A TORNADO.

Leaves Death and Destruction in Its Wake in the Southern Portion of Washington, Kan., in Iowa.

WASHINGTON, May 16.--The city had a visitation Friday night from the fiercest tornado that ever struck this section. It came from the southwest, and struck the lower part of the town, with terrible destruction. Fortunately the time was late, just how many it is impossible to say, but it is believed that not more than a dozen persons were killed in the town. A few minutes after 8 o'clock the storm struck the town, coming from the southwest. There were no warnings, and the people were taken entirely by surprise. The storm was of destructive rush and cyclonic nature.

Washington avenue, the principal business street, was the first to feel the full force of the storm. Here the wind struck the brick building occupied by Mrs. Susan Acker, and completely wrecked it. The building was a large two-story brick, with a frame addition. The roof of the main building was blown off, and the walls fell in. Mrs. Acker, who is supposed to have been in the building at the time, has not been found. Her son, Frank Acker, was in the building, but escaped with a few bruises. The walls of the building were blown down, and the debris was scattered in every direction. The building was a total wreck.

The storm then passed on to the northeast, and struck the residence portion of the town. Here the destruction was terrible. Houses were blown down and unroofed, and the debris was scattered in every direction.
