Leaf Tobacco Cut Decision Deferred

President Roosevelt Monday told senators from tobacco-producing states that he must wait to see how the budget stands before he throws support to the proposed 40 per cent tobacco tax cut.

The senators were advised to return again to the White House with their plea for the reduction after Congress has completed action on the major appropriation bills.

While members of the group, numbering twelve, expressed doubt that the Vinson bill, embodying the proposed horizontal cut, would become law before Congress adjourns, they were cheered by the President's attitude. Representatives left the impression that the commodity is overtaxed. They expressed hope that at the next session it could go through.

The Vinson measure is expected to be reported favorably by the House Ways and Means Committee before the end of the week, and Senator Byrd of Virginia said a poll of the Senate finance committee, of which he is a member, showed there would be no difficulty in bringing it out of that group.

He predicted that if the President gave the "go ahead" signal, the measure could be pushed through Congress in a week.

AFTER RAIN

(Lena Whittaker Blakeney)

The rain has ceased; the air is very still

And fragrant with the breath of virgin leaves

And opening buds. The trees are stamped in black

On the cool expanse of the clearing sky.

The vivid emerald of the new washed grass

Is backed with bluebits and wild violets;

Great crystal raindrops gleam like diamonds

From spider webs of silver filigree. The air is vibrant with the whirr of wings—

A pair of cardinals, twin streaks of flame,

Flash in and out among the tumpet boughs

Of an old cottonwood above the lake; And from a grove of locusts on the hill

A mocking bird pours out his heart in song.

CARRY BUTLER sat up when he received the invitation to have dinner with his sister and her husband and had something was in the wind.

"And when Sis promises my favorite fried chicken and mushrooms—well, little brother knows his leg is going to be pulled in some fashion."

Little brother was quite right. It was just following the mushrooms that a large, fat drumstick, that Betty said was savory.

"You know, Carry, Sam and I are going out again to France next week—"

"Oh, that's it, and I am to have that infernal bother of feeding the pups sent for you. The scramble last time was like an Irish meeting, and I spent three whole days combing Pomeroy's office to the apartment with an assortment of adjustment workers."

"You're the first edition of the apartment hunting Butler family I know. I guess we'd better ask $150 a month and they would be such a find."

Carry found himself in for it, so he became resigned, put the advertisement in the daily papers and his own office address and telephone, made the inventory, saw Sam and Betty off and awaited the rush.

There were two inquiries before he reached the office, and along came Carry and Carry was quite fed up telling people about the apartment. It was the voice of John Wilson over the phone, however, that prompted Carry to sense the right treat.

"If that apartment's the right thing," said Wilson, "we'd like to see it today. Mrs. Wilson is coming in all the way from Eastwood, hoping we can secure it, and said she'd be there about twelve."

So it happened that Carry waited at the office of Mrs. Wilson.

Of course, he had not thought she would be such a charming woman. But her ravishing beauty was enhanced as she stood poised in the doorway with her hand upon the door knob. Carry's "This was the moment for which Carry himself has waited for asking the assistance in renting the apartment. "What a lovely comment," he thought, claimed, "and a good view of the Hud son, 6th, dear, I do hope Mr. Wilson told you how very much we want it!" she continued, flying up to the office and he felt bewildered by their brilliance.

Carry sighed and remembered telling her that Mr. Wilson had all but settled the matter.

"Since you and your husband seem designed to have dinner with Sam in the multitude, why not take the keys to the apartment?"

A curious smile crinkled the fair one's eyes.

"But won't your wife want to—well I'm a bad at this—"

"My sister," expected Carry, "is on the high seas."

"Oh," commented the lady. Having said that she was gone, she seemed more animated. "Is there any way we could get in touch with you this evening, should any questions come up which we didn't think to ask you about?" Carry gave her his card and telephone number.

After a moment or two longer, he had to watch her vanish into the subway.

The rest of the afternoon seemed much slower. He had to wait before he throws Carey's brain kept running. "Those shall not come in unexpectedly, wife but that didn't prevent his heart so fast as he did. He was very conscious of her loveliness each time the tele phone rang.

He hoped against hope that some information would be forthcoming about the apartment left it was not until six o'clock that the call came. "I say, old chap," said Wilson, "my wife has been thoroughly taken with the apartment and has gone to celebrate. We wonder if you'd waive convention and join us at supper. Sam's gone, and Carey is along and it will just make a foursome."

Thus it was that Carey, armed with the keys, was ushered into Sam's home. Could secure, not Mr. Wilson, his wife and sister started off.

Carey was about to turn the sister in the direction of the nearest Chinese wing, when Wilson stopped him with a whisper.

"Oh, I say, I have been mar fried few years, but I still prefer to take charge of her—rather than let her take charge of me."

"Oh, I say," laughed Carey with a flush that was more joyous than embarrassed, and he was bended to erimentally at that wonder woman who was on the neighbor's side. "In fact, I was bad to believe—"

"Oh, I say," laughed Carey with a flush that was more joyous than embarrassed, and he was bended to erimentally at that wonder woman who was on the neighbor's side. "In fact, I was bad to believe—"

"It was your own intuition," said Miss Wilson demurely, "I only spoke of it to your brother. Wilson, which is quite correct—when addressing a perfect stranger."

"I am glad you think me perfect," laughed Carey, "because the feeling is mutual and we can soon forget the stranger over—can't we?"

The other two had gone ahead and the girl tucked her arm into Carey's. "Oh, perhaps it can be done in time," she agreed flippantly.

REMOVAL OF OFFICE FROM COURT HOUSE RECOMMENDED

Confusion Annoying To Officials, Persons On Business, Grand Jury Says

MAY TERM ADJOURNED

In its final report to Judge James C. Dedman last Thursday, the grand jury of the May term of Nicholas circuit court recommended that offices outside the court house be found for the relief office and that CWA work be obtained in repairing the court house.

The full report of the grand jury was as follows:

"We, the grand jury at the May term of circuit court, have been in session four days, returned 7 indictments and examined 19 witnesses.

"We have inspected the county jail and find it kept in good condition and recommend that some plasterer and papering be done in the dwelling, which is now in good shape.

"We further recommend that the CWA make its next project to overhaul and repair the court house of all necessary work, if possible.

"We recommend a suitable place be fixed for the relief office other than their present quarters in the court house in Carlisle. We feel there is a congestion very annoying to the officials and to those who have business at offices in the court house, due to the fact that there is a constant need for more space accommodating the persons who are seeking relief.

"A. A. Dale, foreman."

The May term of court adjourned for the term last Friday afternoon with the disposition of several equity cases by Judge Dedman. Of the seven indictments returned by the grand jury, none of them were against persons who were in jail and who were tried during the term.

A jury last Thursday awarded Miss Louise Bannister, of Paris, damages of $800 against Roscoe Miller, of Fleming county, as the result of injuries sustained in an automobile accident on the Maysville and Lexington pike Thursday afternoon of last Carlisle road, in May, 1933. Miss Bannister, who was injured when the Miller automobile collided with the car in which Miss Bannister was riding, sustained a concussion of the brain, a fractured jaw, and other injuries. The automobile driven by C. W. Fiske, of Denver, Colorado, who was hurling the child to Cincinnati, was surrendered.

The five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. McCoy, of Salem, Montgomery county, was killed instantly Sunday afternoon when he darted from the school house into the path of a truck driven by Walter Travis, who went to the home of Mr. Bannister. The youth had been wading in a creek at the side of the road.

Marjory Adams, 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Adams, of Cynthiana, was knocked down by an automobile on Pike street in Cynthiana Saturday morning but was not injured. The car was driven by "Speck" Harney, Mr. Adams, who applied his brakes and avoided running over the child. The little girl is a grandchild of Mrs. Ida Collyer, of Carlisle.

4,003 Work In State On Relief Projects

Ninety-four projects in the new work relief program of the State relief administration were under way Saturday, employing approximately 4,003 workers, Roland R. Pyne, State engineer, announced.

Mr. Pyne expected the program to be in full swing by Monday or Tuesday of next week, upon appointment of project officers for the majority of the projects in the State, he said. Thus far the approval of the numerous projects which have been submitted have been made to the state office. Mr. Pyne estimated that the 94 projects now in operation 20,000 persons would be employed.

While all the work done is given to persons who are on the relief lists of their respective counties, the workers will be allowed to work only enough hours to earn more than they would receive from direct relief. The state commission believes that the slight increase will be needed for additional food and clothing for the persons at work. Thus the worker's needs in supporting dependents will be supplemented by his work time. All work will be paid for by check.

Two Tots Killed When Hit by Cars

Bain And Montgomery County Children Victims, Marjory Adams, Of Cynthiana, Unharmed

Two children were killed when struck by motor vehicles and another was struck but not injured in counties adjoining Nicholas Saturday and Sunday.

Her head battered against the pavement with such revolution of the wheel of an automobile in which she was caught when she was struck by the motor, Cleora Cole, 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cole, of Owingsville, was killed about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon on the Midland Trail a mile west of Owingsville in front of the home of her aunt. HEAVY CUT MADE IN FUNDS FOR RELIEF WORK IN KENTUCKY

June Allotment Less Than Half Of Amount Allowed For May, Wilcox Hears

WILL REDUCE FORCES

Federal relief funds for Kentucky were slashed further Tuesday afternoon when State director, Lucien Phillips W. Wilcox, state chairman, received a telegram from Washington informing he approved and that the present program be cut down sharply.

In place of the $1,000,000 a month that Kentucky at one time was receiving for relief, Harry L. Hopkins, federal administrator, wired the Kentucky commission Tuesday that the June allotment would be $500,000. This will be supplemented by about $150,000 from state liquor and beer taxes, Mr. Wilcox estimated. The May allotment of federal funds was $700,000.

Mr. Wilcox said that "apparently the government's patience is at an end." Kentucky workers have been given to state authorities that Kentucky must carry a large share of the state's relief burden.

The immediate effect of the reduced allotment was the cancellation, at least for the present, of plans for hiring 20,000 persons during the week. The policy of retrenchment will extend to a variety of activities included in the relief program.

The stimulus in rural areas was eased somewhat by work relief grants, which this month are beginning to produce food which may be used by the destitute families. There are 30,000 farms in Kentucky, the state, mostly in rural areas.

In addition to ordering that no further projects be authorized, the state commission set out to make each of the 30 area headquarters operate with a skeleton force and to give vacations without pay.

The local relief committees Wednesday had received instructions concerning Nicholas county's quota for June.

Neal Bowman Given Death Penalty By Mercer Jury

Neal Bowman, Ohio desperado, was given a death sentence by a jury in the Mercer circuit court at Harrodsburg last Thursday on a charge of slaying Conner Franklin, 11, his companion in campaign robberies in Kentucky and other states. The body of Franklin was found in Herrington Lake.

Bowman was accused of the murder by Stanley Mercer, 19, another companion, who said the youth was slain because he had talked too much. Bowman denied the killing and charged his accuser with the murder.

Bowman made a last minute personal appeal to the jury. "I know I have done wrong," he declared to the jury, "but I don't believe in killing a man, and I didn't kill Conner Franklin. I'd shoot him in front." He added that "I don't give anything I can't take," and asked pleas for mercy for the murder of Franklin and not for the things I have done before I came here."

Bowman escaped from the Ohio state hospital for criminal insane at Lima on last Christmas Day and committed numerous robberies and holdups before he was shot. The bandits escaped.

Deering Given Sentence For Murder Of Father

James Deering, 48 years old, was given a life sentence by a jury in the Fleming circuit court at Flemingsburg late Friday afternoon on a charge of shooting to death his father, Walt Deering, during a family quarrel at Nepton last November. The jury which returned the verdict deliberated 90 minutes.

James Deering, the father of three children, claimed self defense during his trial, but a preponderance of testimony and a death-bed statement of the father indicated that the elder Deering was not armed when he was shot by James Deering. Evidence at the trial indicated that ill feeling had existed between the father and son for some time, although they had continued to live in the same house.

Irvine Patrolman Slain By Four Armed Bandits

Four beastly-armed men who fired volleys of shots from their automobile as they drove through the principal streets of Irvine and nearby Ravenna created a reign of terror Sunday afternoon which resulted in the fatal wounding of George Carroll, 24, Irvine patrolman. Carroll, one of four officers who commandeered a passing motorist and made a gun battle with the four gunmen, was taken from the running board of the car occupied by the armed men.

After the bandits had been driven through Irvine firing at will and frightening pedestrians, the officer jumped from a taxicab and started in pursuit. Unable to hail the car, Carroll jumped from the running board of the taxicab onto the running board of the bandit car as the two machines raced along a street in Ravenna.
