MARKETING WORLD'S GREATEST PROBLEM.

WE ARE LONG ON PRODUCTION, SHORT ON DISTRIBUTION.

By Peter Radford
Lecturer, Columbia University.

The economic distribution of farm products is today the world's greatest problem and the way, while it has brought its hardships, has clearly indicated the importance of distribution as a factor in American activities and purposes to give the farmers the cooperation of the government and the business men the result of their marketing problem.

This result will, in a measure, compensate for our war losses, for the business interests and government have been in the main assisting all concerned in the production side of agriculture. While the department of agriculture has been dumping tons of literature on the farmer telling him how to produce, the farmer has been dumping tons of products in the market's garbage can for want of a market.

The World Will Never Starve.

At no time since Adam and Eve were driven from the Garden of Eden have the inhabitants of this world suffered from lack of production, but some people have gone hungry from the fault of creation to this good hour for the lack of proper distribution. Slight variations in production have thrown a change in diet and one half of the people have felt the pinch of want, while the remainder, but the world as a whole has ever been a land of plenty. We have been less concerned of the tillable land of the earth's surface under cultivation, and we not only have this surplus area to draw on but it is safe to estimate that in case of fire, necessity one-half the earth's population would at the present time knock their living out of the trees in the forest, gather in from wild vines and draw it from streams. No one should become alarmed, the world never starves.

The economist has always feared that the producer would not supply him and his fright has found expression on the statistic books of our states and nations and the farmer has been urged to produce recklessly and without reference to a market, and regardless of the demands of the consumer.

Back to the Soil.

The city people have been urging each other to write back to the farm, but very few of them have moved. We welcome our city cousins back to the soil and this earth's surface contains 14,000,000,000 idle acres of tillable land where they can make a living by shaking the earth with a forked stick, but we do not need them so far as increasing production is concerned; we now have all the producers we can use. The city man has very erroneous ideas of agricultural conditions. The commonly accepted theory that we are short on production is erroneous. Our annual increase in production far exceeds that of our increase in population.

The World as a Farm.

Taking the world as one big farm we find two billion acres of land in cultivation, for this amount there is approximately 750,000,000 acres on the western hemisphere, 1,250,000,000 acres on the eastern hemisphere, in cultivation. This estimate, of course, does not include grazing lands, forests, etc., where large quantities of meat are produced.

The world's annual crop approximates fifteen billion bushels of cereals (thirteen billion pounds of five and sixty-five million tons of cotton). The average bushels per acre for the past five years, compared with the previous five years, is as follows:

	Past Five Years.	Previous Decade.
Crops—
Corn (Bu.)	2,924,174,000	2,805,651,000
Wheat (Bu.)	3,552,769,000	3,257,356,000
Oats (Bu.)	4,320,917,000	3,865,011,000
Barley (Bu.)	19,963,000	17,541,000
Cotton (Bales)	14,000,000	13,000,000

This table shows a marked increase in every item, in every production of 15 per cent during the past decade, compared with the previous five years, while the world's population shows an increase of only three per cent.

This gain in production far exceeds that of our increase in population, and it is safe to estimate that the farmer can easily increase production 25 per cent if a remunerative market can be found for the products. In textile fibres the world shows an increase during the past half decade in production of 15 per cent against a population increase of three per cent.

The people of this nation should address themselves to the subject of improved facilities for distribution.

Joints Stiff From Rheumatism! Hot Springs Failed To Cure, Andes Medicine Does The Work

Montgomery, Ala., June 10, 1914.—Hot Springs, Arkansas, has a world-wide reputation as the mecca for the cure of all forms of rheumatism. Invalids are carried there on stretchers, in rolling chairs. Every train brings some who are drawn and joints have become stiff, and they come to bathe in the health-giving waters, in the phlegm, if you feel restored to their normal health and vigor, that what they have go to be found there, all seeking the fountain of youth and life, mainspring of all good and great things.

However, these health-giving waters with their wonderful fame by its curative powers, some times fail to give the sufferers any relief whatever. This is proven from the statement of Mr. J. Dal Benerdine, living on the corner of Mildred and Moore streets. He has been a sufferer from rheumatism of the very worst form for the past twelve years. His ankles were so perfectly stiff and he dragged his feet along, and the pains during the damp, cloudy weather were intense.

He visited Hot Springs with hopes of finding relief from this trouble, but it failed to give back the use of the ankles. Mr. Rosser was called at the Andes sales room yesterday to make purchase of more of the Great Medicine. He said: "Your remedies have done me more good than my trip to Hot Springs. Look how I can bend my ankles. It is the best use I have had of them in twelve years, and I expect to continue the use of the Medicines as I believe I will be entirely cured." Rheumatism is caused from kidney trouble. Andes Great Prescription acts on the kidneys, removes all uric acid from the blood and cures permanent. The Great Oil is used externally. If the directions are followed these two wonderful remedies will cure perfectly stiff and he dragged along, cloudy weather

THE CARLISLE MERCURY

ESTABLISHED 1867--OLDEST NEWSPAPER IN NICHOLAS COUNTY

VOL. L--ALL HOME PRINT CARLISLE, NICHOLAS COUNTY, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, JAN. 21, 1915 FOUR PAGES--NO 3

COMMENT

Kentucky solutation: "Good morning; are you running for Governor?"

Paris proverb: A camel can go eight days without a drink, but who t'ell wants to be a camel.

Start that good story. "The Call Of The Cumberlands," before you put this paper down. The opening chapters are printed in this issue.

If might be said in Shakespearian paraphrase of the passing of Blease as he crossed the Palmetto state, that "nothing in his governorship became him as the leaving of it."

Wet and dry spells follow each other with such amazing rapidity in the fair capital of Bourbon, as to make any self-respecting prognosticator turn green with envy.

The J. B. Williams Company, manufacturers of William's Shaving Soap and other well known toilet articles, says:

"For crazin purposes and for blistered and sunburned noses we never papers undoubtedly are superior to advertising mediums."

Since Carlisle has risen to the dignity of a "flag station," she wants everybody to "follow the flag." (Flemingsburg Times-Democrat.

And nearly everybody does. For nearly everybody on North bound trains gets off at Carlisle. That is, unless they are sleeping or bound for Maysville.

In renewing his subscription on January 15, Mr. J. T. Parker told us that this was the first time in twenty years he had had his subscription run out. And he has only gone over two weeks at that time. If all subscribers were as prompt as Mr. Parker, running a county newspaper would be a much more lucrative occupation. See if some of you can't get up into his class.

A Grant county farmer burned up his four thousand pounds of tobacco last week, claiming "the Lord told him to do it." He claims he will burn his half interest in another crop of six thousand pounds as soon as it is stripped. If this man could be turned loose in the Burley Belt with enough inflammable material, the need for construction of a "cut out" would soon be obviated.

A farmer writing to the Cynthiana Log Cabin suggests that the tobacco growers of the state petition the Secretary of Agriculture to place a foot and mouth quarantine against tobacco; close all the warehouses, and let the Government manufacture the tobacco. The writer says the mouths of the growers are sore and wanting to eat what they expected to get and didn't, and their feet are sore for, lack of shoes.

The very best weekly newspaper in Kentucky, namely, The Cynthiana Democrat, speaks most kindly of us as follows:

"The CARLISLE MERCURY is fifty years old. For many years it was owned and edited by the late Green R. Keller and was recognized as one of the leading weekly papers of Kentucky. It is now under the control of Mr. Warren Fisher, who is making it a bright, newsy and entertaining sheet, worthy of its best traditions and a credit to Nicholas county.

Down at Hickman, Ky., an old drake belonging to Mrs. George Campbell, wandered over and made himself at home in the yard of a neighbor, Mrs. Lottie Webb. As the state of his drakeship were frequent, and he at no time hesitated to eat every thing in sight, Mrs. Webb tied a stick in his bill and sent him home. Whereupon Mrs. Campbell's drake, and handicapped in the partaking of food." She got one cent and costs.

Judge L. P. Fryer announces in this issue that he will be found the absentee of Judge L. P. Fryer, as a candidate for re-election for Circuit Judge of the Eighteenth Judicial District, subject to the action of the Democratic party at the August Primary.

During his term as Circuit Judge in this district, Judge Fryer's rulings have been fair and impartial, and he has gained the respect and confidence of the people, not only in this community, but throughout the district.

Mrs. Anson Squires Taken Ill In Florida

Friends here will regret to hear that Mrs. J. Anson Squires who has been at Green Cove, Florida, for several weeks is seriously ill with mastoiditis.

Mrs. Squires' mother left París last week for Green Cove and will bring her daughter to Cincinnati, where she will undergo an operation. She has been a sufferer from mastoid trouble for some time, suffering recurrent attacks, and was taken ill shortly after going to Florida.

Hon. A. O. Stanley Announces For Governor

In a card issued from Washington Monday morning, Hon. A. O. Stanley announces that he will be a candidate for Governor of Kentucky next August.

He pledges himself to rid the State Board of Valuation and Assessment of political influences, and states that no ring now in control and no future ring shall control and be powerful at the capital, if he is elected.

He claims that the question of taxation in office will be definitely settled in the August Primary; that the question of whether or not a corporation and officials shall permeate themselves in office will shortly decide itself.

He claims that it is the intention of Gen. Percy Haly either to nominate himself or some fit man for Governor, and that he will fight to prevent any division of sentiment, by any officeholding trust, if he becomes Governor.

He states that he stands for the County Unit Law as it now exists, and will do all in his power, if elected, to see that it is enforced.

Lexington Insurance Man Meets Horrible Death

E. H. Alexander, widely known accident insurance man, of Lexington, was killed by a C. & O. freight train last Friday at Lexington, while attempting to cross the tracts in front of the oncoming train in his automobile. Mr. Andrew Mitchell, who was in the automobile with Mr. Alexander, jumped from the car, and was not injured. It is said that Mr. Alexander killed his engine as the car reached the tracks at the Rose street crossing, and instead of leaving the machine attempting to start it again.

The funeral services were held at Cynthiana, Ohio, his former home. His wife was in California at the time of his death.

Mr. Alexander left an estate valued at $25,000. His advertising slogan in connection with his insurance business, "See Alexander Before You Slip," was at one time, several years ago, on every one's tongue in Lexington.

Court Of Appeals Decision Permits Saloons To Open

By decision of the Court of Appeals in the local option contest filed by the wets at Shelbyville, the saloons at that place, Paris, Maysville and Mt. Sterling re-opened their doors last week, after being closed the greater part of the week.

The Court of Appeals held that the county judge should not have filed the certificate of election, and such certificate was of no legal effect, inasmuch as contest and appeal had already been properly taken, thereby suspending the effect of the election. The Court further said:

"The uniform ruling has become settled, and was, of course, well known to the legislature of 1914, when it enacted the amendment of that year. If it had intended to change the effect of the law in this respect so as to make the election effective, notwithstanding the appeal, it would doubtless have so provided in so do it, but it was to be expected that it would be done in express terms. A few lines, providing that the service of the contest notice shall not prevent the recording of the certificate or that it shall not be effective pending the expiration of 60 days after the filing of the certificate, not withstanding contest, appeal and supersedeas, would have been sufficient."

Maysville and Mt. Sterling papers claim that the saloons in those places were in a position to keep open for at least a year. New licenses for a year have already been granted the Maysville salooniists.

Aged Millionaire Dies At Home In California

L. V. Harkness, aged 64, millionaire, and early associate of John D. Rockefeller in the oil business, died Sunday on the ranch of his son-in-law in California. His death was due to infirmities incident to his age. The body was sent to New York for burial.

Mr. Harkness was the owner of Walnut Hall farm on the Newtown pike near Lexington, a tract consisting of 5,500 acres in Fayette and Scott counties. The farm has been, since he purchased it twenty years ago, one of the show places of the state.

Mr. Harkness was a devotee of the trotting horse, and was the owner of the famous sire, Moko, Walnut Hall, Marinoo and San Francisco.

Cooper Addressed Many Farmers In Lexington

Said European War Will Not Affect The Distribution Of Tanlac

Thousands of farmers, from Fayette and adjoining counties, heard L. T. Cooper, the great philanthropist, on the court house square in Lexington recently. Cooper gave one of his famous lectures on health and hygiene, in connection with an interesting demonstration of the merits of Tanlac, the remarkable medicine he is introducing to the American people.

Several score of these same farmers took part in the agricultural exposition conducted by Cooper at his own personal expense in Lexington. Many of the displays made at the exhibit seen at the county fairs, and have attracted widespread attention throughout Kentucky.

In speaking of Tanlac and the remarkable mission this great medicine is fulfilling, Cooper said, in addressing the crowd:

"Tanlac, gentlemen, is not a common patent medicine. Tanlac is a proprietary medicine—the kind of medicine recently spoken of by Hon. Oscar Underwood, the Democratic leader of the House of Representatives in our national Congress at Washington, D. C. You will know that Mr. Underwood was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president and that he is one of great ability and integrity. He is a native Kentuckian, too.

"Realizing what a real handicap it would bring to the thousands of American people who daily use Tanlac and similar proprietary medicines, should these preparations be included among the popular commodities upon which a special war revenue tax was placed, Congressman Underwood, with characteristic safeguard of the people's rights, placed himself on record as unalterably opposed to anything that would increase the price of proprietary medicines, or which would tend to deprive the working man of his best friend.

"The result was that Tanlac and similar proprietary medicines were stricken off the war revenue bill. Thus it is, gentlemen, that the thousands of sufferers in this country are enabled to continue to get well and stay well within reach of the most modest income."

Here Cooper, holding the attention of the great assemblage, explained how Tanlac had remedied the symptom of stomach, liver and kidney trouble.

"Most of the so-called stomach, liver and kidney troubles, as I have noted man, "are due almost entirely to the fact that the lining of the pit of the stomach, side and stomach, has become so inflammatory, lost ambition, depressed, full of spots of susceptibility to coughs and colds, are common symptoms of a miserable condition from which so many suffer.

"Tanlac has proved hundreds of testimonials from Lexington people as convincing as any in the genuine merits of Tanlac."

The Mule

The mule is a funny sight
He's made of ears and dynamite.
His best is full of bricks and Tornadoes, battering rams and springs.
He's fat as any poisoned pup;
It's just his meanness swells him up;
He's forever scheming round to do
The things you most don't want to do.

The mule he lives on anything;
He's got a lovely voice to sing;
He can't be hurt by a fall or blow;
It sounds like buzz saws out of row.

He stands around with sleepy eye
Not looks as if he'd like to die,
But when there's any dying done,
It aint the mule, I'll bet a bun.

Folks don't treat mules with respect.
They say they aint got intellect;
But he's as bad, but if I can've one
I'd give a Hessian on the fall,
I'd take the mule and let the Hun
Do don't look loaded; but he is.

Rural School News

All of last week, except Monday, which was county court day, was open visiting schools. The first one visited last week was Pleasant Valley, taught by Mrs. Kimbrough Hamilton. This is her second term there. She has a splendid school, excellent order, no cross grading, and doing good work. Twenty-seven children were present that day. Mrs. Hamilton has 45 eighth grade teachers and goes by the Daily University Program. They have a very attractive schoolroom with floor organ, large, glass front bookcase, wall clock, chandelier, beautiful hanging lamp, papered walls and a material abundance. This was the first school in the county to buy an organ, twelve years ago when your county superintendent taught her first of four terms there. The ocean has been well taken care of and is in splendid condition although the law allows it to stand 30 days.

Next day we visited Lower Blue Lick school, taught by Mrs. Gray Stage. There was splendid attendance there considering the terrible river road so many of the children have to travel. Twenty-five were present. The school was well graded and seemed to be doing good work. Mrs Stage has only six grades and no eighth grade, no cross grading, and was following the Daily Program and Course of Study. She taught there three years ago.

Next school visited was Ellisville, taught by Miss Stella Wasson. She is beginning her second term at this school and certainly has a full attendance for this season of the year, as there were thirty-six present that day and she had had forty the two days before. Mrs. Wasson has four in the eighth grade, the largest eighth grade in one room school in the county. She has no third or fifth grade. Miss Wasson certainly has good order and system. They were taking examination that day. This school, also, has an organ, glass front bookcase, a chandelier, and many other features to make it home. Fine.

The next school visited last week was Grove Creek, taught by Miss Sallie Lawson. Here we found a buzz of children and a large number of them thirty six with an average attendance of 34 for the last four weeks. Miss Lawson has her room neat, clean and attractive with some good maps and pictures. Such curtains were at the windows. Miss Lawson has seven grades but no eighth grade.

We finished the week by visiting the three schools at Myers. Friday attending the spelling match, joe and randy mae that evening. We first visited the primary, taught by Mrs. Mae Hughes, who was elected to CHAPTER I.

Close to the settled backbone of the mountains, deep through a sky of mountain clarity, the sun, slanted by the long cliffs between the crystalline morning air, shot down into the long and scattered—and only by rare chance, lucky—rays of light, a chance light, that, when it happened to hit the sides of the rocks, flashed back with the brilliancy of a mirror. It was such a light that, flashing from the sides of the rocks, caused the man to turn toward the source along in a chorus of thy cascades, the light was already thickening into a cerulean gloom. Down there the further event would have sent only the tough course of the creek between moss covered and shaded borders of fantastic proportions. The native would have recognized the country from a three fortunes twistings. A great black and ancient oak, twisted and gnarled standing in his saddle could scarcely touch his fingertips, toward the stream, with a grizzled scrub oak clinging somehow to its sides. Lifting on both sides clinched the mountains, the stream, the body into a beating pulsate, straightened
