THE GARDEN
LAST THINGS
By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics
From records kept at the Experiment Station for over 45 years, the "official" first-frost date for Kentucky is October 10. The several nights lately that have carried the tang of frost prove it is close, and the time is here to ready the garden for the winter.
The inventory has been taken, but may these two items be added: Logan and US Refuge 5 string beans, the varieties that persist through even the driest and hottest kind of weather, and a new yellow sweet corn, for the present known only as "MC 76," but which will emerge under a name in next year's seed catalogues. Besides comparing favorably with the best sweet yellow varieties, it has the additional virtue of staying table-sweet for a much longer time than most. And, now, to getting the garden ready.
The best way for a garden for any land, for that matter) to spend the winter is under a cover crop. This matter was discussed here in detail several weeks ago, and pressure sowing was suggested, as harvested vegetables made room. Now comes the final phase.
Earlier, the choice of legumes lay between hairy vetch and crimson clover; now only hairy vetch is dependable to use. Earlier, barley or wheat were suggested as the small grain, now, wheat or Balbo rye is the grain crop.
On the morning after first-frost, if it occurs close to the official date, sow vetch and wheat or rye. The rates for broadcasting 400 square feet are 4 ounces and 1½ pounds, respectively. The soil should be scratched with a 16-tooth cultivator or a wheelhoe, the seed sown and scratched in with the same tool.
If frost's coming is delayed as much as two weeks, Balbo rye used alone is most dependable, as it survives almost any weather the winter may send, even sown late.
And now that the garden has been put to sleep for the winter, this column takes its winter rest. But with the burgeoning of spring, 1949, it will emerge, again to carry on in the most helpful way of which it is capable.

Injunction Restrains
arily enjoined and restrained from making further expenditures for construction and - or financing construction of a new county high school until final determination.
The petition seeks a permanent injunction that in the event a contract has heretofore been executed by the defendants for construction of a new county high school that the contract be cancelled.
Charles M. Cox, Carlisle, and Raymond Connell, Paris, are attorneys for the plaintiff.

Judge's Opinion In School Bus Case
(Editor's Note: Due to the interest shown throughout Carlisle county concerning matters involving the schools, the opinion on judgment of Judge J. C. Dedman in the case of S. T. Terrell and others vs the Nicholas County Board of Education is submitted herewith:
"It appears to this Court that the sole matter involved is whether or not the Nicholas County Board of Education can be ordered by this court to furnish transportation for school pupils residing outside of the City of Carlisle, to the Carlisle High school.
"The County High School located at Headquarters is located in a section of Nicholas county rather remote from other parts of the county, and it appears that school busses transporting pupils from some parts of the county to the Headquarters school, pass through the City of Carlisle and have been carrying pupils from some sections for the purpose of attending the Carlisle school.
"At the beginning of the present term the Carlisle School Board declined to continue carrying these pupils to the Carlisle school and a temporary mandatory order was obtained compelling the County Board to continue to transport these County students to the Carlisle School.
"It appears that one of the troubles was that to have an accredited High School as many as five-hundred pupils of certain grades are required, and both the County and City schools were close to the minimum, and if either had pupils which came within the jurisdiction of the other, then the school district from which these pupils came would lose its accredited standing.
"Whatever may have been the purpose of directing that these school busses should not longer carry pupils to the Carlisle school, this Court is clearly of the opinion that the County School Board has authority to direct the county school busses refuse to transport pupils to other than the County schools. The taxpayers of the county, outside of the City of Carlisle, pay for this transportation, and it should not be regarded as an arbitrary abuse of power.
"Several of these pupils are already enrolled in the Carlisle school and it seems reasonable that they might be picked up by the busses as they pass by and taken to the Carlisle school, but this is a matter for the County Board of Education to determine."

Of 200 pecan trees in Fulton county grafted last spring, about 95 percent are living, some the grafts having a growth of seven feet.
