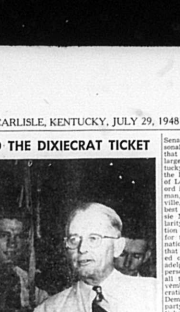
THEY HEAD THE DIXIECRAT TICKET



NOMINATED BY THE "STATES RIGHTS" Democrats as their Presidential candidate at their "rebel" convention in Birmingham, Ala., Gov. J. Strom Thurmond (left), South Carolina, congratulates his running mate, Gov. Fielding Wright, of Mississippi. They will carry their fight against President Truman through the South. (International Soundphoto)

Senator John Sparkman has a personal following and a popularity that have gained him most of the large independent votes in Kentucky and a lot of votes among the Democrats. Truman's Mother of Louisville has had a good record in his first term as Congressman, is well liked and, in Louisville, the Republicans have their best political organization. However Meade has a personal popularity that gained him the election the last time and his fight for the veterans has gained him national recognition. It seems that these candidates were absent of re-election until Philadelphia Convention if Barkley's personal popularity may change all this. We will know in November. If it doesn't, the Democratic strategy may have been cockeyed from laughing. Usually, party candidates on a Presidential ticket are picked for the sections they represent. Thus, as Truman is from the Middle West, a candidate for vice-president would have been picked from New York, Pennsylvania, or California because of their geographical location. Barkley, the strongest man in the Democratic party, is from Kentucky, the neighboring state of Missouri and Kentucky has just eleven electoral votes. I do not believe, as some people do, that the Dixiecrats actually they could not win and that Barkley could win Senate and House seats for them in Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois. I think the keynote speech he made instilled a fighting spirit in the party and made him the most popular figure in the Convention. When he made his speech accepting the nomination for the presidency, his nomination for vice-president was a foregone conclusion.

BANDON SHOTS—Factors that have a direct bearing on the election: Wallace's Third Party will draw from the liberals and radicals who experts agree, have been voting the Democratic ticket. This will have a direct bearing. Now close states as California, New York and a few other states not because he will get enough votes from the Democrats to move a Republican victory in those states. The southern rebellion on state's rights will not have a great effect on the electoral votes of South but will have publicity and psychological bearing on the votes of the nation and will be detrimental to the Democratic party. Mogg and more people throughout the Nation, and particularly in Kentucky have started voting for individual candidates and not just along party lines. This will be more noticeable this election than it has ever been.

Sportsmen's Notes

In an effort to improve fishing in Cumberland river above the Falls the Division of Game and Fish recently placed a truckload of fingerling black bass fingerlings in this stream. The Fisheries department expects the white bass to offer another species of game fish for the fishermen, while the buffalo fingerlings in years to come will offer an excellent fish food and the larger ones are expected to give trotline fishermen more sport.

Look upon every day as the whole of life, not merely as a section; and enjoy and improve the present without wishing, through haste, to rush on to another.—Richter

Capitol Comments

David M. Porter

The primary will soon be over and it will be good for the people with national issues instead of a fight of state and local personalities. I believe that elections are won by the people and not by leaders and their effort on popularity and not just through the efforts of political leaders during the election year.

The Democratic's meeting in Convention at Philadelphia seemed to be confused and confounded most of them confessed they had rather nominate someone besides Truman for the presidency. Many party leaders who were delegates at the Convention, have stated to me that they were certain if Barkley had permitted them to nominate him for the presidency they had enough votes pressured for him to assure his nomination.

I personally believe, and many of them seem to think, the most acceptable ticket to the people would have been Barkley and Jimmy Roosevelt running on the liberal platform of Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal policies. Roosevelt is dead and you cannot run his ashes. Barkley fought for, and pushed through, much of his New Deal legislation and many of his social reforms has been prominent in the eyes of the public and is liked by both labor and capital, conservatives and liberals, one will be acceptable to the Southern "states-rights" ers. Jimmy Roosevelt would carry the prestige of his father and his father's name.

The ticket, however is Truman and Barkley. Barkley is a marvelous campaigner of the old school variety but is not one man. His personality and fighting speeches can sway audiences but whether it will hold them at election time is an uncertain factor. Truman is unfortunate in having no gift of oratory or a vote-getting name personality. His fight with the Republican House and Senate hurt him in the eyes of the people. They do not seem to realize that he was unable to carry out many of his policies because of the antagonism of the Republican Congress. They only know that he did not carry out. Then too, there are other factors against the Democrats. Anyone who followed in the footsteps of a man as popular with the people as Franklin D. Roosevelt would suffer by comparison. The unsettled times and the unrest of the people that always follows a war have contributed to unrest, unrest against him. All these things are factors that seem to turn the point toward a Republican victory in November.

Here in Kentucky Barkley's nomination may make a decided difference in the outcome of Kentucky's election. Barkley has been to Kentucky what Roosevelt was to the Nation. His popularity was clearly demonstrated when "Happy" Chandler ran against him with the aid of the powerful Chandler machine. Barkley's more than 80,000 majority was brought about not only by the aid of Roosevelt but by Barkley's popularity and his service to the people over a number of years.

Before the Convention and Barkley's nomination as Vice-President on the Democratic ticket, it seemed certain that Kentucky would go Republican

In just two years we've built and sold more fine cars than any other new manufacturer in automobile history.

Why? Because America felt in love with the KAISER and the FRAZER on sight. Folks are streaming into Kaiser-Frazer showrooms and learning from present owners how dependable these two great cars are. They're learning—from people who drive them—how soundly they are built ... how economical they are ... how much enjoyment there is owning one.

THESE ARE THE MOST-COPIED CARS IN AMERICA, road-proved by 250,000 owners in two billion miles of driving.

Because plenty of Americans insist on comfort, convenience, style and value, traditional leaders had to "move over"—as Kaiser-Frazer became the fourth largest manufacturer of motor cars in the world in two short years.

Why wait? Enjoy your new car this summer. You'll get fair treatment and highest trade-in allowance.

DID BELLARMINE WHISPER TO JEFFERSON?

Nearly two centuries apart they lived—Robert Bellarmine, a Catholic theologian, and Thomas Jefferson, an American patriot. Yet their pens moved in such phrases so similarly sonorous and so like in their slender, we Catholics, whether at least whisper the great theologian did not reach the ear of the great statesman as he pondered and wrote his historic document.

Read the extracts below from the Declaration of Independence, 1776, and from Cardinal Robert Bellarmine, 1576.

"All men are created equal; they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights" (Declaration).

"All men are equal, not in wisdom or in grace, but in the essence and nature of mankind." "Political right is from God and necessarily inherent in the nature of man" (Bellarmine).

"To secure these rights governments are instituted among men" (Declaration).

"It is impossible for men to live together without someone to care for the common good. Men must be governed by someone lest they be willing to perish" (Bellarmine).

"Governments are instituted among men deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed" (Declaration).

"He depends upon the consent of the multitude to constitute over itself a king, consul, or other magistrate. This power is indeed from God but vested in a particular ruler by the council and election of men" (Bellarmine).

"Whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute a new government. Prudence indeed will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient reasons" (Declaration).

"For legitimate reasons the people can change the government to an aristocracy or a democracy or vice versa. "The people never transfers its power to a king so completely but that it reserves to itself the right of receiving back this power" (Bellarmine).

"Government by consent of the governed" has been Catholic teaching down through the ages. The 16th century doctrine of the "Divine Right of Kings" was, and is, as repellent to the Catholic as it is to the American; and when one is both Catholic and American, it is just twice as repellent. So here's to St. Robert Bellarmine and to Statesman Thomas Jefferson? May their philosophers ever govern our land and may they conquer those poor lands where "dictators still can do no wrong" and where no man dare say them "nay".

If it's anything Catholic, ask a Catholic!

MEMORY VERSE

"The word of our God shall stand forever."—Isaiah 40:8.

fore, who was of a noble house and son of Nerian, and Baruch wrote what Jeremiah told him—every word.

Baruch was the type of man that could be depended on to do the job thoroughly. He was working for Jeremiah, and Jeremiah was doing what his God told him to do, and Baruch was therefore doing God's work, too.

Now there may be some young people who study this lesson who will not be secretaries, and they should remember Baruch, a little known Bible character, who was a good and faithful secretary to whom his employer could depend absolutely, and resolve to be like him.

When the writing was done, Jeremiah told Baruch that as he was a prisoner he could not go to the temple and read the writings to the priests, the princes and the people, so Baruch must undertake that task.

Baruch went to the temple, as Jeremiah commanded, and read the scroll on this sixth day of Jehoiakim, son of Gemariah, son of Shaphan, based the words of the book, he went into the king's palace, into the scribe's chamber, where the princes sat, and he declared to them all the words Baruch had read.

The princes said Baruch must tell it to them, and he did so. The people had been afraid when they heard Jeremiah's prophecy of what was about to befall their country and the princes also were afraid and said they must tell the king.

The princes told Baruch that he and Jeremiah should go into hiding, and they would take the roll to King Jehoiakim. They found the king in the winter palace, and after they had told him what the roll contained, he asked that it be brought to him. It was fetched and Jehudi read it to the king. There was a fire burning in a brazier before the king, and he cut the roll with a penknife, and bit by bit he dared to cast the word of God into the fire until it all was consumed by the flames.

Neither the king nor his servants were in the least concerned by what they had heard or what the king had done. Only three men at the court tried to prevent the burning of the roll.

When word was brought to Jeremiah of the king's deed, he had Baruch write it all over again and add to it, and to say in it that Jehoiakim the king should have no one to succeed him and would ever sit on the throne of David.

After Jehoiakim was dead and Jehoiachin, reigned in his stead, neither he nor his people listened to the words of Jeremiah, although he told them that the word of God was the truth.

Even though the Egyptians approached, and Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylonia, came and took Jehoiachin captive, they would not prevail.

Now we know of Baruch, he and Jeremiah, with all the Hebrew people and all Jewish literature they could find in great Babylon, they, too, thought they could forever destroy these great words of God, but it is not possible to eradicate such literature. The destroyers are gone, but the books still live, not only in the hearts of the world, but in reality. "The word of our God shall stand forever."

THE GARDEN

By John S. Gardner.

Every year, Kentucky lose some of their spring-grown potatoes through sprouting, but this is a perfectly natural process. Sometimes, instead of the tubers come "ripe" then rest awhile, then sprout to make seed for the next generation. The rest period is normally 6 weeks, but it may be lengthened by storing the potatoes cool, 60 degrees is the correct temperature.

However, in a house cellar or an outside cellar cooled with ice, the temperature is much higher than that depending on how cool the night is in July and August. Until the potatoes are put stays in the ground, even though covered by cultivation or mulch, in our own times. How much of what we receive will we give?

The fourth National Assembly of the United Church of Christ Women will be held in Midwaukee, Wis., from Nov. 30 to Dec. 3. Every woman who is a member of a Christian church is invited to attend.

BARUCH, THE SCRIBE

A MAN ON WHOM GOD COULD DEPEND

Scripture—Jeremiah 32:6-15; 36:37; 43:3-6.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

THE FIRST part of our lesson we will pass over briefly because it concerns only Jeremiah and his kin; merely mentioning Baruch, the hero of today's story. It tells of Jeremiah, the prophet, at the very end of the reign of the king of Judah—Zedekiah.

The word of the Lord came to Jeremiah, telling him his uncle's son would come to him and ask him to buy some land near Jerusalem to keep it in the family. The man came to Jeremiah and the prophet bought the land, and paid for it. Baruch, Jeremiah's secretary, witnessing the deed.

Now we go back to the reign of Jehoiakim, when Jeremiah was in prison because he had offended the king. It was not safe in those days to question the king's acts, any more than it is in these days in certain countries, to criticize the regime.

The Lord told Jeremiah to take a scroll and write down all the words the Lord had spoken to him, that the house of Judah might hear them read and maybe repent of their evil ways and avoid disaster.

Jeremiah called Baruch, there-

TIDBITS of KENTUCKY

By Dr. Gordon Wilson

One of my colleagues recently died in the neighborhood of the corner of my own home country diagonally opposite Fidelity. He returned to our college with a vantage feeling of the country of earlier times and has several times mentioned his sadness at the decline in population of his home section. In his youth this community was one of the most populous of our county. At one time there were three teachers in the school, with 125 pupils enrolled. To be the principal of that school was one of the honors that I well remember. Now there are only seven children of school age in that whole district, and they ride the bus daily to another community school. It is a sad sort of thing to record the passing of this community and many others like it.

Most country communities have declined in the same way, though few so completely. In the Jackson Purchase the importance of black tobacco once kept things going. Since there was no limitation on the crop, any family could put out as many acres as could be attended to. Many a farmer raised tobacco on every available acre and even bought corn and hay for his livestock. Much of this tobacco was mined by this process, long before the slump in black tobacco markets. Overseas markets became less important because some of the countries raised their own crop, and others twitched to hurley. Hundreds of farmers, trained to raise tobacco only, found themselves with farms and small incomes. The change in markets coincides quite exactly with the decline of the great automobile factories in Detroit and other Middle Western cities. Hundreds of Jackson Purchase people left their native community for the big cities. Need a new population in a few years. Young, hopeful high schools found themselves like my own Fidelity, with a new school building and not enough to fill it and not enough to be standardized. Another small high school is now being brought to Fidelity, but the two together are way below the correct number for a first-class high school. With intensive cultivation of smaller acreages and with a more diversified type of farming, the soil is better, the yields are higher, and the standards of living have been greatly improved. And, to add to the situation, the tractor has come to make one farm hand equal to more acres to be cultivated. These trends, plus the drop in the size of the family on the farm, have made whole areas of the Jackson Purchase less populous than they were before the turn of the century.

Not all sections of the state have felt this population trend, but many of the strictly agricultural counties have. Every phase of rural life has been affected by this trend. The small neighborhood has, of necessity, gone out of existence or combined with the adjacent one. Often this has been a great loss, perhaps to the younger generation, but it has been a tragedy for every tragic, middle-aged and older person, who have had to give up so much of their life's history and interest in the changing world of which we are all pawns. Right now in some places the transition has not been very smooth, and older people have failed to recognize that the "good old days" when every little neighborhood had a country store, a postoffice, and a one-roomed school can never return. The rural church has suffered probably most of all. Only because roads reach everywhere now can preachers attempt to hold together the numerous little congregations scattered in what used to be important places. R. F. D. has practically overwhelmed the country postoffice, the country store is often a makeshift until the car can go to the nearest town, and the deserted little schoolhouse must look rather tacky to the children as they pass by in the school bus to the consolidated school. Even progress can have a very serious side to it.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE,

"Love" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday.

The Golden Text is: "We have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him." (1 John 4:16).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the bible: "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love." (1 John 4:1, 8)

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "People go into extasies over the sense of a corporeal Jehovah, though with scarcely a spark of love in their hearts; yet God is love, and without Love, God, immortality cannot appear." (P. 212)
