PROPHET OF THE MAY TIME.

"Prophet of the gay time,
Prophet of the roses,
Prophet of the rapture
February Valentine."

As this is written on the eve of February, (or Imp?) it needs the eye of a seer to see beyond the lowering clouds, gloom and sodden weather, to see the verdure, the roses, the rapture of the month of Spring.

Yet we have been placed in some way, upon a planet where within doors will dwell Cheerfulness, Fancy and Fancies, and outside the forthcoming planet in which we dwell, the golden "Spring Birds" are becoming twitted with reddish breasts, the prophetess of the earth's awakening, the coming of another Spring.

Perhaps hardened neighbors will be happy to hear from their acquaintances in sunny climes. The noisy grackle, the robin and the red-winged blackbird are the advance guard of a great army of sunny skies, soaring sunward at the first warm days to come. April will be the month of that army, in which will sweep the high tide of the homecoming of the feathered hosts.

We have a migrating bird in our yard that toward lower and more sheltered copses is wending its way each evening, when his song is put locked in the "Lord's Prayer" in a kind of Pidgin English on the "man" with which network of wires and poles, and the "Blessed Love." And the common sparrow which maintains its own right of way and says taxes on it traffic and of your and mine, and of the red-plush nests empty. What's to do?

Wishing our criticism of an engineering problem to be constructive we would say, let the railroads buy some more poles. They'll be doing just that soon, or we miss our guess. And in the meantime it seems to us that the honors should contribute reasonably and fairly and taxes to the maintenance of their right of way, which is also the right of way of the traveling public. We offer from the Kentucky Mercury, theoretically, at a cost of a comment on the taking of honors in which that newspaper appears on the broad and shortest Times to the effort that additional trunk lines, which has two people out of business. The News is in line with the opinion of The Mercury that the railroads are better treated cattle than people, and we can agree heartily with that newspaper, when it says:

While The News believes so strongly in the railroads, the principal reason why we are in favor of a trunk line is because the public, not the railroads.

The editorial following:

Such information is that, instead of paying ten per cent the railroads pay about one and one per cent of their earnings in taxes. The average taxes paid by the line has remained from the fact that ben operations are engaged in a business of a common carrier of passengers, just as the railroads are engaged. Both are running for profit.

The important and distinct difference, however, is that the railroad must maintain its own right of way, while the right of way of the highway is maintained by the country, state and Federal aids. The railroad is a subsidy to one class of people, while the highway is a subsidy to everybody, and the Ginger Jones, the Chamber of Commerce, the newspaper, certainly will not defend it.

"Suppose, for instance, two men were allowed to establish dry goods stores in Glasgow. One of them would be required to construct, equip and maintain it with his own money, the other would be allowed to use the streets of Glasgow, free of charge, without increasing the taxes of those who patronize his business, and without paying a cent of rent." Of course, then, the man who had to pay for his own plant would be at a disadvantage, while the man who furnished with his property would be enabled to charge cheaper rates. While The News believes in being fair to the railroads, the principal reason why we are in favor of a bus lines is to protect the public, not the railroads.

"The bus can bring public prosperity without paying commercialized graft." They are appropriating the roads built with public funds. It is wrong, unfair, and the way to right the wrong is to make the buses pay more."

FORESTS PROFITABLE

Tennessee Timber Treat Is Cited As Example

The Appalachian Forest Experiment Station of Asheville, North Carolina has recently drawn attention called to an interesting experiment in forestry involving the growth of timber. It covers the seven years ago the same parties purchased the timber on a tract of 500 acres of land in Lewis County, Tennessee. They purchased for $2,500 and all trees 14 inches were cut. About a year ago the same parties purchased the timber on another tract from the $1,500 taking all trees over 14 inches in diameter. While the realized on this tract is possibly by no means the equal of the first, the trees are preserved and one is used to logging, a profit on the purchase of these tracts, that cost tracts on an acre, leaving their way and a profit.

Kentucky has thousands of acres of timberland similar to these and the owners are advised that the proper care of their forests and logging and its fire prevention will be well worth while and that a crop of timber can be raised in a generation way as are other money making crops.

SWIFT'S PRODUCE REVIEW

Butter has shown some further advance, which is no doubt caused by the heavy consuming demand created by reasonable prices that have existed for the past several weeks. General conditions point to steady to possibly higher values in the near future, coupled with some slight fluctuations.

Weather conditions have made it favorable for increased production of fresh eggs and as a consequence the markets have worked to lower levels. There is still a large surplus of eggs in storage, which are being sold at very cheap prices and extremely heavy losses to the owners.

The present relatively cost of fresh eggs no doubt is creating better consumptive demand, which may over the effect of causing sugar reduction, although the general tendency from now until early March will be for lower prices.

The movement of live fowls has been normal for the time of the year. The high prices being asked for dressed poultry in the large consuming centers have evidently had some effect on the consuming demand, as stocks are not clearing up as fast as they were during April.

The marketing of fowls from now on, however, will no doubt be influenced to considerable extent by the disposition of the producers to hold for any production.

SEED TIME AND HARVEST

SEED TIME IS HERE AND YOU CANNOT HOPE FOR A GOOD HARVEST, UNLESS YOU SOW GOOD SEED.

We are, as usual, stocked with what we think is the best seed that money can buy, having spent two or three days at the Experiment Station, trying to learn what seed is best adapted to your soil and climate.

We also have a good supply of FEED, ALFALFA, CLOVER, OATS, HORSE AND DAIRY FEEDS. We have an excellent FEED FOR SHEEP.

Don't overlook our SHEEP TROUGHS. They are the best we know of. Ask your neighbors who have them, and see us when in town. We are always glad to see you. And we can haul your wagons with two or three kinds of the BEST COAL

Pioneer, Dixie Gem, Dudley

No higher than others.
