NATURE has a great party, intent upon the success of right and justice, and no other measure for effort than in some good degree to help forward the cause of the plain people of the land we will support. Any party that opposes such a party, any party that opposes the right of the people to rule, any party that opposes the rights of man, we cannot support. Any party that opposes the measure of the Democratic party.

FROM Democratic Texas, we have the following: "The Democratic Party will be successful in this State if success depends upon the honesty of the ballot-box. We are the former listening to a declaration of principles from the Republican party which declares that the people of the South are not to be trusted with the ballot-box, and that the honesty of their elections must be guaranteed by the presence of a commission of loyalty men and deputy marshals to see that they are not cheated. The Republican platform is an insult to the people of the South."
