EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

FRANKFORT, KY., Jan. 16th, 1892.

Dear Mercury:

We are now at the end of the third week of the session, and are just beginning to get down to business. After having to-day passed over the regular order of business, we are likely to pass nothing. The committees are now busy doing a fair amount of work on the several portions of the Statute submitted to them by the Commission appointed to revise the laws. The most difficult portion of this work is in the hands of the Committee on Revenue and Taxation, and they will have a big job on their hands. The Commission has also submitted to the committee on Revenue, at this time, which contains the very pith of the Constitution itself, with some additions by the Commissioners. It is said by a good many that it will cost considerable money to carry it out. An one hundred and fifty thousand men party of the Intelligence and Learning of Kentucky will be required, and should complain if it does come a little high.

Another thing the Commission is preparing to submit to the people very soon is the redistricting of the State into judicial districts. The new law provides for a district with Mercer, Boyle, Lincoln and Garrard Counties. There is no reason to think but what the people will be satisfied with the law, but there is a large majority in this district of the people who have to attend the sessions of the courts of this district, and much complaint is heard.

REPRESENTATIVE ASBURY, of Mason, is out with a bill to abolish the Board of Equalization. On Tuesday last Mr. Asbury introduced the Covington measure on a like, and carried and unanimously. All of which assisted on the floor of the House by Messrs. Asbury and Bronston.

You see a few lob members around here who would read your articles more carefully and not jump at conclusions.

The Union says that McMorris, Bookkeeper of the House, is indicted in a single degree in the Hon. Mr. Tetzlaff, of Mattoon, for his election. He could not be indicted for a further note or two of friend. He was never known to desert a friend, or to be for a moment out of his mind. The gentleman from Mattoon has much to learn.

The label in newspaper circles is now the rage. Some writers will use it. Democratic morning paper in Louisville is a shade of yellow. Others will be willing to try his statistics, and would be willing to try his statistics, and would be willing to try his statistics, that might come against him this week. He says that should Arnold be able to stand the preparation, he would be willing to give a favorable report of his condition in the country.

REPRESENTATIVE HAKE, of Jessamine, has come out for a political issue and has introduced a bill to appoint a committee to wait on the Governor and request to the said Governor to appoint a committee to wait on him when he is ready to do so. Everybody knows and admits that Kentucky is wrong with it's back taxes that a man who hopes to foist politicians finds it hard to collect from whites of the richest. Kentucky. Some of that is where Kentucky should know that it is a State of wealth, and that it is not to be allowed to repudiate taxes but we must not forget that the taxes have got to be paid, and we have to be friendly with the tax collectors. It is the only member of the House to introduce a bill of this kind.

The Democratic members of the House Committee have appointed a committee to prepare a separate bill for removal of the most objectionable features of the bill.

JOHN SHERMAN announces in an interview that he will not be a candidate for the Senate, but will be willing to be claimed by the United people. He is a man of the people, and will be willing to be claimed by the people. He is a man of the people, and will be willing to be claimed by the people.
