A VISIT TO POMPEI.

The ruins of the great Roman city of Pompeii, which were discovered in 1763, and have since been excavated, are now open to the public. The city was buried under a thick layer of ash and pumice in 79 A.D., and the ruins are now in a state of perfect preservation. The city was a typical Roman city, with a forum, a temple, a theatre, and a public square. The ruins are now a great attraction for tourists, and the city is now a museum of Roman life.
