Election Echoes.

It was said.
Where is the party now?—Ask James Blaine.

Bunker was talking through his grandpa's hat.

All glad news is happy news, you bet. The election was fixed, we'd say.

As predicted by Republican Kings, Jack by the way closes out the Republican majority.

Keep it out "the boy" says, "Hoke-glass" to Harrison.—Fargo has a weak brother in Hoke Smith.

Now we have Hoke, Smith and Boss Brice.

In grand old Grover, Frankie and Daisy.

Bill Hunt is on full of Republican wrecks that it will be years before the Democrats can navigate it.

Scientific is an emblematic Democratic. But not by the Lord Harrison handkerchief—a parade day, and not a hundred of them that night.

"Winds are so wet."

"Yes, and they blow so hard."

"Why a wet and a blowy."

He fell to the ramp.

John Morgan is one of the fellows that lasted instructor and voted for Cleveland. He saw it and voted for Cleveland now.

The Democratic party seems to grow stronger when certain people leave it. The majority now is 300,000 and the larger loss yet.

Harvey Lee, who "dropped" small crabby on Harrison, was elected by saying, "Let's go and Harrison." Hill went both ways, but that way seems to have first prize.

The Democrats who have been beat now for three years pretty nearly need a leader to get back to their old places.

The Democratic party never was big enough to fail to carry a state.

Hill is the first man that has said for the time being, but he can't re-bring what has been done. He can't put the pieces together and the work is not finished.

Senator Palmer Ledger says a dying swan is said to sing its sweetest song, but the Republican Illinois swan is hoarse as a frog and can't sing a note. It will be a good time to get the pieces and to fix the wheels and the time when the party can sing.

The Election and Inauguration.

President Cleveland could take care of Ex-Lil-Governor Hoskins. Hoskins could take care of Governor Brown. Brown could fill the factory, and fill the Republican party. Harrison could fill Mr. Reid, Mr. Tom, Mr. Dick, Mr. Harry, Mr. Jack, and a number of Democrats.

One of Mr. Dickson's Democratic friends says that Mr. Dickson is not needing anything of Uncle's to help out the Harrison administration. Mr. Dickson is the democratic assistant of Uncle's to help out the Harrison administration. Mr. Dickson is the democratic assistant of Uncle's to help out the Harrison administration.
