REV. DR. A. R. MANSFIELD

WORK OF THE SEAMEN'S CHURCH INSTITUTE

SEAMEN'S CHURCH INSTITUTE NEW YORK CITY

AT THE INSTITUTE ENTRANCE

READY FOR ADMITTED SEAMEN

NOT long ago the news of disaster to a man for sal it was—if a sailor on land—not much attention at the wonders about us, almost unnoticed in their little circle of interest and importance. Now, it is different. We are all in touch with home curiously I want to tell you about the Seamen's Church Institute of New York city. Even where I have been I have been trying.

Thinly I had heard of this place, this enormous building which meant home to thousands and thousands of seamen from all over the world, and I had heard of its tower and its great green dome, and I had seen it from a distance and admire within view of the New York. The institute is situated on the very edge of the island, on Manhattan—25 South street, along the water front.

Captain Robert Huntington, president of Navigation, Marine Engineering and Radio school of the institute, and Dr. Mansfield, superintendent, have been the ones to accomplish this end, assisted by witnesses.

For the past year KDKF, which is the diverse signal sent to the institute radio station, has received in treatment of the man sick or are by a doctor at one of the public health stations on land. Thousands of men have passed through the hospital, which has so finally seen out in the institute of the U. S. Public Health service, the first aid equipment, a first aid cabinet (the work of the institute) and a medicine chest. In order to receive the certificate the officer must have had a course in first aid training.

So that now a man who is sick can be treated as men by these officers who understand medicine and know how to be professionally Exist under the directions of the doctors who send their advice and treatment by wireless following the analysis of the man's symptoms to them. Skips outside the three-mile limit are sometimes relayed by the ships within the range.

All kinds of diseases have been treated and now the final arrangement in the different coastal stations is to be made so that all men who are in need of medical service by wireless. And all this has been put through by the Seamen's Church institute. The radio corporation gave all the wireless expenses of sending messages with the exception of some of the telephone toll charges and—a private individual pays these.

The institute is proud of its as a world service that just been completed. And the place I had known of as the Seamen's Church institute, which is the port of the sailors which they have produced through the ten years of its existence. The place I had known of as a great city is not one well known in other parts of the world. Variety was formerly a place where it is not to be drunk when they come to port. Variety one be, Variety was formerly a place where men were allowed to spend their money, generally left broke some years ago, when the institute was given the opportunity to get rid of the place.
