A MERRY SCRAP, BUT NOW FOR PEACE

"The tumult and the shouting dies;
The Captains and the Kings depart."

Well, it's all over, and we might add, as Mr. Lawrence Fitzhugh observed, in his Wilmore Enterprise, cannot be some—blame good."

Naturally the result is most gratifying to The Mercury. Our candidate was most thoroughly nominated. We thought he would win, we hoped he would win, and we made but pretend that we are not pleased. We are, however, The Mercury has not the least desire to "crow." We have never yet won over a score over the man of women who believed Mr. Barkley to be the right man. We reserve the "crowing" until the idea of November.

It has been the personal opinion of the editor of this Mercury all along that the contest would be close, in fact, as this is written on Monday, Mr. Cantrell seems to have well-nigh the majority that was expected. Powerful influences made a desperate fight to win with Mr. Barkley, and when we challenge anyone that we would give Mr. Barkley our earnest support, count he be the nominee, we did not regard it as responsible in the least that he might be the successful candidate. Had he been nominated, Mr. Mercury would have been loud against him in November.

We are sure that the Democrats who voted for Mr. Barkley in last Saturday's primary election will abide by the choice of their party and vote for Mr. Cantrell in November. If they be good Democrats and loyalists in the sense of the majority, they will do so. The Mercury has no patience with the voter who enters with his party into a contest to select a leader, and if unsuccessful, pouts and refuses to play. He reminds him the boy, who is always shouting: "I won't play, I won't play" when the other boys war "play his way." However, there are, we hope, not any such.

A quote again from the Wilmore Enterprise:

They (the Democrats) have had their fling and are unanimously going to quit work once more, exist once a year convenient to power, even a young league of nations among democrats and keep repast into party caves which has been so full of hots or some place. Democrats are much like the Kentucky Colonels, they are good fellows and would hug to the bosom that pleasingly, but lost from sentimental—but they know when they have had enough and they know to leave when they are through with hard family quarrelings. They are not vampirous, not they are a mosquito into the water a minute, but an immense bird with long snouts burrowed in wood one hunted."

So, now as "the tumult and the shouting dies," may Democrats, each and every, march forward under one banner—our good, envelope in November, our slogan not, "Lest we forget! lest we forget!" Forget the bitterness and rancor of our recent little civil war, and with the broken ranks face the common foe.

STILL A-EATIN' HUSKS

The Courier-Journal has announced that it will not support Mr. Cantrell as the nominate of the Democratic party, entitles, says the Courier, with it support Mr. Barkley, combining itself to a publication of the "news impartially, whether it develops under Mr. Cantrell or Mr. Barkley."

Without attempting criticism of the course of the Courier-Journal, it is gratifying, at least, to have the News of this paper for it, that they will "publish the news impartially." We think that, we can, we know, anything of the business of conducting a newspaper, can answer the Courier of having done just as this primary campaign just ended. In fact, we newspaper men, we venture to say, in Kentucky, whether they were in accord with the policy of the Courier-Journal, or in opposition, in the Democratic publications "selected the news," to some extent. Because of that, rather than because of any criticism editorial statements are there great newspapers to be criticized.

It is the privilege of a newspaper as it is the privilege of an individual to be a Republican, a Democrat, or an Independent. No citizen may be molested or put in Coventry for choosing to be an Independent in politics. The Mercury has always affirmed the best of motives to the Courier in its fight for a business man for Governor, we wondered contended at its support of Mr. Barkley, after the harsh things said about Mr. Barkley by the Courier earlier in the campaign; we acknowledge their right to become, now, an Independent in politics. Their position may be said to be consistent now, at any rate.

We believe we are not alone when we say that we will myself, however, for omitting of the Courier-Journal and Times as the future in Democratic primary politics. Due to not necessarily a "yellow dog" Democrat, but a "hard nuts" Republican, because one takes part in a primary election or a convention and feels it his duty to abide by the decision of that primary or convention. We regard it as a duty; we regard it as a pledge given to "carry on," even one has taken part in a primary, whether or not "agree with."

And though it may be "news" to the Courier, which is very much "up-to-date" in its role of the Guardian of Political Purity, we little believe, not in the circle, the circulation of editorial quips and comic cartoons, have a conception of right and wrong, and of duty, of a citizen, individually in public life, would hanish the day when politicians shall have opposition conditions of wrong, but believe in good citizenship as well.

We would have welcomed you home, you and your dutiful daughter. We would even have let you "hot out of here," "cause you cannot so pull out of not making a "home run" this time. Even yesterday, before the breakfast bell of your "A Trust Element," we sent you word that the pet's a-dittin' and the calf a-wanin' fat, but you would'nt wait. Mounting your white charger, purse-proud and pouting, you have left us! Is it to not called? Would you shall have "et your fill," follow and we'll come to meet you while you're "at stay off."

WHAT THE LOUISVILLE POST THINKS

The Louisville Post, whose editorial columns are always sane, and has never been a partisan paper, but a Cantrell supporter in the Primary, under the caption, "Cantrell of Governor," says, in part:

Kentucky is close enough, politically, however, to make any State race somewhat doubtful, when the dominant party is united. The recent primary campaign was marked by bitterness, and there are some signs of party division. The thing to offset now, therefore, if not lost Mr. Cantrell was his valiant, but what he will do with his victory. What will be the appeal he will make to tens of thousands of men who voted for his opponent, and who will measure the earnestness of their support not only by what he does and says, particularly by what he does.

Let us begin by giving the casualties time. Meanwhile, in his race within the party he has made his appeal within party lines, and addressed himself, in the main, to the regulars. Now he must speak to the whole State. We have seen no sign of little declaring for policies that he has not fully developed.

Let us next up the amount on both the favorable and unfavorable side of the ledger. Unquestionably the Cantrell cause into this race with one serious handicap. What is the effect of the Democratic fight upon the Republican ears. Much of his backing was, at recent, good, but part of it was not good. If Mr. Cantrell proposes to appeal to part of the latter class he must represent his office, his administration, even if he so elected, will surely fail, and, after a brief period in office, he will pass out, leaving nothing but regrets. We have none to recommend to Mr. Cantrell, but we have none to recommend to Mr. Fisher, those things that would help the Republican party and State.

There are other phases in regard to Mr. Cantrell, phases which we find attractive. Mr. Cantrell has sugar, and he has brains, and, above everything else, he has courage. He is a fighter. He has been a successful prosecutor, which is a double course possible only with a man of his character and character. For let no one be misled about Campbell Cantrell. This man is no weakling, he is not to be others and his attempt to put the blame on others. If he is elected governor, he will be governor, and he will make the office he will do. If Mr. Cantrell is elected Cantrell will be the Governor, and behind him there will be no weakening partisan or sectional appeal to embarrass his administration.

In this situation the Post has no moment of hesitation, it urges the voters of Kentucky to elect Mr. Cantrell. Nevertheless to cast their ballots for Mr. Cantrell. Knowing the Democratic party, we know that Mr. Cantrell, we believe, it is his political career is at stake, and, with honorable, constructive service in the highest office of the State.

THE PASSING OF THE PRESIDENT

The universal regret with which an entire Nation heard of the death of chief executive reigns even in the news flash in the sensitiveness of our republican form of government and the absence of war and calamity. Thus it is among a relatively small group, whose claim to American citizenship, is doubtful, that expression of a most genuine sorrow and sympathy only will be heard. The death of a ruler in foreign lands stirs no sympathy in us.

It is not, we prefer to believe, because we are a sentimental people that this is so, but because we are a sane people, a people well balanced and great hearted enough to forget partisan feeling in the more sacred feelings of regret and honesty, heightened sympathy that we accord a person, who, whose official responsibility has endeared above upon the Great Adventure.

History, though it may not note Warren Harding down as one of our great Presidents, must, if it delineate truly, give him by posterity as a man of rugged honesty, honest traits of character, a man who retained his native nobility, though hailed the most powerful ruler of the world, a plain American, who though perhaps lacking in the brilliant qualities of mind which distinguishing any of his predecessors, had that priceless quality of mind—common sense. Above all, the idea Harding was revered and loved during a kind heart, and that, after all, is perhaps the best quality a man may have.

"Kind hearts are more than coronets,
And simple faith, than Norman blood."

MORE HOME NEWS FOR OUR READERS

With this issue The Mercury seems to you as an "all home print" newspaper. We have found the change necessary in order to carry our advertising, which has grown to have space to carry all of the local news.

For a year front page of The Mercury has been printed in the city. These are the pages which contain the social story and other features. We have found it necessary to print local news and carry local advertising on these pages. In order to have space to carry the news of the Catholic and Methodist country, we are adopting the new style of paper.

You will find the serial story, "The Custard Cup," continued in this issue and at the conclusion of this story another serial will be started. We hope you will like this kind of the change. We are sure that you will agree with us after a few weeks that The Mercury has improved new, than ever before, for we will not be handicapped by lack of space. We hope you will like the new dress.

Commenting on the gubernatorial primary, lately ended, the Wilmore Enterprise says:

"So far as individual members of the party are concerned they are much in the position of people who had to choose between two communists. He said: "Yap watter you to do—eat Mars watter and Ford or Creek. I naturally couldn't do both at the same time. So I just let it go at that." Well, the Democrats have made a choice, so far as we know, they are happy. So what the only now and we are all at peace in our house."

That the Bingham Twins may not become all embittered, "everything and go out into the garden and eat worms, we take the liberty of quoting from a recent editorial remained that the fatal voting is out, the pet's a-dittin' and the calf wanin' fat in the meadow pasture.

WHY WE DO IT

(Gazette Independent)

A good many people already around Augusta have subscribed for The Mercury, and have sent in their names to children, often wonder why newspapers do so. We do it for the same reason that we put in the building of a new school house and encouraging a church. Sometimes, when the cost of school taxes to us only Mars watter and Ford or Creek. I naturally couldn't do both at the same time. So I just let it go at that." Well, the Democrats have made a choice, so far as we know, they are happy. So what the only now and we are all at peace in our house."

WHY NOT ADVERTISE?

Ten million people are directly interested in the production of wheat. The whole population eats bread, some or wheat.

According to the millers, people do not eat enough bread. Hence a national movement has been started to persuade folks to "eat more wheat." There are lots of reasons why "bread is the staff of life." A national campaign for more wheat June 19 brought out these reasons.

All this is free advertising for the business of the farmers, millers, elevator interests, bakers, retailers and others engaged in furnishing us our daily bread. Educational bodies also will take up the work and before long we will expect to have every child and grown person in America know all about the importance of eating enough bread.

An extensive advertising campaign has been carried on for several years exploiting the wonderful food value of milk that has resulted in very greatly increasing its use as an article of every day diet, and the dairy farmers are now reaping splendid results.

A new movement has recently been inaugurated, the purpose of which is to exploit fully the value of meat as food. With a general understanding of the true value of meat as an article of diet many of the substitutes now used will be cast aside forever. Hosts of people will be glad to learn that meat does not possess rheumatism, gout, gallstones and other formidable diseases and diseases alleged to be. This will be a wholesome advertising campaign.

Here is a thought for Kentucky farmers. Why not start advertising our crops? There is milk—the only "perfect food," according to the health experts. Meat—the most palatable of all foods. Grains that are useless for anything but fertilizing, can be shown to be full of "vitamins" that do away with medicines to those that eat plenty of them. Purebred stock is increasing over the whole state—but we are not advertising the fact to any great extent. There are many uses for corn, oats, vegetables, meat animals and even waste products on the farm, which if advertised consistently would create a greater demand and bring better prices.—Farmers Home Journal.

Annual subscriptions are now due. Renew promptly when notified.
