GEORGIE BLAKE was seeing Tabor Potter home from the Young People's Dramatic club rehearsal of "The Old Red Mill." His words of cheer—the iron Horse—shuddered as its racing motor made the guys and gals sweating with anguished roars. They were parked before Mabel's House.

"Well, personally," Georgie was saying, "I don't see why Mortimer Jenks is a villain."

"You mean?" Mabel answered with a tinge of hoarse, "Mortimer is a finished actor."

"Finished is right," Georgie growled "thick headed. The Iron Horse roared at the night as Georgie nursed the throttle.

"Who's he, I'd like to know, to get the best part in the whole show?"

"Mortimer is a true Thespian," Mabel replied with dignity. "He's a born actor, and he attends an extensive prep-school. But you should know, you have one of the best parts."

"Sure," Georgie cried cynically, "I should know. Do I get a chance to make love to you? Only twice and I get slapped both times. And in the way, when you start slapping, go easy. And remember that's a big place and they take those love scenes with this Mortimer so seriously."

A light appeared in an upper window of Mabel's house, a light which she quickly observed.

"Well, good-night, Georgie," she said with sweet womanly patience. "You mustn't be all bad, I guess."

"Still?" Georgie yelped. "And you make those things worse, sweet?"

Mabel stamped her foot. "Georgie Blake!" she cried in a low tone, "look when and where and with whom I do it."

"Mabel?"

A heavy masculine voice cleared the night air. The moon-light gleamed on Mr. Potter's bald head in the upper window. "Mabel, get right in the house and come in the house. It's after one o'clock."

"Yes, pater," Mabel called. There was a sweet sadness in her voice. "Good night, Georgie, I'm coming."

"Good night, Mabel, he's refined," Mabel screeched above the din.

"Good night, Georgie," replied "and when I speak him he'll be granulated!"

Mr. Mabel Potter was drawing his overcoat about her in such a manner that it could be noticed that he was warm. The Iron Horse roared away down the street leaving its broken The neighbors turned thankfully in their beds and went to sleep.

The last week of rehearsals Georgie hoiled in oil. It was apparent to him that Mabel was going for one of her way to make "The Old Red Mill" a success. He was hard enough watching his girl, or the girl he hoped was his, falling love with a story as a stage but when she let the story see her . . . Savagely Georgie planned a revenge.

On the fateful night the town hall auditorium was packed to the doors. Mabel was lovely in a new gown and Mortimer Jenks hovered about her until Georgie's red hair seized on red.

The performance went succes-fully toward a sterling third act. Mabel and Mortimer kissed and cooed until Georgie was nearly bereft of his senses. Under the lash of his inflamed brain made his part so real the audience positively hated him and when Mortimer made his dramatic entrance to rescue Mabel from Georgie's clutches there was a shout of acclaim.

Silence settled on the house. Tense, the audience waited for the hero to settle the villain's hash. Although Georgie cringed before the triumphant and handsome Mortimer, he was grifting to himself, "I'll do it, by heck! I'll do it!"

Mortimer kissed Mabel and then advanced to Georgie. "Do you not defeat?" he thundered with deserving in sonorous.

Every head turned toward Georgie. It was his cue to mutter, "Curses, new! I'm done!" but he was so scared he overpowered by Mortimer. Instead, he was so scared he forgot the lines and an exclaim time that wasn't in the script.

"Come and get it, Lollypop!"

He ran out of the wings and for Mortimer's nose. He crossed with his right, and as Mortimer ducked and parried he moved by a foot. There was a loud frown in the audience. Mortimer Jenks was every where at once. Georgie had a left hook but he was too quick for all the fists he was before him. A roar of laughter swept across the vision and the curtain came down to thunderous applause.

Georgie dressed more quickly and hurried home. He was in a bad mood. Mabel would have thoroughly scored him through behind lips. "Come on and I'll see you home."

"No, thank you." Mabel spoke from the heights of a Greek goddess. "Mortimer is seeing me home in his Green Eight."

"What?"

"Yes, Mr. Mortimer is the eastern prep-school boxing champion and the pater approves of him."

"Pa?"

"Pa's glad you sap?" she asked brusquely.

FRAZIER-LEMKE ACT VALID

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Cincinnati Monday upheld the constitutionality of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium legislation. It acted in an appeal of the Joint Stock Land Bank of Louisville from a decision of District Judge Ernest E. Dawson in Louisville, granting relief under the measure to William W. Radford. Howell, Ky., farmer, who had been adjudged a bankrupt.

Health Official Urges Examination Of Employees

It is very pleasing to know that the officials of Carlisle have recently passed an ordinance requiring all food handlers and employees to have health certificates. It is more than all handlers of food served to the public must be free from contagious and infectious diseases. The public served in this public health department are from the local health department, but cases only expect to accomplish worthy undertakings when and where the people is willing to cooperate. All public health workers know the value of health laws and their importance towards protecting the public at large.

It note that the majority of these examinations have been done by private physicians, who have given the health department splendid cooperation in this work.

I personally appeal to every owner or manager to see that their employees hereafter have their health certificate and do help us to fully carry out this ordinance which we intend to enforce.

All cooks, bakers and servants employed in private homes should be required by their employers to have such a certificate. We very often find that some contagious and infetious diseases are carried into our homes by employees. It requires little time and effort to protect our health if just a little thought and time is given to it. Make it your habit to find out through your local health officer about your health certificate.

C. T. Vogt, Sanitary Representative Bureau of Venereal Diseases, State Board of Health.

Lexington Market Has Sold 57,594,860 Pounds

In what will prove to be its final report of the year, the Burley Tobacco Growers' Cooperative Association of Lexington burley tobacco market have sold 57,594,860 pounds of the total for this market this season, at an average of $19.82 per hundred, $1,141,375.80 more than last year's $22,503.14, an average of $18.81 per hundred.

Although the offerings last week were the heaviest of any of the previous 7 weeks, the bidding was actively higher than any previous week this season, with the average for the 7 days ending with the sale of 1,000,000 pounds, averaged $23.05.

Deliveries last week were almost double those of the previous 7 days sales last Friday there was not more than 3 thousand pounds of the 1,000,000 pounds on the market. With other Burley markets closed during the entire season's, however, Lexington will get some resale tobacco from those centers which, combined with farmers tobacco will bring this market 250 or 300 million pounds, the 60-million mark.

Although Lexington's total sales this season will not approach those of last year, this market has sold an even greater per cent of the 1934 crop, since approximately 22 per cent of the total production will have been marketed in Lexington this season.

The 1934 burley crop, estimated at 350 or 360 million pounds, will be about 98 per cent sold. It is estimated. When resales are deducted from this year's crop, the total production probably will not exceed 340 or 250 million pounds, it is believed.

MENIFEE SHERIFF FREED

HARBINGER

(Nettie Ramsey)

I saw him as the rosy morning light
Touched with a mellow glow his ruddy breast.
As poised upon an ever green's tall crest
He swung a picture charming to the sight.
And trilling blithely from that lofty height
He sang his matin song right joyously—
Gay, dulcet notes of liquid melody.
Ere spreading graceful wings in buoyant flight.

After long months of dreary, frowning skies,
And dearth of feathered songsters' riveting cheer.
How glad a sound to greet the longing ear—
How rare a sight for winter-weary eyes . . .
Though nature may delay her burgeoning,
Dear Robin Redbreast, you have brought the spring!

FEBRUARY TERM OF COURT ENDS AFTER THREE DAYS SESSION

Illness Of Attorneys Cause Postponement Of Civil Cases Assigned

LOITERING IS RAPPED

Several civil suits set for Tuesday and Wednesday of this week were postponed until the May term of the Nicholas circuit court Monday on account of the illness of attorneys, and the February term ended after one of the shortest sessions in years.

Court was in session only three days, the grand jury being in session three days and the petit jury was in session but two days.

Judge Rhodes, presiding, there were more convictions than at any term in several years, seven persons having been given terms in the state reformatory and one in the county jail sentence. An unusual fact was that all of the prisoners were young, ranging from 20 years to 25 years. C. Dedman probabed sentences of two of them.

The grand jury adjourned last Tuesday afternoon and returned the following report to Judge James C. Dedman:

"We, the grand jury of Nicholas county for the February term of the Nicholas circuit court report that we have been in session three days and have examined many witnesses and returned 15 indictments.

"We examined the jail the next grand jury investigate and return indictments against all dog owners who have failed to secure licenses for this year.

"We further recommend that the fiscal court take necessary steps to repair the roof on the main corridor of the court house.

"We further recommend that the Jailer of Nicholas County stop the congregating of people and take steps leading to the second floor of the court house and other secret places then by women and men of loose and immoral character.

"We have examined the county jail and find same to be in good condition and well kept.

"We desire to thank the Sheriff, his deputy, Commonwealth's Attorney and County Attorney for their efficiency and kindness displayed in our investigations.

"All of which is respectfully submitted.

"E. W. Morgan, foreman."

President May Demand Veterans Yield Pensions

Leaders in congress said Friday that if veterans press for immediate payment of the $2,100,000,000 bonus, President Roosevelt plans to insist that they yield all claims to new pension benefits to the end.

The legislators, who declined to be quoted by name at present, said the President remarked that even though such a bargain might not actually be binding in the future, it would constitute at least a deterrent to new demands.

It was emphasized that the President would not insist on a bargain that pass a bonus bill even under pressure.

Opinion in congress as to what will happen to the bonus bills is still divided. Bonus advocates predict victory; some administration leaders say the drive will be beaten, while others foresee a possible compromise.

One leader said that the President in adopting his attitude on pensions, has an eye on one of the largest potential expenditures in the future involving more than 3,000,000 veterans.

At present men who served in the World War have no outright pensions as veterans, although the Veterans administration said in the fiscal year 1935 a total of $94,670,524 must be spent for pensions to survivors of dead World War veterans, $5,182,323 as compensation to survivors, $186,469,149 for disability compensation to veterans, $12,388,552 for disability pensions and $2,951,000 as retired pay to emergency officers.

These sums total $243,598,540. At times goes on they will increase, but they do not include a plan pensions granted to a man for the pure and simple reason that he served in the World War.

CHILD'S DEATH PROBED

James Herfitt, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Herfitt, died at his home in Mt. Sterling last Wednesday afternoon. The child and his brother and sister became ill after eating some candy Wednesday morning, but the other children recovered in a short time. Officials said the candy might have contained poison. A postmortem was held and the contents of the child's stomach was sent to Lexington for analysis. George Benton is being held pending an investigation.

New York State raised its gas tax from three to four cents.

HARDING'S BIRTHDAY

Tuesday was the birthday anniversary of Warren G. Harding, President of the United States, who died in office in 1923. Flags were flown at half mast in his honor.

Removal Of Six Officials Of Clay County Urged

Impeachment of five officials of Clay county and removal number of others following the report was recommended last week by Adjutant General H. H. Denhardt in a report submitted to Governor Ruby Laffoon.

The report charged conflict between the sheriff and an automobile theft ring. It was based on investigations made by Gen. Elmer W. Carter when national guard troops were called into Clay county.

The officials named in the report are Circuit Judge W. E. Begley, of London; Commonwealth's Attorney Sylvester Lyons, of London; William Cooper, County Attorney of Clay; Steve V. Sizemore, County Clerk of Clay, and Tolman Burdette, Police Judge of Manchester.

The report also charges Judge A. T. W. Manning, former circuit judge of the district, and W. V. Stacey, of London, clerk of the federal court for the Eastern District of Kentucky, in connection with the ring.

Sheriff Ass Little, of Menifee county, was cleared Tuesday in the slaying of C. O. Baldwin, Br., of Hillsboro, Ohio, who was slain by the officers near Frenchburg, after Sheriff Little had been notified by Magoffin county authorities to stop Baldwin. Sheriff Little said he fired at Baldwin after the latter shot at him.

Award Contracts For Bus Routes

County Board Receives Bids For Transportation Of Pupils Of Consolidated Schools

At a meeting of the Nicholas county board of education Saturday, bids were received and contracts awarded for the transportation of students of the consolidated schools for the ensuing year.

The bids were made lower than last year, a saving of from $5 to $10 per month, in some instances.

Walter Baker, succeeding O. H. Gallup, at $90 per month; Clyde Pierson, succeeding H. C. Gaffin, at $80.00 per month.

Earl Quinn—W. H. Baker, present bus driver, at $65 per month; Herschel Quinn, succeeding Carl Baker, at $74.50 per month.

Many more bids were made for the various routes were submitted, and most of the bids were lower. On one of the Headquarters routes a bid of $65 per month was received.

Contracts for operation of bus routes in small districts which have been merged with other schools in this town will be awarded later. It has not been definitely determined what schools will be merged this year.

A representative of the state department of education will meet with the county board of education Saturday to determine what schools will be merged.

Nicolas Post Exceeds Quota

We're Than 100 Veterans Attend Meeting Held In Legion Club Rooms Saturday Night

More than 100 World War veterans gathered in the rooms of the American Legion club rooms Saturday night for a meeting of the state and district officers.

Speakers at the meeting were Mike Carlisle, state commander; Tom Harder, state adjutant; C. R. Florence, state national guard; Joe Jones, state membership chairman, and Ernest Hunter, state and district commander.

At the meeting it was announced that Nicholas Post had exceeded its membership quota, one of the first posts in the state to exceed the quota this early in the year. The quota for this post called this year was 90, and at the meeting Saturday night it was reported that 102 veterans have paid their annual dues for the year. The membership for this year is expected to reach 125, the highest in the history of the post.

New Deal Upheld In Gold Decision

Supreme Court Renders Five To Four Decision In First Supreme Court Test

The new deal scored a sweeping practical victory in the all-important gold cases Monday and emerged supreme from its first major Supreme Court test.

Dropping into another of its famous 5 to 4 lineups that caused President Roosevelt and his aides jitterbugs by to scrap their elaborate plans for counter-action, the high court upheld the contention that Congress had power to nullify provisions to pay gold contained in the bonds of private corporations.

That it had no such power where the government's own bonds were concerned but that federal bond holders could not show that they had suffered any damage.

The decision was rendered in the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad case, the gold clause in the bond involved in the present case.

Abruptly the announcement broke the tense atmosphere of anxiety and suspense in which it was delivered.

The markets, paralyzed by uncertainty for weeks, leaped into activity. Prices mounted by a margin and a volume of buying orders. Later profit-taking reduced them, but to a little bit, and left the predominant sentiment still bullish.

Despite new deal rejoicing and the report of market activity, the verdict was not unanimous. Four dissenters was stern.

"The Constitution is gone," declared Associate Justice McReynolds for the majority and added bitterly "This is Nero at his worst."

For the majority, Chief Justice Hughes read the verdict sustaining the gold clause. Associate Justices Stone, Brandeis, Roberts and Cardozo concurred.

Hughes immediately remarked that it was McReynolds, attorney-general under Woodrow Wilson, who delivered a barbed and emphatic dissent. He was joined by Associate Justices Van Devanter, Sutherland and Butler.

Hauptmann Given Death In Lindbergh Baby Case

After deliberating for more than seven hours, the jury trying Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the murder of the baby son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh on the night of March 1, 1932, returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree without recommendation. Justice Trenchard immediately imposed the death sentence automatically imposed in the Lindbergh case. The verdict was reached by the jury after a trial lasting 32 days at Flemington, N. J.

Judge Thomas Trenchard, who presided in the case, immediately imposed Hauptmann to die in the electric chair during the week of March 18. However, attorneys for the condemned German alien announced that an appeal from the sentence and several months will be required before Hauptmann's sentence can be carried into effect.

Hauptmann's calmness and assurance seemed to be the verdict was rendered and he wept in his cell. He denied his innocence and told some paper men if he had to go to the electric chair he would do so "like a man." He declared his innocence in clear and his "heart clean."
