Teachers Advocate Nine-Month Term

The Kentucky Department of Classroom Teachers, in a meeting held last week at the University of Kentucky, adopted a resolution advocating calling for a compulsory nine-month elementary school term. In addition, the group went on record as favoring a minimum of four year's college training for teacher candidates. Principal speaker at the one-day conference attended by approximately 500 Kentucky teachers, was Dr. Ralph McDonald, executive secretary of the National Education Association's commission on teacher education and professional standards.

UK Arts Building Nears Completion

Scheduled for completion by the beginning of the fall term, Sept. 12, is the University of Kentucky's new Fine Arts building, the first permanent classroom building constructed at U. K. since before the war. The U-shaped, red brick structure will provide a permanent home for the Departments of Art and Music, all speech and drama classes, and the Guignol theatre. In addition to classrooms and offices, the building will contain music and art studios, central library, auditorium, art gallery, and a practice theatre.

Crops Tested for Mineral Content

Testing forage crops for mineral content, the Agricultural Experiment Station, University of Kentucky, found some plants higher in phosphorus, potassium and magnesium and lower in calcium than alfalfa.

Orchard grass was higher in phosphorus and potassium than most of the other grasses and legumes but it was lower in calcium and magnesium than Ky. 31 fescue or Kentucky bluegrass. In general, bluegrass was lowest in all mineral nutrients determined. Phosphorus content was influenced by stage of maturity, but potassium and calcium content seemed to be affected more by moisture and weather conditions.

Statistics for 1948 show only two unmistakable cases of lynching.

UK Extension Center Adds New Courses

A full schedule of freshman and sophomore liberal arts courses will be offered this fall at the University of Kentucky's Northern Extension Center at Covington, according to an announcement made last week by the Center's new director, Prof. Thomas J. Marriages

Howard-Pellegrino

Miss Joan Morford Howard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilson Howard, Lexington, became the bride of Roland Joseph Pellegrino, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pellegrino of Houma, La., at a ceremony solemnized at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon in Baton Rouge, La. The Rev. Patrick Gillespie officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride wore a peach-colored silk with brown accessories and a shoulder bouquet of brown orchids. She is a graduate of Transylvania College, where she received an A. B. degree. She also was awarded a degree in library science from the University of North Carolina and a master's degree from the University of Kentucky. At present she is a member of the staff of the Louisiana State University library.

Mr. Pellegrino is an alumnus of Louisiana State University, where he is continuing his graduate studies. He served three years in the armed forces during World War II.

After a wedding trip to New Orleans and Kentucky, Mr. and Mrs. Pellegrino will be at home at 3106 Highland road, Baton Rouge.

The Howard family are former residents here.

Cowan-Coatney

Miss Virginia Lee Cowan, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. G. T. Cowan of Carlisle, and Robert Douglas Coatney of Carlisle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Coatney of Lexington, were married at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon at the Carlisle Baptist church.

The Rev. Ira McMillen Jr. of Lexington, read the double ring ceremony before an altar of palms, ferns, white gladioli, and lighted white tapers in tall candelabra.

Mrs. Cleary Fightmaster presided at the organ with traditional wedding music and played Debussey's Claire de Lune" during the ceremony. Mrs. Rose Ballard, vocalist, sang "Oh Promise Me", "Through the Years" and "Because".

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of organza in light satin fashioned with basque bodice, net yoke and bertha bound with satin. The leg o'mutton sleeves ended in points over the hands and the gathered skirt terminated in a cathedral train. Her fingertip veil of imported illusion, bound in satin, fell from an Empire headdress trimmed with crystalized orange blossoms. She carried a colonial bouquet of white delphinium and stephanotis, centered with a white orchid and tied with white satin streamers.

Mrs. G. T. Cowan Jr. of Lexington, sister-in-law of the bride, was the matron of honor. She wore an organdy dress
