Big Soils Program in Hickman County

Eighty-five percent of the 18,639 tons of limestone, 2,140 tons of phosphate and 2,050 tons of raw rock phosphate used in Hickman county last year was applied to pastures and cover crops, according to County Agent Warren Thompson.

Use of rock phosphate has increased steadily since 1943, and Thompson said he expected a still further increase this year, "making this one of the biggest soil programs in this section."

The county agent is recommending a basic application of 1,000 pounds of rock phosphate to the acre. Some farmers, he said, are making their second application of 1,000 pounds.
