The Garden

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics

STOPPING POTATO SPROUTING

Most potatoes in home patches are early varieties, such as Irish Cobblers and Bliss Triumph. These have short rest periods and, when kept in ordinary home storage, sprout and become unusable long before new potatoes come again. A few gardeners bridge over with late varieties planted in midsummer. To the rest, those that must go potato-less in late winter, this piece is addressed. It describes a chemical way to retard the sprouting of potatoes, not difficult at all to do.

A hormone is used, that comes in a powder form, called by general trade names that indicate its use. And this is the procedure.

The potatoes should be just matured, not more than two weeks after, at least. The tubers are laid in baskets or boxes in layers, and covered with a layer, using about 1½ ounces of the material per bushel of potatoes. The dusting may be done through the shaker-top of the package or with a salt cellar or through an insecticide dust gun.

The boxes are then taken to the house cellar, there kept pitch-dark. Or, lacking a cellar, a north-side barn stall may be used, the boxes or baskets well wrapped in burlap sacking to keep out all light and to store up what overnight coolness there may be.

In a house cellar that holds at above 70 degrees in summer, dusted potatoes showed no sprouting until late in December and stayed marketable until May. Potatoes were kept in a barn stall from late July, showed no sprouting in October, whereas potatoes until this time left in the rows they grew, had sprouts a quarter-inch long. When lots of both kinds of potatoes were then buried in a pit together, the undusted ones "grew out of the pit," whereas the treated tubers stayed in usable condition until late April.

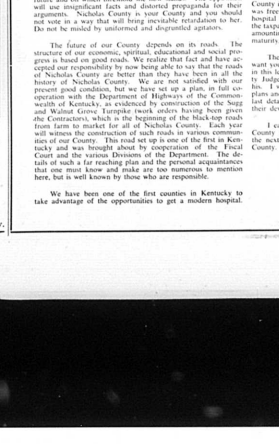
August Garden Jobs

Here are some August garden jobs, as set out in "Your Vegetable Garden," published by the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, University of Kentucky:

Plant beans and sweet corn by Aug. 15. Also during August may be planted kale, turnip greens, chinese cabbage, lettuce, radishes, turnips and beets.

Lettuce, both heading and leaf sorts, may be had far into the winter by sowing seed in a shaded place. Aug. 1 is the time to transfer into a cold frame and shade at least during the heat of the day. When frosty nights come, cover with canvas or sash, but leave uncovered during the day for ventilation. Later, keep covered except for an hour or two about noon. In beds covered with glass sash and so managed, New York or Great Lakes lettuce has been held until Christmas.

The effects of old age appear earlier in very hot regions.



GOVERNOR EARLE C. CLEMENTS designating the State Department of Agriculture as the central distributing agency for donated commodities, shows Commissioner Harry F. Waters signing an agreement with the USDA Production and Marketing Administration. J. A. Hutchins, Administrative Officer, Atlanta office of Food Distribution Branch and State Director Thomas A. Lewis, look on.

Develops Summer Pasture Program

Last spring, J. E. Bennett of the Wakefield community in Spencer county had reason to be worried over his pasture program, agreed Farm Agent Nevin L. Goebel. Bennett runs a dairy and has 70 dairy cows and calves on his farm. His pasture seeded to Ladino clover, alfalfa, alsike, brome, orchard grass and Ky. 31 fescue had been timed and terraced, but was not producing feed.

Then the soil was tested. Upon the recommendation of the county agent, Mr. Bennett used 200 pounds of potash and 500 pounds of phosphate. He also sowed 10 acres of Sudan grass for summer pasture. When 80 farmers gathered to note the results of this program, they saw an excellent pasture of grass and legume mixtures and another of Sudan grass that had been carrying the herd since the first of June.

Breed Heifers Only When Well Developed

Dairy heifers should be well developed before being bred, and the age of breeding will depend somewhat on their size, according to dairymen at the Agricultural Experiment Station, University of Kentucky.

Jerseys and Guernseys, if well developed, may be bred at 15 or 16 months of age and the larger breeds at 18 to 20 months. If a heifer is small, let her grow another two months before breeding.

Within each breed the larger cows are the more profitable, it is noted. Heifers should be well developed and grown out to make good replacements.

How grass, Ladino clover, small grains and sweet clover prevent erosion on bottomland was seen in Cumberland county, following heavy rains.

New Director For UK Extension Center

Prof. Thomas L. Harkins, for the past five years head of the University of Kentucky Department of Industrial Education, last week was appointed director of the U. K. Northern Extension Center at Covington. He succeeds Dr. William C. Wesley, who has headed the Extension Center since its establishment a year ago, and who recently resigned to become dean of Mount Union College, Alliance, Ohio. A native of Waddy, Ky., Prof. Harkins holds the B.S. and M.S. degrees from the University and has been on the College of Education faculty since 1938.

Noted Historian To Speak At Uk

Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, Pulitzer prize-winning biographer of Robert E. Lee, will visit the University of Kentucky Aug. 10 and 11 for a lecture on "Young Washington and Young Lee." Lincoln recently the editor of the Richmond, Va., News Leader, Dr. Freeman is recognized as one of the South's most eminent scholars. He currently is engaged in the last volume biography of Washington which, he reports, is about half completed. His visit to U. K. is sponsored by the Departments of Journalism, History and English.

Experiment Station To Hold Field Days

Hundreds of farmers are expected to be present at the Experiment Station Farm, Lexington, on Aug. 11 and 12, annual field days set apart by the Station for section of work done there.

Visitors will see results of experiments with tobacco, corn, forage crops, small grains, fruits and vegetables as well as with dairy cattle, beef cattle, swine, sheep and poultry. Guides familiar with the work will explain the various projects, trips beginning at 9 a. m. each day.

That the work may be seen to advantage by smaller groups, the schedule of events will be repeated the second day.

On Thursday, Aug. 11 counties beginning with letters A through H are requested to attend. Those counties having letters A, B, C, and D will assemble at the Stock Judging Pavilion, while those with letters E, F, G and H will gather at the Dairy Center entrance on the Nicholasville Pike.

Friday, Aug. 12, has been designated as visiting day for counties beginning with letters I through W. Counties I, K, L, M and M will meet at the Stock Judging Pavilion, and N through W at the Dairy Center entrance.

Groups which inspect the livestock work in the morning will be shown the crops work in the afternoon, and vice versa.

Lunch prepared by the University cafeteria will be available at each assembly point.

August Best Month For Sowing Fall Crops

The best time to sow alfalfa in Northern Kentucky is Aug. 5 to 20, and in Southern Kentucky Aug. 15 to Sept. 1, according to a circular of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, University of Kentucky. Alfalfa should be prepared as long as possible before sowing.

For best alfalfa production, liming is needed in a large part of the state. At the Experiment Station Farm at Lexington, two tons of limestone to the acre increased the yield of hay from 3,259 pounds to 5,604 pounds to the acre a year. Four tons increased the yield to more than three tons of hay to the acre. Other tests, in other parts of the region, it may be necessary to use phosphorus.

When good growing weather prevails, six or seven pounds of seed to the acre will do on a perfect seedbed; 10 or 12 pounds are considered better.

The circular, "Growing Alfalfa in Kentucky," may be had from offices of county or home agents, or from the college, Lexington.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Love" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday.

The Golden Text is: "Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace: and the God of love and peace shall be with you." (II Cor. 13:11).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him." (I John 4:16).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The cardinal point of divine Science is that God, Spirit, is All-in-all, and that there is no other might nor Mind, —that God is Love, and therefore He is divine Principle." (P. 247).

In Kenton county, 456 women are members of homemakers clubs.

Foxes continue to be a menace in Pendleton county, killing hundreds of chickens in the past two months.

AN OPEN LETTER

From Your County Judge

Inasmuch as my physical condition would not permit my seeing every citizen of the county, I am taking this means of communicating with you. I would have enjoyed seeing you and giving you personally the pertinent facts that should be considered by you before you cast your vote.

During the past few years the Fiscal Court has been most cooperative in effecting an over-all progressive program for Nicholas County, all members having a sincere determination to make Nicholas County the best place possible to live and the members of the Court have given of their valuable time, beyond the scope and required duties of their office, to see that such a program became a reality. I, as their leader and advisor, have appreciated their spirit and zeal and have cooperated with them to the best of my ability to bring to Nicholas County the many worthwhile improved conditions we now enjoy. I am therefore seeking re-election principally for the purpose of carrying out the dreams and anticipations of the fine group of men with whom I have had the pleasure to be associated.

All progressive undertakings are a matter of record and observation and I entreat you to investigate, study, talk with and believe those who are in a position to know the facts, the correctness of my statements and the seriousness of the outcome. There will be those in the County who will attempt to overthrow, through a change in administration, the most important position Nicholas County has ever held toward a bright future and on which threshold she now stands. The opposition will use insignificant facts and distorted propaganda for their arguments. Nicholas County is your County and you should not vote in a way that will bring inevitable retardation to her. Do not be misled by unfounded and disgruntled alibis.

The future of our County depends on its roads. The structure of our economic, spiritual, educational and social progress is based on good roads. We realize that fact and have accepted our responsibility by now being able to say that the roads of Nicholas County are better than they have been in all the history of Nicholas County. We are not satisfied with our present good condition, but we have set up a plan, in full cooperation with the Department of Highways of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, as evidenced by construction of the Sugg and Walnut Grove Turnpike (work orders having been given the Contractors), which is the beginning of the black-top roads from farm to market for all of Nicholas County. Each year will witness the construction of such roads in various communities of our County. This road set up is one of the first in Kentucky and was brought about by cooperation of the Fiscal Court and the various Divisions of the Department. The details of such a far reaching plan and the personal acquaintances that one must know and make are too numerous to mention here, but is well known by those who are responsible.

We have been one of the first counties in Kentucky to take advantage of the opportunities to get a modern hospital. This came about through untiring efforts and devotion to the cause, of the Fiscal Court, led by this humble public servant, and through the efforts of the people of Nicholas County as a whole. The hospital is practically a reality, its further construction and eventual occupation and management has been worked out and developed by your public officials now in office. The cost will be great. Certainly so valuable an institution should not be entrusted to those who are not prepared to make it a going concern.

We have advocated and cooperated in all respects with the Farm Bureau, with Lions Club, Rotary Club, Woman's Clubs, Library, Play Grounds, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Future Farmers, 4-H Clubs, VFW, American Legion and all other activities for good in the County, and will continue to do so.

A program, related to and a part of the Rural Road Program of the County, is the potentially great limestone products producing plant located at the New County Farm, which we bought during the past four years. The sale of limestone products to the State for use on our roads makes possible the acquisition of modern road equipment without having to use any tax money. I invite the public to visit the new rock quarry at the County Farm and see just what our plans are toward the construction of a modern rock producing plant. We will receive many thousands of dollars from this plant which, in turn, will be put back into road improvements and equipment. With an income producing department in our fiscal set up in the County it will be easy to keep a balanced budget. The County was free of debt as of July 1, 1949, with the exception of the hospital bonds and funding bonds, which were both voted by the taxpayers. There were certain other Road and Bridge Bonds, amounting to $39,000,000 paid off last year, one year before maturity, through economic endeavors of the Fiscal Court.

There is so much to be said about County affairs that I want you to know, but time and space prohibits. I do feel that in this letter I have given you an idea of just what your County Judge has to do and some of the responsibilities that are his. I want you to know that I am qualified to carry out the plans and programs of our County and that I am familiar to the last detail with such programs, having had an active part in their development.

I earnestly solicit your vote and influence in my race for County Judge, and I know that I can render a service during the next few years that will be a lasting benefit to Nicholas County.

Yours most sincerely,

Walter Shepherd,
