MUSIC OF THE RAIN

When the last song's passed from singing
And the last sweet echo dies,
I shall hear the great rain singing
In its passage from the skies.
I shall bring to me its music,
And that music shall be sweet
With the rhythmical beating,
Of a thousand elfin feet.

On the roof of a silver pather,
On the path a splash of sound;
Music soft and fairy chatter
Running all along the ground;
Gutters flowing, too, in music,
And that tide along the roof,
Oh! what mystery is woven
In its pattern and its woof.

As a mother to her bosom
Clasps and folds her restless child
Her rain with tender soothing
Stays my beating heart and wild:
Pills my soul with pulsing echoes
Of a melody that seems
Like a silver harp of beauty
On a hill of fairy dreams.
