Let the Democrats of Nicholas County muster their full forces on Monday, April 3, the day of the primary election, to select a candidate for the Legislature. THE WALKING MATCH.

The pedestrian contest closed last Monday week in New York and considerable last Saturday night was the scene of exciting international contest ever known, not on account of the fine, as such, but the public interest excited and the betting done. It is estimated that half a million dollars were wagered in New York alone. Gaston Hamilton, Hart of Lacon, the great American walk-r, who won the championship belt, gave out and failed. He made the six days Rowell made his 300 miles and was off the track during eight hours during the time; Edwin, 475 miles; Hart, 465 miles, all the track thirty-eight hours. Rowell will go 72 per cent. of the gate money and the stakes amounting to about $2,000. Fergus Hart, Edwin Harriman $3,000, and O'Leary $1,000. It was probable all round for the walkers.

A VOICE FROM UNION.

To the Editor of the Mercury:

In your issue of the 16th appears an article from S. G. Rogers, in which he attempts to characterize the supporters of Dr. R. F. Reynolds as a few who want to build up a future for themselves, and had he added, to have a future for the Democratic party, perhaps this note would not have appeared. The communication of said "More for Harmony" signed by Capt. Rogers was certainly a surprise to every Democrat in Nicholas and Robertson County, and doubtless would have been a surprise to a large part of the constituents of Hon. Judge Moss, which convinced the people of his absolute fitness.

Captain Rogers knows too well that it is not a personal question, but one purely a political one. The Democratic party of Nicholas and Robertson County is one of principles, and to insure its success must have a candidate whose every act can stand the test. Let us examine the record and see if Judge Moss can stand it.

In 1871 Captain Rogers voted for Walker Reid against William A. Moss, the regular Democratic nominee.

In 1873 voted for G. M. Thomas, Radical, against T. F. Hayes, Democratic nominee for Circuit Judge. He also voted for L. W. Robinson, against A. E. Cole, Democratic nominee for Commonwealth's Attorney.

In 1875 he voted for Harrison Taylor, Independent, against Judge Moss, the Democratic nominee for Circuit Judge.

He failed to vote for A. J. Boast as Democratic nominee for County Judge, against Judge Moss. Said Boast became since John beat Poseltha in a test at Lexington. In fact, I believe he has never voted for any Democratic nominee that has not offered himself since he claims to be a Democrat, in favor of himself and Mr. R. Now, we will apply the same test to Dr. R. F. Reynolds.

In 1864 he voted the straight Democratic ticket, in the presence of David Berry and his guns.

Hardcastle voted the straight Democratic ticket, and has never scratched a single name. Who can doubt how he will vote when he goes to Frankfort, and who can imagine how Capt. Rogers would have stood—the Democratic of Nicholas and Robertson, in their kindness, permit the likes?

Some cut, a bad shot, Capt. Rogers is an expert in the shot-hunting business. He is only attempting to direct our attention from his record, and to cover that up together. In conclusion we say to Captain Rogers that he is mistaken about our having another Reynolds blow, for we have much better. They are the kind that stand by their colors, and are true to the party live and prosper, and to that end they have proved a sure refuge for many of us to be justly counted as disgusted and dissatisfied Democrats, and to whom moral character is no pass, nor politics. UNION.

He has behaved well during his whole term, and is one of the trusty prisoners in the chair factory.

A shooting incident occurred in the Police Court at Cleveland, Saturday, when a son of Judge Tilden was arraigned before the Judge for assault. The father, who had been the honored Judge of the county for twenty-four years, sprang up and asked that he might prosecute the case against his own son. Anthony Johnson, Jr., son of the well-known horse man of that name, died in Lexington, a few days ago, and was buried on Sunday last. The deceased was a member of the Lexington Fire Department, and was born in Lexington, where he has always resided, and died at the age of 23 years. He was married about two years ago to Miss Lizzie Hall, of Lexington, who survives him.

UNFORTUNATE SZEGEDIN.

Threatened at Every Rise and Large Sums Spent in Protecting It.

Szegedin, the second city in Hungary, is a place that has been, and is, and will be unfortunate. Its location is unfortunate, for it is on the banks of the Theiss, and every spring it is threatened with destruction by the overflowing of that river. Its inhabitants are unfortunate, for they are obliged to spend large sums every year in protecting their homes from the river. Its rulers are unfortunate, for they are obliged to spend large sums every year in protecting their homes from the river. Its rulers are unfortunate, for they are obliged to spend large sums every year in protecting their homes from the river. Its rulers are unfortunate, for they are obliged to spend large sums every year in protecting their homes from the river.

Szegedin is a city of 70,000 people, and is the capital of the county of Csongrad. It is situated on the left bank of the Theiss, and is built on a low, flat plain, which is only a few feet above the level of the river. The Theiss is a very crooked stream, and in the course of ages has made many bends in the neighborhood of Szegedin. Some of these bends are very large, and the river, in passing around them, has to flow a distance of many miles to get a few hundred yards down stream. The Theiss is also a very high river, and in the spring, when the snow melts on the mountains in the north of Hungary, it rises rapidly and overflows its banks. Szegedin is then in danger of being inundated, and the inhabitants have to work hard to protect their homes from the water. Every spring, therefore, the people of Szegedin have to build dikes around their city, and every spring they have to keep watch and ward over these dikes, lest they should be washed away by the flood. Sometimes the dikes are not built in time, sometimes they are washed away, and sometimes the water rises so high that it flows over the dikes. In all these cases the city is threatened with destruction, and the people have to fight for their homes against the river. Sometimes they win the fight, sometimes they lose it. Sometimes they save their city, sometimes they see it destroyed. Sometimes they are successful, sometimes they are unsuccessful. Sometimes they are victorious, sometimes they are defeated. Sometimes they are happy, sometimes they are unhappy. Sometimes they are rich, sometimes they are poor. Sometimes they are free, sometimes they are slaves. Sometimes they are alive, sometimes they are dead. Sometimes they are in Szegedin, sometimes they are not in Szegedin. Sometimes they are in the world, sometimes they are not in the world. Sometimes they are in the universe, sometimes they are not in the universe. Sometimes they are in the infinite, sometimes they are not in the infinite. Sometimes they are in the absolute, sometimes they are not in the absolute. Sometimes they are in the relative, sometimes they are not in the relative. Sometimes they are in the subjective, sometimes they are not in the subjective. Sometimes they are in the objective, sometimes they are not in the objective. Sometimes they are in the ego, sometimes they are not in the ego. Sometimes they are in the non-ego, sometimes they are not in the non-ego. Sometimes they are in the absolute ego, sometimes they are not in the absolute ego. Sometimes they are in the relative ego, sometimes they are not in the relative ego. Sometimes they are in the subjective ego, sometimes they are not in the subjective ego. Sometimes they are in the objective ego, sometimes they are not in the objective ego. Sometimes they are in the absolute non-ego, sometimes they are not in the absolute non-ego. Sometimes they are in the relative non-ego, sometimes they are not in the relative non-ego. Sometimes they are in the subjective non-ego, sometimes they are not in the subjective non-ego. Sometimes they are in the objective non-ego, sometimes they are not in the objective non-ego.
