NICHOLAS.

At Shannon, Arthur Mettrel, aged about fifteen years, committed by shooting a bullet through his brain. He was a nephew of W. T. Cole, a leading tobacco merchant of Maysville. No cause is known for the act.

A son of Samuel Harris, from Hutchinson, Wis., Tuesday night, when the train was passing from one between Richmond and Augusta, jumped off the train and was drowned. It is supposed he was asleep.

The many friends in Maysville were pained to hear of the death of little Ida Lowry, on Friday, the 18th inst., at the residence of her father, Mr. Charles Pfisler, on the west side of Limestone.

Mr. John Dolan, a worthy and respectable merchant of the Forks, while engaged at his daily labor last week, was stricken down with paralysis. By the judicious management of his physician, Dr. Wood, he was enabled to be up and about his business in a few days, and is now restored to his usual vigorous health.

Republican: The farmers of Mason during the past week have been busy delivering their crops to market. The crop throughout that county has been an extraordinary one, and the prices realized for the tobacco are generally on a buoyant trend. The grain merchants of Maysville have been kept busy in their stores in receiving and shipping wheat. Owing to the large amount raised in that county this year the prices range from 85 cents to 90.

Republican: The 4th of July's fine crow belonging to Mr. Wadsworth, living on the Lexington pike, near the residence of Hon. W. H. Wadsworth. Saturday she was discovered by some boys in the orchard feeding from Stony Hollow, where it is supposed she had gone to quench her thirst, and, unable to return, her wings were tied together. She has witnessed the funeral of every Premier who has ruled under her except Lord Beaconsfield and Mr. Gladstone. Not a single Cabinet Minister of her uncle and predecessor's days survives, and most of those who held inferior offices under her first and Lord Melbourne's, are dead. She has lived among the living only Lord Hatherley, Mr. Charles Wood and Lord Stanley, with whom Lord Granville.

Of the members of the Privy Council which sat at Kensington Palace on that bright summer morning in June, 1837, to administer the oaths to the girl-sovereign, I can find in the land of the living only four individuals—Mr. George S. Bentinck, Lord Aberdeen, Sir John Young and Lord Stratford De Redcliffe. Lord Aberdeen was a boy at the time, and Lord Stratford was a midshipman. Lord Melbourne, it is true, was then among the living only Lord Halifax (then Mr. Charles Wood) and Lord Hatherley, with whom Lord Granville.

Indeed, it may be said that her Majesty has lived to receive at least two forty years, perhaps in most instances no offensive remnant of the same ministers under her uncle and her Lords Secretary, but Lord Melbourne and Lord Granville, and she has seen three successive Archbishops of York and of five Bishops of Durham, Lichfield and Oxford successively. She has filled each of the three Chief Justiceships of the realm, and she has received the addresses of four successive Speakers of the House of Commons; she has witnessed the great and illustrious Duke in his last days, Sir Robert Peel, and Lord Clarendon, and she has seen the Premiership eight successive times, and forty-six less than fourteen different administrations.

Lately Agnes Herring to Carry on the Business of Her Husband.

Communication to Washington Post.

It may be news to your readers to learn that Agnes Jenks, the female form of Jenkins, whose capacity for getting up an egg is so signally exhibited by the examination of Gen. Butler during the Potter-Sherman investigation of the President of steal, is not the only woman who has distinguished herself in the Treasury Department built and started the ball. Of course he was the only one that can be seen flaunting up and down the principal corridors of the Treasury building. Occasionally there is a rare specimen of the female sex who is invited to witness the destruction of the public archives. Gen. Sherman was afraid that Agnes Jenks would make a difficult matter of it, and therefore when she modified that she dictated the letter that John Sherman instructed him to write to Gen. Butler, but the letter of 10,000 reasons since accepted was made by Treasury officials in the place of reward for nearly all the scientific researches which we shall the Presidency. Even the telegraphic operators in the Treasury Department have obtained messages that passed between Secretary Sherman and Senator Sherman, in North Carolina, Florida, Louisiana and Mississippi during the period of the Presidential election, and which had the effect of changing the political complexion of those States. Indeed, the United States Colonial Service appears to have been in possession of these intended to publish their secrets and their operations in the event of their failure being reported to Secretary Sherman, thus enabling the Republican committee of each State to profit by the experience of Agnes Jenks. Now we have no objection to this system being complete. Yet this limited field where men expect to be the Republican Party can be made available enough.

Sending over the River.

Every new wrapped coffin-case carrying the form of a human being, is a fresh evidence that he was not put to ordeal by the test of Hood's Sarsaparilla and the good wishes of many. He was not subjected to the experiments of those who have not given that he has left to know-nothing, which proves he is not dead. He had learned to take from Hood's Sarsaparilla the experience of the ravages of the scrofulous and poisonous taint of the blood. Never had the Great Blood Purifier such fine results to show. Home escapes the fearful scourge of scrofula and kindred diseases when commended. The grave, the City of Consumption, does not have to mourn every victim of it. But not only stop to think that of Hoods would save the many instances of sad bereavement, but also the many cases of suffering from the pain which England and Scrofula entail upon the living. Hood's Sarsaparilla has more positive proof of its power than any other medicine. Its record is a wonderful one, and when not in unmerciful grasp of fate it may be found. Its record is a wonderful one, and when not in unmerciful grasp of fate it may be found. Its record is a wonderful one, and when not in unmerciful grasp of fate it may be found.
