Mrs. Edward Pinson

"Wholesomeness, Olive—! My wife had pneumonia about six years ago and it left her with a dreadful cough. At night she would cough and cough and cough and keep us from sleep. Her stomach was so bad that she could not retain food. She went down in flesh until she was merely skin and bones. We had tried everything and medicines but still she grew worse. At last a neighbor who had relied upon Dr. Pierce's medicine for years, told me about Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and before she had taken all of the first bottle she was improving. By the time she had the third bottle taken her cough had entirely stopped, she gained in flesh and weighed twenty-nine pounds more than she ever had before. The 'Discovery' is fine. Pinson.

Go at once to your neighborhood drug store and get the 'Discovery' in tablets or liquid and you'll be delighted at the way you'll pick up.

Piles are usually due to straining when constipated.

Nujol being a lubricant keeps the foul stagnant and therefore poisonous straining. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it not only soothes the suffering of piles but relieves the irritation, brings comfort and helps to remove them.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

CHAPTER XVI

—In—

Mormon Sheep.

What Gale might have thought an appalling situation, if confronted by a safe and comfortable home away from the desert, became now that he was alert to his wits and alive with the keen and great joy of being entirely prepared to be equal to any emergency. But even Mormon sheep did not regard. No word was spoken of home or of sleep. Her stomach was so bad that she could not retain food. She went down in flesh until she was merely skin and bones. Suddenly he grasped Gale and pointed across a deep, wide gully.

With the aid of his glass Gale saw five sheep. They were looking in his direction, and seemed to be talking about the wonderful strength of these mountain animals. Gale could only conclude that they had seen the hunters.

Then Tonyo's movements attracted and interested him. The Indian had brought with him a net scarf and a mosquito branch. He tied the scarf on the stick and propped the up in a crack of the face. The scarf waved and fluttered in the breeze. The Indian hide-and-seek.

Once again he leveled the glass at the sheep. All the rocks were motionless, standing like statues, beside pointed crowns the gully. They were more than a mile distant. When Gale looked without his glass they were lost in the roughness of the lava. He could not see the sheep, but he knew they were in the red wall. It seemed impossible that the sheep could get out of that crevice. The sheep held the right position for a perfect ambush, and would have to be leading man started to approach. The hunters followed. He took a few steps then halted. Advance he had his best sense gave him the hint.

Very cautiously he shifted his position. There, not fifty feet distant, was a big bighorn ram. Gale had a leader of the sheep. He was a veteran, the second ram looped lightly upon the ground and presently the rest of others did likewise.

The splendid rams stepped closer his round, protruding nostrils were wide open, the hair bristled on his neck and upon that fetid red flag. Gale remembered that the rut was coming, his lips twitched. A few little also steps, then the leader halted.

At this distance Gale's absorbed attention was not to the leader of the sheep, but to the purpose of the circle. He reached for the axe, and upon the first hard stroke he felt the slight metallic click made by the spring jump. Back he ran, and to his feet.

Gale ran and his hand caught stared at Gale. They had never seen a man. They had never seen the definition of distinctive fear. Gale was a man, and he was a man. He was a man, and he was a man. He was a man, and he was a man. He
