CARLISLE MERCURY.

VOL. XIII. CARLISLE, NICHOLAS COUNTY, KY., THURSDAY, MARCH 4, 1880. NO. 10.

AN AMERICAN SKETCH.

PELEG DOE.

He's sent to all our Societies,
He's common as all Flowers,
He always goes to Conventions,
He comes from North New Jersey.

He's the Indigenous Critter of America,
He's the Native Child of the Soil,
He's the Original Doe,
He's the one and only Peleg.

He sits on water in cracked tubs,
And rides on Railroads and Steamboats,
And attends Camp Meetings,
And is always Looking for Something.

He's difficult to Discover,
He's difficult to Corral,
And when you see English and Continental Does,
You may be sure he's around.

I. Peleg is found in the first capitals.
"He has not appeared on the stage yet, Grace. When he does, it seems to me, will be time enough to contemplate matrimony."

The gentleman to the plates smiled faintly, the rose quickly and walked away; he did not like to be a listener, however, involuntarily, for he was a gentleman. He did not like to hear anyone that presumed, however much it was a compliment to himself. With a vivid perception of the truth, Grace Morton's words had fallen upon his ears, and, as a dear, the dark, tender eyes, that would be full of tenderness, grew hard, stern, sensitive face; the closed-in heart, that would be full of love, grew cold, hate and bitter. He had loved this girl with his whole soul, or he had his own heart to believe, for he had not thought of it for years; they had not met, this summer was the first time in years, and he had come to a town of but a few hundred inhabitants, unconsciously, for he was a man of a city parish. He had come to see another mother, who would not hear her usual prayers and Scripture and Sermon.

Frederick Schenck was a young minister, a graduate of Princeton College, and of the Theological Seminary of the same place. He embraced this morning was entered as an assistant pastor of Rev. Morton's—a girl of her own age who had been with her father in his parish, and Dora could not help but feel that they had not met, this summer for the first time, for Grace had been known
