Feeding Baby Chicks

Sour skim milk or butter milk is the best first feed, for baby chicks but they should be given no feed until they are from 48 to 72 hours old. To feed chicks too early ruins many cannot without diarrhoea. After the first feed of sour milk or butter milk give a thick grain consisting of equal parts of fine cracked corn and cracked wheat, or feed a good commercial chick feed in addition to the sour milk. An amount of grain feed should be fed 5 times a day which can be cleaned up in 15 minutes. Get the chicks out on the ground as soon as they are able to stand the exposure, be sure they have a good supply of grit and green feed and you will have no trouble from diarrhoea, leg weakness or kindred troubles.

Spray Now To Prevent Grapes Rotting

Remember that grapes are to be sprayed with Bordeaux mixture. Four sprayings during the season will usually prevent rot and put them in good condition. The first time is given just before the blossom is out, the second just after the fruit is set and the third 14 to 18 days after the second.

Add powdered Arsenate of Lead to the Bordeaux at the rate of 1 pound to 50 gallons, and the leaf eating insects will be controlled.

Likewise apples and peaches should be given the 1st spray promptly, if it hasn't been done already. Spray materials can be purchased from your local drug stores.

Why Buy Hay This Year?

A year-round supply of home-grown hays is a prime foundation of good farm management. Last year Kentucky farmers purchased vast quantities of hay that was shipped into the State. The farmers in other states harvested this hay and sold it here at a profit, then why pay $10 to $40 per ton for hay that can be grown for $15. Soy Beans or Cow Peas sown alone or in combination will furnish relatively quick hay of a quality, if properly cured, that can hardly be excelled. Now one bushel of Cow Peas or Soy Beans per acre in a prepared seed bed and you can expect a good crop. It is advisable to inoculate Soy Beans in this county concerning the use of inoculation consult the county agent.

Vegetables Attacked by Many Pests and Diseases

From the time the seeds of garden crops are put into the ground until the crops are gathered, diseases and insects that must be fought may appear. Vegetable troubles are due to numerous causes, including unfavorable soil conditions too wet or too dry, too rich or too poor, lack of humus or of lime, weather unsuited to some crops, careless use of fertilizers, or attacks of fungi or other parasites. The adoption of the best horticultural practices—crop rotation, the careful application of fertilizers suited to each crop, adequate pulverization, the planting of all crops in their proper seasons—is important for the successful growing of garden crops.

The control of diseases due to fungi, bacteria, and other causes requires special additional treatment, as does the damage caused by insects. A new bulletin has just been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, as Farmers' Bulletin 1371, "Diseases and Insects of Garden Vegetables," the purpose of which is to present briefly control measures for the most important insects and fungous and bacterial diseases of the home-garden vegetable crops.

The use of disease-free seed and plants, says the author of the bulletin, is fundamental to all insects and disease control. A modified application of the principle of crop rotation can be made even in the home garden by moving the rows of each vegetable to another place each year. Many diseases and insects live over winter in the soil and will appear on the plants again next season if they are in the same soil. Furthermore, since many of the pests of closely related crops are the same, such vegetables should not be planted in succession. Vine crops, such as cucumbers, melons, etc., should not follow one another, nor should cabbage, cauliflower, or related crops follow one another.

Numerous important diseases are carried in or on the seed and cannot be controlled by seed treatment, such as bean anthracnose, pea pod-spot, and potato leaf-roll and mosaic. It is, therefore, essential to secure the most disease-free seed obtainable.

In presenting the methods of controlling insects and diseases the bulletin discusses under the headings, "Treatment" and "Prevention of Diseases." Under "Treatment" are discussed the methods of control which may be applied after the diseases or insects have appeared in the garden, such as the use of poisoned bait for cutworms, the hand picking of insects, and spraying for disease and insect control. Under "Prevention" are included all measures of cultural nature which are used to insect appearance which will tend to minimize or stop the development of diseases and insects or prevent their overwintering to attack the next season crops, such as planting disease-resistant, disease-free, and insect-free seed, treatment of seed to kill insects and disease, or planting crops on parts of the garden free from the pests.

A copy of the bulletin may be secured, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

LOCAL DELEGATION GOES UNINSTRUCTED

Governor Fields Endorsed for Temporary Chairman at Convention Saturday

BOND ISSUE IS OPPOSED

Pursuant to a call of Forrest Dalzell, Chairman of the Nicholas county Democratic committee, a number of voting of the Democrats was held at the court house Saturday afternoon for the purpose of selecting delegates to attend the Democratic State convention at Lexington Wednesday.

The convention was called to order by Mr. Dalzell. I. H. Ross was unanimously elected temporary chairman and Grimes Caywood was unanimously elected secretary. Mr. Ross then appointed the following committees: Resolutions, William Conley, B. F. Reynolds and W. D. Young; delegates, F. B. Henry, R. L. Collinge and Perry McCutchen.

The committee on resolutions submitted the following report, which was unanimously adopted:

We, the Committee on Resolutions, beg leave to submit the following report:

First: We, in convention assembled, hereby heartily approve and endorse the conduct of our great President Democratic Administration, in all measures except the bond issue.

A bill which attracted much interest and consumed two days in circuit court came to an end last Friday afternoon when a jury rendered a verdict in favor of the defendant company in the suit of William David Ingram, A. S. Nolan and Mary E. Cline, all of Lexington, for injuries sustained when a wheel on a Ford sedan broke causing the machine to turn over.

The accident occurred in the curve near the residence of W. G. Lee on the Lexington road about two years ago. The right rear wheel of the machine, which was owned by Mr. Nolan, gave way, causing the car to turn over and roll down an embankment. The time plaintiffs claimed to have sustained severe injuries. Damages to the amount of $2,500 in each case was asked in the suits.

The plaintiffs alleged that defective material was used in the wheel which resulted in the accident. This is said to be the first case in Kentucky in which an automobile manufacturer has been made defendant in a suit for damages for defective material used in the construction of an automobile, resulting in a wreck.

The jury was out about one hour. Two of the jurors dissented from the verdict. The case in all probability will be taken to the court of appeals.

Attorneys Talbott & Franklin, of Paris and Lexington, represented the plaintiffs. Judge I. H. Ross and Senator Fulmer, of this city, W. H. McClelton, of Detroit, Mich., and Judge F. C. Calhoun, of Lexington, represented the Ford Motor Company. Four experts from the factory at Detroit testified in the trial.

Prizes Offered for The Best Windows

At a meeting of the directors of the Carlisle Chamber of Commerce Saturday morning, it was decided to offer cash prizes for the best decorated window of merchandise. Two prizes will be given on May 22 and two on May 30. The first prize on each date will be $5 in cash and second prize $2.50 in cash.

Tickets have been distributed to the various stores and every customer will be given a ticket upon which he will be asked to write the window which he thinks has the best display. The tickets will be dropped in a box and at the close of the contest the winners will be announced.

The contest is for the purpose of stimulating interest in the visit of the Louisville Board of Trade special train which will arrive here next Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. George C. Myers, R. T. Kirkland and J. C. Tuerman were appointed a committee to decorate the town for the occasion.

A reception committee composed of Judge A. B. Tilton, Mayor P. D. Darnell and Attorney H. M. Swinford was named. Mr. Swinford will make the welcome address to the visitors on the special train.

Another meeting of the Board of Trade will be held before Memorial Day and plans made for the observance of the occasion.

May Call Special Session Assembly

Besieged by many queries as to whether he would call a special session of the legislature if the $75,000,000 bond issue were declared unconstitutional by the court of appeals, to offer a $50,000,000 bond issue or some other kind, Gov. W. J. Fields announced Saturday that he would not offer another bond bill, but an income tax bill at such special session, if called.

"I am confident the advisability of calling a special session of the legislature in the event the bond issue is declared unconstitutional by the court of appeals," he said. "I would call for the session for the purpose of enacting an income tax law."

Ruling by the appellate court on the bond issue will be reached before the end of the spring term, June 20, Chief Justice Flem D. Sampson said.

May Call Special Session Assembly

Besieged by many queries as to whether he would call a special session of the legislature if the $75,000,000 bond issue were declared unconstitutional by the court of appeals, to offer a $50,000,000 bond issue or some other kind, Gov. W. J. Fields announced Saturday that he would not offer another bond bill, but an income tax bill at such special session, if called.

"I am confident the advisability of calling a special session of the legislature in the event the bond issue is declared unconstitutional by the court of appeals," he said. "I would call for the session for the purpose of enacting an income tax law."

Ruling by the appellate court on the bond issue will be reached before the end of the
