G. R. KELLER CONCLUDES HIS VISIT TO THE WORLD'S FAIR.

CHICAGO, May 24th, 1893.

Dear Mercury:—

I concluded my eighth day at the World's Fair today, and the last thing I saw as I left the grounds was something I had not seen before. It is my opinion that one could stay here a year and see something new every hour. I have visited and seen all the peoples of the earth, from Zululand to Iceland inclusive. I have seen Isaac ride horseback, Ingalls harnessed to Gladstone, the elephant and the kangaroo execute the skirt dance, heard parents talk French to a Low Dutch monkey, drank beer with a German band master, and walked across the lake blow through the air without a balloon. Everything and everybody are ready to start home, but I didn't break loo.

Last evening as we were returning from the Fair—Mrs. Hutchison, Mrs. Kelly, Miss Emma Kennedy, Prof. Worthington and myself—I suggested that we enter one of the most attractive bakeries where we can quite a number of people eating. The proposition met with favor, and this is what we had and what it cost: two saucers of ice cream, two buttered toasts, 20 cents; one piece of cake, 10 cents; two cups of coffee, 10 cents, and we had all we wanted to eat free of us, for 70 cents. We then stepped into the front room and looked it over and had the most delicious ice cream soda for ten cents per glass. Ten cents for five thus making a bountiful supper for five people for $1.30. Now, in State street has no cheap, dirty restaurant. I find everything here cheaper than at home. Because every where I notice a dome, except a few shanty-ac-dyles, and hundreds of people are living in tents on the lake front.

I have tried every route to the grounds. You can take the elevated road at State and Congress street, and go to the grounds for 5 cents—eight miles, just think of it—or the Illinois Central for 10 cents, or you can take a dummy line at the south end of the city and transfer for 15 cents. This latter route is the longest one, but you get a charming ride and a full view of the city.

If you contemplate attending the Fair make arrangements for board before you leave home. I have been offered a full boarding house at 50 cents per day, and within a block of Paris at 60c West Congress St. She has a number of nice rooms which she will rent, with board, for $7.50 per day. Her house is on the West side in the most delightful part of the city, and the cars run within one square of her house and close enough to the door that one who is a little too fat out, but they are outsiders. With our experience we would not want to be nearer the scene of the city. But where we are we have no saloons, no drunkenness, no noise, and we can sleep. When you get properly located it will be no trouble to know where the North side, the South side and the Midway Plaisance are. It is well to remember that Clinton street must be the start from the foot of Van Buren street and Lake Shore, and Grand Boulevard, Cottage Grove and Wood all over Cook County. If the conductor don't own the line he will be would soon pump the water out of the lake to get possession.

If you will be sure and remember that Clinton street is the starting point you will find it easy to get around. I believe I have seen all the principal sights worth seeing, but there is still much more left to see. I have not been to the Columbian Museum, but I guess I have given about all the information you will want, and will close.

I desire to say a good word for the Big Four Railroad over which I made my trip to the World's Fair, and the courtesy and encouragement shown by the officials and employees of the road. In fact I never met a more accommodating set of men. Leaving Carlisle on the 10th train in the morning, the Big Four lands you at the Fair Ground gates in Chicago the next morning at 7 o'clock. My advice to all is to take this route. G. R. K.

The tavernmen and ex-tavernmen of Ohio seem to have fallen into a bad run of luck. Hardly had McKinley's Reserved Number been voted down by his friends than comes the announcement of the ex-Governor and ex-Secretary Chase Foster has failed for one hundred thousand.

In defiance of the act of Congress and in opposition to the protest of hundreds of circulators and church people of the United States—the gates of the World's Fair were thrown open Sunday. An immense crowd was present. Sunday opening has been fixed, but it is likely to be allowed to drag its slow length along until the Fair is over.

Verily the greed of the Chicagoans hath no bounds.

Another temporary injunction has been granted by the Illinois State Fair Directors from closing the gates on Sunday.

Every man who calls himself a Democrat is not a Democrat any more than every man who calls himself a Christian. A man is known by his work rather than by his profession. Party service is a large part of Democracy, but not the principle, and the former service is valueless without the latter. Party service is acquiescence in the will of the majority, talking and voting for the regular nominees, and spreading and defending party principles.—Silver Bustler.
