WHERE FUTURE JOURNALISTS ARE TRAINED—This is the University of Kentucky's new Journalism-Publications Building which has just been completed. Constructed at a cost of $441,000, the modern structure will be paid for from accumulated and future profits of the student newspaper. In addition to the School of Journalism, the building houses the Kentucky Kernel printing plant, offices of student publications, and the central office of the Kentucky Press Association. Representatives from 38 states and Canada will attend a meeting of the Newspaper Managers Association here Oct. 13-16, and the building will be formally dedicated on Nov. 2 as a Homecoming activity.

Building Bible Homes

E. V. Carrier

This is the first of a series of articles introducing a program of preaching to be carried on in the Baptist church by the pastor and the congregation. You are invited to read these articles carefully.

These are indeed "perilous times" (2 Timothy 3:1-7), and our generation is faced with problems the like of which no other generation has ever encountered. Over the radio, in the newspaper, and wherever men gather together for conversation deep concern is expressed over the problems of today. There is the labor problem, the problem of inflation, the threatening of World War III, domestic problems, but the greatest problem of all facing America today is the threatening destruction of the American Home.

No nation is stronger than its homes, and today we realize as never before that "the hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world." Because that hand in the past few decades has been an uncertain, unsteady hand, this nation that we love and the whole world is tottering on the brink of destruction.

Every one will agree that home should be the most precious and the most sacred spot upon this earth, the very center of all that is lovely, pure and holy.

Homes built according to God's blueprint, "Bible Homes", are miniature previews of heaven, but, sad to say, today many American homes are miniature "hells", and they stand tottering on the precipice of destruction simply because the builders have failed to take heed of God's plan revealed in His infallible Word.

We have turned deft ears to God and listened to the worldly minded and all to often the atheistic college professors, psychologists, and psychoanalysts. Instead of heeding God we have listened to those that make fun of the Word of God, to those who do not even respect the holy bonds of matrimony. May we take heed and pray for a better day in America.
