DYNAMITE USED.
The First National Bank of Liberty, Missouri, Robbed.
The Bank Almost Completely Gutted, Thousands of Dollars Being Carried Off—Two Thieves Treat Heroes and a Carriage and Team Taken Charge.
LIBERTY, Mo., Nov. 28.—Expert workmen have been busy all day and night and the latest approved tools, unavailable in cracking the big safe of the First national bank, of this city, and so curing a ram of money, which, though not definitely known, is thought to be in the neighborhood of the estimate of the bank, is variously estimated at from $50,000 to $75,000.
The burglars were scared away before they had secured the booty, and did not get into the reserve vault of the safe, in which was $12,000 more, principally in gold. They had dynamite and a fuse attached to this but, for some unknown reason, had withdrawn, omitting it all.
The first intimation of the robbery came at 10:30 o'clock, Monday morning when County Treasurer Riley, who has an office in the bank, went to the vault to get some money for his office. When he opened the room he saw that the wall of the building was caving in, and on investigation he found that there and in the vault proper the floor was littered with the debris of what almost wrecked both buildings. He at once gave an alarm and soon search it was learned that burglars had been at work through the night. They had gained entrance to the bank by means of a rear door, which had opened the back door without any handling to the room on which was the vault. They then proceeded to the vault, which is a large one, and with a storage of powder and fuse and time locks which had been left open by the bank officials, they secured a good deal more to the burglar proof compartment. The only money found in the outside of this door was $100.
They used dynamite to affect an entrance to the burglars access to all the money which the bank had in cash. Saturday night the sheriff and a posse of merchants on that day became alarmed at the size of the crowds that were coming to town to do their trading, and, on the floor of the bank were left thousands of dynamite and a number of tools, showing that the men had been at work for some time, and what four suspicious looking characters had been seen in town on saturday afternoon and Saturday evening. Who were the strangers. The men old men and two young men, and they had with them and brought a large quantity of party just before dark, and this was used for blowing the dynamite to deaden the sound. Leaving the bank the burglars went to the livery stable of Joseph Nash and stole a carriage and a team of horses, with which they made their escape. The sheriff and a posse started them so far as the Missouraire river, but there lost all trace of them. Nash's horses were found in an almost dying condition, having been driven almost furious. How a team of the men was last, but the officials of Platte and Kansas City are working on the case.

A BULL FIGHT.
The Matador Plunged His Sword Into One of Them.
The Relieving Stampede the Other Three Charge Him Also, and, Both Bulls and Spectators Become Mixed—One Person Killed and Two Injured.
RALEIGH, Mex., Nov. 26.—Hon. Jas. Hargis, of Hargis, about forty miles southeast of this city, arrived here Saturday morning after a ten hours' hard ride across the rough mountains.
He brought the news of a bull fight that occurred at Arteaga Thursday, and the object of his visit was to secure medical aid for the unfortunate victims.
The matador, or slayer of the bulls, was Jose Manuel Lopez, a darling Mexican vaquero. At 4 p. m. there were about 5,000 spectators in the amphitheatre around the arena.
Three bulls had been in readiness took their positions and the bulls were turned in. The scene was full of excitement, and the crowd was furnished with plenty of amusement by the activity of the bulls and the matadors. In the early stages of the struggle matadors were working up the bulls into a state of excitement preparatory to the final and last bull.
This bull, the animal a threat between the matadors with the sword, but the wound was not a fatal one. The bellowing and snorts of the wounded bull aroused stampeded the other bulls, and they charged upon the crowd, creating a panic among the lower portion of the spectators. The barricades which are for the protection of the spectators. The barricades gave way and the bulls were practically into the crowd of people, goring right and left by the sharp horns.
In their excitement the spectators had overlooked the fact that the bulls, in the frenzy, the people are divided into two general classes, of the first comprising the ordinary persons, the receipts of which are $1,000,000 and the second, arising from the issue of national bank notes for the use of the government, while the second, arising from the issue of national bank notes and treasury notes issued to avoid the assets of the treasury, does not affect the available balance.
For the first of these classes the figures are approximately correct, but for the second, the receipts are divided into two general classes of which the first comprising the ordinary receipts of $1,000,000 and the second class there was an excess of nearly $10,000,000 of receipts in the treasury, and as one of $10,000,000 in the beginning of the year, and to $155,774,000 at the end of the year, showing $139,000,000, and of the latter $113,000,000 in gold.
There was much law attached the efforts of the department to maintain a gold reserve in consistent with the safety of the money disbursements of the government, in view of the heavy disbursements of the treasury, and the fact that $346,000,000 of United States notes and $155,000,000 of silver, and $1,500,000,000 of bank notes, are now outstanding against the United States were not drawn from the treasury.
There was a gratifying improvement in the condition of the banks, as compared with the previous year, the number having increased from $3,500,000 to $4,000,000, and the capital from $60,000,000 to $67,000,000.
The report of the comptroller of the currency shows that the total number of banks in operation on October 31, 1892, was 3,756, with a capital of $67,000,000, circulation $178,000,000, deposits $1,000,000,000, and loans and discounts $1,000,000,000.
