The tragic plight of the Ecuadorian Indian appeals to the heart of all who visit this region, and the progress of all efforts toward improving their agriculture and daily life will be followed with interest. Rev. Paul Stresch is in charge of religious education and public health work, and a comprehensive program of Christian rural development is being worked out."

Dr. John H. Reisner, head of Agricultural Economics, Yale, and former dean of the college of Agriculture and Forestry of the University of Nanking, China, believes that the future well being of America and of any democratic people will be determined in the country rather than in the city; and that if Christianity is "rooted on the land" it will live and grow. "The rural church can determine what Christianity will be in any country," says Dr. Reisner. "This is why we must give attention to the condition of the rural church and the condition of the rural people. That means that we must be concerned in all the problems of rural people; problems of home of children, of sanitation, of poverty, of economics, of diet, of recreation, and especially the problem of the enriching of the spirit of men. The program for rural community must not be one of social service only, but of the giving the people something—but it must be a program of rehabilitation and it must be a religious program. It is easier and cheaper to provide rural people ideals to live by, and to provide the material things they live with. The religious significance of agriculture must never be lost sight of. The primary job is that agriculture depends on the recreative processes of God."

Books in the dialects of the Belgian Congo are for the principal native tribes, and books in French only are available for educational purposes for the better-educated groups; a grping need of the Christian ministry, Dr. Reisner reported to the Rev. Ray L. Smalley, Methodist Missionary at Springer Institute, Mulungwishi, Congo Belge. "French is not a 'frill', but a door to a whole new world of books," says Mr. Smalley. "Books in the native dialect are very scarce. Many tribes have only the New Testament in their tongue. There is a great need to write and translate books into the inter-tribal language, Kiswahili. We need textbooks; and then, too, the teachers need manuals to go with them." A number of missionaries are preparing such texts.

Limit In Value Of Nitrogen on Tobacco

Tests at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington, applications of varying amounts of nitrogen increased returns from tobacco when not more than 150 pounds to an acre were applied. Additions of 50, 100, 150 and 200 pounds of nitrogen to the acre were tried. Increased returns were received up to 150 pounds. There was little difference in returns when 150 and 200 pounds to the acre were used.

Recipe of the Week

One of the most plentiful and thoroughly acceptable of vegetables this fall is celery. Rating high in flavor and crispness, it may be used to extend meats, or it may be used in salads, soups or cooked dishes. Food specialists at the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, University of Kentucky, suggest this meat-saving dish.

Stuffed Celery with Ham
3 cups celery
1 cup milk
1 cup celery liquid
4 tablespoons butter or margarine
4 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped cooked ham
1 cup shredded cheese
1 cup fine bread crumbs

Wash and cut the entire piece of celery. Boil in salted water 5 minutes, then drain, saving the liquid. Make a sauce of 1 cup of the liquid, milk, flour and butter. In a greased baking dish, arrange alternately layers of celery, ham, crumbs, white sauce and cheese,

Chapman Expresses Thanks To Mercury Editor

September 1, 1948

Mr. Sag Kash, Editor
The Carlisle Mercury
Carlisle, Kentucky

Dear Sag:

I can never express in words the full measure of my gratitude for your effective efforts in behalf of our campaign.

While my Congressional responsibilities prevented me from visiting very many counties or making very many speeches, you and my other faithful friends handled the situation splendidly. It was impossible to carry all of the counties, but we did carry 88, many more than I was able to visit this summer. Between now and November 2, I expect to visit every Kentucky county and to speak in nearly all of them in what I plan to make the most vigorous and thorough campaign of my life. I am going to do my part to carry Kentucky for the Democratic ticket, and I know that you will do everything possible to attain that goal.

I left Kentucky very soon after the primary and returned last Saturday. Sunday I came to Washington to help in the effort to secure the inclusion of rent ceiling provisions in the extension of the Marshall Plan. I hope we have accomplished good results.

I want your advice and suggestions at all times. We must win this battle for the Democratic Party. While I will be subject to direction of the State Campaign Committee, I trust that you will see to it that I speak in each and every county during the fall campaign.

Thanking you with all my heart for your splendid leadership and invaluable support in the primary and in the final battle to reclaim for Kentucky the Senate seat being held temporarily by a Republican, and hoping to see you soon,

With all good wishes.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) Virgil Chapman

Sunnyside Homemakers

The Sunnyside Homemakers met with their president, Mrs. Ruth Judge, September 17, at their first meeting of the year. Mrs. Judge stressed that each member be called to order on time, 1:30 p. m.

The devotional was given by each woman participating in reading the Scripture from seasonal leaves, pertaining to fall. The Lord's prayer followed.

At roll call by Mrs. Lorine Hall, each woman gave some interesting thing they had seen this summer, carrying our minds to mountains, rivers, stately buildings, and best of all, the part little children played in the scenes of our today.

Mrs. Dorothy Rowe gave in the Calendar for our year's work and each woman was assigned her task.

Mrs. Glenn Booth gave the Citizenship outline for our year's work, also the Clothing Guideposts for fall," explaining what she meant, by pictures she had procured and passed around. It was very interesting and Miss Rowe concluded by showing us the last set in material and prices.

Project leaders for October were chosen, namely—Mrs. Lorine Hall and Mrs. Sophia Bowen.

We had fourteen active members present and three visitors, Mrs. Minerva Durham, Mrs. Myrtle Tapp and Mrs. Rosa Bowles.

To members who weren't present, our next meeting will be Guest Day and each member is supposed to bring a guest to Mrs. Sam Hollar's, Hostess, with Mrs. Myrtle Hardin, Co-Hostess. The date is October 22, beginning at 10:30 a. m. with covered dish dinner.

The women had much enjoyment revealing their secret pals and choosing new ones, after which ice cold refreshments were served by Mrs. Judge.

Come to our next meeting and hear our project leaders on Home and Energy Savers—Mrs. Elbridge Miller, Publicity Chairman.

Spreading Borax Benefits Alfalfa

Reporting on experiments in using borax on alfalfa in 60 Kentucky counties, S. C. Jones of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics believes most farmers should spread 20 pounds of borax to an acre on their alfalfa fields.

Borax on alfalfa this season was especially beneficial where there was insufficient rain. The alfalfa responded green where it was applied, and there was increased yield of hay.

Twenty pounds of borax to the acre would help alfalfa for at least four years, Mr. Jones says. He cautioned farmers not to use more than 20 to 25 pounds to the acre, as too heavy applications might injure alfalfa and other crops that followed it.

It is estimated that a million bushels of eye-setch mixture were harvested in Logan county this year.

Bullitt county farmers report the largest acreage of soybeans for oil ever grown in that county.

Rawlings-as our fate. We cannot stand apart as an island of security privilege; nor can we stand apart in moral responsibility, sharing the blessings of God's mysterious Providence as the marks of self-achieved virtue."

"The church and the church school are ready to cooperate in every way possible, but unless parents are eager and willing to do their part then much of what the church is attempting (in religious education) will be futile and in vain." Rev. Archie Buchanan, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, Winnetsone, L. I., has written the parents of the church school pupils.

"Teachers can be taught to do their task and to do it well. But they cannot do the parents' task. The intimate comradeship between parents and their children gives them a vastly better leverage on the unfolding minds and growing characters of their children than any teacher outside the family can possibly attain. A close cooperation with the church and Sunday school on the part of parents is both possible and imperative. Probably most parents do not know the names of their children's church school teachers, yet they have delivered over to them, with scarcely a passing thought, the most delicate and strategic task in their children's entire education.

Under the auspices of the Committee on Cooperation in Latin America, a number of North American mission boards organized the "United Andean Mission Fund", among the Indians near Pitalke, Ecuador in 1946. It is a center for agricultural improvement, education, health, home betterment, and Christian character training. Oliver Mabee, a Canadian agriculturist is in charge. Irrigation, and the raising of grain and fodder varieties has been the chief activity to date. Comments Dr. Stanley Kycroft, head of the American committee: "The Indian of the High Andes was the original soil conservationist in the Western Hemisphere. Later, deprived of his land, he started the ruining and soil conservation declined. Yet the 'staircases' terraced up the Andes still stand as a monument of the thorough manner in which the Indians worked before this country was invaded near four
