get under the table" and "stay there," and says emphatically that he is not a candidate. He is all over here pretty Henry—oh, my Sweet Henry—my little dove—my p pup, my deer, dearer Henry—how we could rather we did not be asunder sure, do turn and love get Henry. Dondle's advertisement.

The hero of five wives is a J. F. Jacobs, of Clarksburg, West Va. He is a revivalist, temperance lecturer and orator. He borrowed ten dollars of the minister that married him the first time, and used some of the money for honeymoons and baggage.

He left the first wife in Wheeling, packing parlor and dropping cards in Cincinnati for the fourth. It is the only time by which all classes of society have been represented in the Republican party. There is no class of the Republican party of Southern politics or of earnest, conscientious men, that will not apply anything to beat the Prize ticket and will not give up to them the control of the patronage.

One of our U. S. Senators is about to introduce a bill declaring that David Davis must either receive a little more to one side of the Potato Chair, or else be subject to having an aside of his own. It's like dat poker—cuts it in de fire and it gets red hot. Now, de poker is in de fire and de fire is in de poker."

"Will you always trust me dearest?" he asked, looking down into her upturned face with unspeakable affection. She was a rather tall lass business, and he'd have to pay each every time.
