U. K. Has Visual Aids Service Now Available

A visual aids service, consisting of a list of non-inflammable films, is now available to schools, including high schools, colleges, normal schools, Boy Scouts, 4-H Clubs, 4 H. C. groups, county agricultural agents, farm bureaus, 4-H Clubs, American Legion posts, clubs and lodges, industrial organizations, and other groups of educational character, said D. A. Ewan, director of the Extension Division, U. K., and other groups, through a publication just issued by the films, and published by the University of Kentucky Extension Division.

Films of educational value of visual aids is generally recognized by educators, and this service is being given to definite educational purposes in organized groups. The department of Extension, University of Kentucky maintains this film and slide library for the use of the schools of the state. A bulletin, "Visual Aids for Education," which gives a general statement of the policy governing the loan of these films and the method of ordering is available at the department of University Extension.

Films on art, biological sciences, home economics, physical sciences social studies, and general programs are available at the University of Kentucky department of Extension.

Red Cross Lays Roll Call For This Month

Preliminary reports from all sections of Kentucky indicate that the chapters of the American Red Cross are laying or have already laid the foundation for the annual roll call of that organization, the actual work of which is to be done between Armistice Day, November 11, and Thanksgiving Day, November 25. Supported entirely by voluntary contributions from its members, the Red Cross does not receive a penny from Washington. The entire work is governed entirely, a brief outline of the organization of which said the past week, by the in response to the roll call, being simply the enrollment of the membership and the payment of dues each year.

The Red Cross, of course, is not troubled with politics. The president of the United States under its charter, is president of the Red Cross. Near Admiral Cary T. Grayson is national chairman. Its accounts are audited by the War Department and accountings are made to Congress in the annual report of the Secretary of War.

In past years, Kentucky has known the Red Cross more because of the help it gave in times of storm and flood. Little account has been taken of its nursing service and its recent establishment of first aid services on high ways in cities and another.

"New And Better Era" Seen For Clay County

"A new and better era" for Clay county, scene of numerous feuds and lawless acts, was seen by Nat B. Sewell, director of post audits in the Treasury Department of Finance, who several years ago recommended a "new deal" for the county.

Sewell, in a report to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, made a recent inspection of the county and found evidence of the "tremendous strides made in the direction of things in the little mountain county." He expressed the hope this change would be "sustained and further accelerated by all concerned."

Sewell said:

"Please permit me to well said to you in Clay County, Kentucky, Thursday, October 14, 1937, Mr. Marcum transmitting the keys of the Treasury Department, the official associates for the occasion, expressed appreciation for been made in the management of the county's public affairs for the last fiscal year. The progress has been made in this short period in the handling of the county's affairs is certainly to be most encouraging, both to the public officials and to the people at large.

In February, 1933, Sewell, then State Inspector and Examiner, recommended that the Legislature abolish Clay county to end what he termed "the chaos which has made the county notorious for nearly half a century as a feud region."

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Will McRohan was treated to a very delightful surprise birthday dinner Sunday, the twenty-sixth birth anniversary. The guests honoring her with baked meats, at the noon hour a bounteous repast was spread.

The following friends and relatives were present: Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Finch, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Finch and two daughters, Earl Clay Finch, Imogene Finch, Brother Sunday Finch, Lida Pearl Finch, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Alexander and daughter, William Bailey Alexander, Miss Louise Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Gates, Edward Gates, Joe Gates, Jaime Gates, Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Tapp, Johnnie Tapp, Allie T. Tapp, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Finch and son, Mary C. Finch, Milford Finch, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Jones, Mr. W. C. Junior, Martha Mary Eveline and Eleanor R. Jones.

The day was very pleasantly spent, it being somewhat of a family reunion, as the guests were related to Mrs. McRohan.

Growebo and Chico Mark were fined $1,000 each in federal court here Friday for infringing on a copyright.

The wheat of men get fooled once in a while. An object treasured and proudly exhibited for 20 years by the Smithsonian Institution as "the world's oldest eye glass," reputedly grown in Persia, has been found to be merely a cleverly moulded piece of baked clay.

IN THE WAKE OF FLOOD

This scene was enacted many times in refugee centers established by the Red Cross during the Ohio Mississippi Valley flood. Inevitably floods bring the danger of disease and pestilence and consequently the large group of people are thrown together. The medical-health service of the Red Cross serves those stricken by disaster, and is maintained by membership funds contributed to the organization at the time of its annual Roll Call from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving.

Searchlight Spots 'Em

Distance may hold anything, unsuspected, until the searchlight swings on the sector and spots it.

Often we wonder why we can't serve. We sell, oiling through life, but we do think something smashes our plans. The big opportunity comes, and we haven't anything saved up for it.

Try shopping from the ads in this newspaper. Soon your experience will be the search-light that will show you what you have been jumping at, against or bumped in the mud. Then you'll keep sailing right along our ad course.

Earthen Jugs Were Coffins for Women of Ancient Russia

Erika, U. S. S. R.—Finding a cemetery in which women, in all their finery, were buried in earthen jug coffins when they died almost two thousand years ago, was the reward of a Russian boy workers building a dam.

The jugs, which were used as coffins sometimes in this far southern part of the Soviet Union, contained the new discovery reveals that women were really like, reports Tass, a Russian news agency. Not only were the women buried in their coffins were for women only, or all, but the jugs were placed in a pit buried in the ground with no shelter. The ceremony dates from the first to third centuries of the Christian era.
