That the blood you donate to the Regional Bloodmobile Unit which will visit here May 12 will help save a life is borne out by the testimony of a Nicholas county mother whose son was wounded in the front lines in Korea and has had 35 pints of blood to help him on the road to recovery.

Mrs. Claude Linville wrote the local Red Cross office of the life-saving job done by the local unit in helping wounded Servicemen in Korea.

Part of the letter from Mrs Linville to the Red Cross is published below with her permission. Dear Friends:

"Our son, Sgt. Clarence Linville, who is now in Oakland Naval hospital, Oakland, California, enlisted in the Marines Jan. 20, 1948 for four years. When his time was about up he re-enlisted in the Marines for a six-year period with one year to be spent in Japan or Korea.

"When he left home Jan. 5, 1952, I prayed for my boy.

Hit Laying Barb Wire

"He was put in over a lot of boys laying barbed wire right in front of the firing line. He and another Sergeant were shot down a short way out. The other Sergeant was not so badly wounded as my boy, just in three or four places and was still able to walk. He went to help our son, who was worse off.

"They they received another charge and the Sergeant was killed. My son lay there 30 or 40 minutes. He had received more wounds. Then a boy about 18 years of age came out and got hold of the gun fire. When his buddy carried him back they didn't think he would live, but our prayers reached him and so did the blood our good friends gave to the bloodmobile unit, for you see when our son reached back to medical care, he had lost a lot of blood and they had blood on hand and began giving blood while they were dressing the wounds. He was given five pints of blood before they knew he would live.

Given 38 Pints

"He was given 38 pints in all. Amputation of the leg was necessary but still they did not think he would live. But as I say, it was blood, prayers and the good doc-

Movie Made Of NCHS Seniors

"Nicholas County High Goes To Washington" will be the title of a movie made of the local high school seniors while they were on a four-day tour to Washington, D. C. last week.

The local group was selected by the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company as the high school class which would be used in the movie.

A movie script writer who had just returned from an assignment in Indo-China was assigned to the Nicholas County seniors and she traveled with them constantly to get the "feel" of a high school group in Washington and also to get an understanding of the classroom, sports and curricular activities engaged in while attending school here.

Professional actors will play the parts of seniors at home engaged in school life and in the many activities of fund raising projects of the senior class to raise the $1500 necessary to go on the trip.

The movie, when produced, will be shown in high schools throughout the country.

Wildfire Found In Tobacco Bed

Inspection of tobacco plants of the farm of Roger Dunn on the Cane Run road showed the tobacco bed to be infested with wildfire.

The disease appeared in this tobacco bed in spots. It is recommended that if wildfire appears in these spots should be removed by scraping with a hoe, and that an application of blue-stone time be applied.

One-half pound of 50% DDT should be applied with the blue-stone time to control flea beetles and other insects which are responsible in themselves for spreading much disease as they move from plant to plant.

Blue-stone lime treatment is recommended as a prevention for wildfire and it should be applied when the plants are very tiny. This material should be used as soil treatment and should cover the entire bed and extend somewhat beyond the bed area.

A 50 gallon mixture is enough to treat one tobacco bed 12'x100'. The right mixture is three pounds blue-stone and four pounds fresh hydrated lime in 50 gallons of water with ½ pound 50% wettable DDT.

Elephants Help Erect Circus Tent

Miss Bradley travels on a trunk man elephant's trunk, that is, when Wallace & Clark Circus is in town. "Big "Babe" is the largest circus elephant in the world and she is as talented as she is gentle, for "Babe" doubles as brass-and-overalls, which is how circus people say that an elephant works in harness as well as in spangles.

Can Roll and Fold Canvas

"Babe" tall mount helps put the circus together and she helps to take it apart. She knows how to roll and fold canvas, a feat that the circus manager, Norman Ashton, delights in pointing out to people who wonder if elephants are smart.

More than a score of pretty show girls, gorgeously gowned by the designers of Jims-of-Hollywoods world-renowned costume manufacturers participate in the Wallace & Clark elephant spectacle, "Maladay" and their mounts are the cleverly trained elephants which appear in the inner rings of the circus and on its hippodrome track.

Nicholas Property Assessed At 35.6 Of Market Value

According to the Kentucky Department of Revenue, real estate values in Nicholas county were assessed in 1952 at an average of 35.6 percent of their market value.

The Department of Revenue pointed out that any piece of real estate which is assessed substantially more than 35.6 per cent of its current market value is bowing more than its fair share of the property tax load.

The remedy for over assessment is an appeal by the property owners to the County Board of Supervisors which will meet here May 4. The board comprises Homer Smith from District 1; Ray Flora from District 2; W. J. Clark from District 3, Albert Henry from District 4, and J. W. Burnaw from District 5.

Have Two Duties

The boards have two duties under the law: 1) to direct the tax commissioner to assess any items of property not already assessed for 1953 taxes; and, 2) act on appeals and recommendations for change of assessments.

The appeals must be filed in writing by the taxpayer.

The tax commissioner, Department of Revenue, county judge or county school superintendent may also request the review of any assessment by the board.

Any taxpayer dissatisfied with the board's final decision, the Revenue Department stated, may appeal to the Kentucky State Tax Commission in writing 15 days after the board's adjournment.

The local political scene began to warm up this week with eight candidates entering the field for nomination in the Democratic primary August 1.

Incumbent County Judge Spencer Taylor announced his intention to run for re-election this week. Former County Judge Walter Shepherd also announced this week for the office. Taylor defeated Shepherd for this office in the 1949 Democratic primary by six votes and local observers believe this race may end up as another close one.

Incumbent Tax Commissioner John W. Anderson also announced for re-election to the office this week. He will be opposed by A. V. "Doc" Allison, local lumber dealer, who filed Saturday.

James H. "Jim" Williams Sr. and Marion Clay Hamm announced Tuesday that they were in the race for high sheriff and deputy sheriff, respectively, subject to the action of the Democratic primary. They are the first to publicly announce for this office.

Kash Ratliff and Earl Tinsley, both local farmers, have added their names to the candidates for jailer, swelling this list to a total of eight who are now running for that office in the Democratic primary.

S. R. Barlow, incumbent magistrate from District 5, announced his candidacy for re-election Tuesday to make the second magisterial candidate to announce for office. Raymond Coy had previously announced for magistrate from District 1.

Work To Start On 'White Way' Sometime In May

A "white way" system for Carlisle's Main street will be installed during the first two weeks of May, according to Morris Whitely, local KU office manager.

Mr. Whitely said this week that his office had received all the parts for the system and was waiting on a line crew to be assigned here to get the work underway.

The "white way" will be composed of nine lights extending from Elm to Walnut streets. The new lighting system will almost double the amount of light now being used to illuminate Carlisle's business district at night.

The new lights will be placed in the same locations as Main street's lights are now located but will be enclosed and will have an increase from 250 to 400 candle power for each bulb. The new lamps will be lowered for greater illumination, Whitely said.

Cost to the city for this new lighting system will be approximately $96 per year, Whitely said.

The KU line crew is expected to begin work here sometime during the next two weeks, the KU manager reported, and said the job should be completed in about four days time.

At the same time two street lights will be installed in Douglas Court, West Main subdivision, and another street light will be placed near the Carlisle Armory.
