THE FINE HARNESS STALLION,
ALAMO JR.,
Will make the season of 1891 at the stable on the Kentucky Central Railroad, in Carlisle, Ky.
$5 To Insure a Living Colt.
ALAMO, JR., is a dark bay horse 15 hds. high, weighs 1,100 pounds, and is a horse of fine style and action. He is a son of ALAMO, 2:26, the sire of 30 in the list, and 50 with records, and is the sire of more producing sons than any horse that ever lived. He is a horse of great speed and endurance, and has proved himself a sire of great merit. He is a horse that will suit the people. I would like to have a call from all who have mares to breed. Let me say that a mare which I breed to a horse and does not get with foal, I will breed to that horse next season free of charge. Terms for the season, $10 to insure a living colt, or $15 to insure with foal. Colts to be delivered when they can be taken from their dams. Mares kept at reasonable rates, but will not be responsible for accidents or escapes. Parties bringing mares from a distance will please notify me a few days before they arrive, so that I can have hay and grain on hand. Parties failing to notify me will have to pay for hay and grain at regular rates. Parties wishing to breed to this horse will please call on me at my residence in Carlisle, Ky.
At the same time I will offer for sale Jersey Bull
Henry and General,
Both registered in American Jersey Cattle Club. Henry is a handsome solid color, and is a fine stock getter. He is a son of Jersey Lily's Prince, and his dam is Lily Rose, a daughter of Jersey Lily, and is a fine milker. General is a handsome fawn color, and is a son of Jersey Lily's Prince, and his dam is Lily Rose, a daughter of Jersey Lily, and is a fine milker. Both bulls are gentle and will be sold cheap. GET HOMESICK.

Homesick for Your God, Homesick for Heaven.

From the Immanuel Country Into the Wilderness of City—Dr. Talmage's Appeal to Young Men.

In Talmage on Sunday called his sermon: "The Homesick Boy." He said the text was from the parable of the prodigal son: "I will arise and go to my father and go to my father."

There is nothing like hunger to take the conceit out of a man. The prodigal was one day without money and without food, and he was homesick. He had been many a day defeated and so much for lack of ammunition as for lack of food. It is hard fighting on an empty stomach. Napoleon said one of the best things in his army was the commissariat. "Leave a common dish."

Again, I notice that this resolution of the young man of the text was founded on the memory of his father's house. He remembered the comfortable home and what he had so enthusiastic in possession of the world. It is not distinctly as good to be born in a good family as to be born in a poor family. The trouble is that many of those who are born in good families do not appreciate the fact. They are apt to become careless and indifferent, and take of many things more exhilarating." It is for this reason that I have never wanted to be born in a fine, fashionable family. I thought I could be better in a log cabin. And I thought in this unvantage to-day there may be some young man who is struggling with poverty, or working at some disagreeable employment who should read these words and say: "Well, if Talmage could get along in the world, I guess I can." Now, I am not going to tell you that I had no hard work. I will arise and go to my father."

A lad at fifteen years of age was sent out into the sea, went out too far from shore, and was caught in a storm. A ship bound for India passed by and took him on board. He was a long time in India, and he was a long time coming back. He was homesick. He had been a long time away from his father's house, and he had been a long time away from his father's heart, and he had been a long time away from his father's table, and he had been a long time away from his father's God, and he was homesick. He had spent his money in sinful indulgences, and he had no money to buy his passage home, and he had no friends to help him, and he was homesick. He had been a long time away from his father's house, and he had been a long time away from his father's heart, and he had been a long time away from his father's table, and he had been a long time away from his father's God, and he was homesick. He had spent his money in sinful indulgences, and he had no money to buy his passage home, and he had no friends to help him, and he was homesick.

In the time of Mary, the persecutor, there was a certain minister of Christ who had hidden in her house for the sake of safety. One day the persecutor and the persecutor said: "Where is your brother? The Christian woman said: "I am sure that truth and God will see the brother." The persecutor said: "Where is your brother?" The Christian woman said: "There is no brother here." "Ah," she said: "you lied in the place and you will see the brother." As I take up the subject I am sure there are many who are on the limits. We would not have gone on around the old place each summer and we would not have had the old home to go home there. So no reason why I should go home. I have plenty of money and I have no business engagements why should I go home? Ah! it was because you had no heart to go home.

Some men sneer and say: to me: "Why do you not let the past and the state of the human soul?" Why don't you let the past go? Why don't you let it utterly sweep away and take of many more exhilarating?" It is for this reason that I have never wanted to be born in a fine, fashionable family. I thought I could be better in a log cabin. And I thought in this unvantage to-day there may be some young man who is struggling with poverty, or working at some disagreeable employment who should read these words and say: "Well, if Talmage could get along in the world, I guess I can." Now, I am not going to tell you that I had no hard work. I will arise and go to my father."
