CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

That true happiness is to be found through understanding the spiritual laws which govern the universe including man, will be brought out at Christian Science services Sunday in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Soul."

The spiritual nature of happiness is set forth in the following passage which will be among those read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures", by Mary Baker Eddy (60:29-2): "Soul has infinite resources with which to bless mankind, and happiness would be more readily attained and could be more easily found in our keeping, if sought in Soul. Higher enjoyments alone can satisfy the cravings of immortal man. We cannot circumscribe happiness within the limits of personal sense."

The prophet Isaiah's promise of peace and joy to those who spiritually understand God will be included in the readings from the Bible (Isaiah 55:12): "For ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands."

Animals Winning Survival Fight

North American caribou, moose and buffalo are winning their fight for survival.

These and other big game animals which faced extinction now are roaming the wilds in growing numbers. Man appears to have reversed the trend toward destruction he started more than a hundred and fifty years ago. Stricter hunting laws and better control of fires, wolves and other predators are largely responsible for the increase, says the National Geographic Society.

Caribou, a sort of American reindeer, are the cattle of the far north. Eskimos, Indians and settlers in Canada and Alaska depend on them for food and clothing. Forest fires, wolves and hunters take a heavy toll, but more herds have been reported in the last three years.

Counting Difficult

The caribou's favorite food — lichens, or ground moss. Migrations in search of food make accurate counting almost impossible, but authorities believe conservation measures have been successful. In the early 19th century the slaughter of the American bison, or buffalo, began. By 1889 an estimated 60 million in the United States had dwindled to fewer than 600.

The American and Canadian governments have established bison herds in national refuges. The two governments and private ranchers now own 35,000 head. Since range is limited, the bison population is not expected to go much higher. Herds are thinned out periodically. The meat is sold or turned over to Indians and public institutions.

The largest herds are at Wood Buffalo Park in Canada and National Bison Range in Montana.

The shaggy muskox disappeared from Alaska long ago, but some of these large sheplike beasts were transported from Greenland and again wander across the barren tundra of the mainland. A few survived in the remote wilds of Canada, and hunting restrictions have allowed them to increase abundantly.

Moose were fast fading from northern forests, but favorable conditions recently brought such an increase that hunting controls have been relaxed to avert overpopulation.

Big Horns Thriving

Forest fires, mortal enemy of the caribou, are a boon to moose. The burning of spruce and pine forests encourages growth of willow, birch and aspen, favorite foods of moose.

Bighorn sheep, both the Rocky Mountain and Mexican varieties, are also becoming more plentiful. Government refuges preserve many. Others roam wild in Colorado, Idaho and Montana. Some hunting of bighorns is allowed by state authorities and in national forests.

Dall sheep, white counterpart of the western bighorn, propagate in Canada and Alaska. Legal hunting is limited to adult rams, and the Dall, like the western bighorn, is taken chiefly for its value as a trophy.

More Prehistoric Bones Are Found

A 45-inch-long leg of a mastodon, a mammal of the Pleistocene or Glacial periods, was uncovered near the old Blue Lick Springs Sunday by searchers probing for bones of prehistoric animals.

The specimen was described as the best ever found in this area.

A gigantic tusk was found beside the leg bone but it was not removed from the ground Sunday. Searchers said they would call Dr. Charles Snow of the University of Kentucky Anthropology Department and Dr. William Haag, Frankfort geological engineer, to inspect the find before it is removed. A bulldozer being used in the excavations nicked the tusk, the searchers reported, but said they did not believe it was damaged badly. It could not be determined Sunday just how large the tusk is.

The leg bone found Sunday was the first found here which was still intact.

The excavations are being made on land owned by Ed Hunter, an area once patroled by Daniel Boone's party. Boone was captured by the old springs by Indians while he and his companions were boiling water to make salt.

NO MORE BROKEN BACKS—Shown is Talmadge Rutter adjusting a tobacco primer designed by Eugene Becker of Moorefield. With the exception of the power plant which was taken from a garden tractor the primer is the invention of Becker, who stated he is testing the machine under all conditions during the three years he has been working on it. The machine allows the operator to prime with both hands as it pulls its sled between two rows of tobacco. It was demonstrated Monday morning at the county tobacco field meeting.—TCM photo

Tobacco Field Meeting Held Monday; Variety Difference Is Noted By Group

Approximately 60 farmers attended the annual field meeting held Monday morning on the farm of S. R. Barlow of the Parks Community, on the Pleasant Springs Pike. W. T. Straw, County Agent, said.

Russell Hunt, Field Agent in Tobacco, with the University of Kentucky attended and discussed with local growers the many current problems in tobacco production. Growers had an opportunity to observe the seven varieties being grown by Barlow through his cooperation with the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station. A very definite difference in these varieties could be seen as they were observed Monday morning.

As a special feature of the program, Gene Becker of the Moorefield Community, assisted by Talmadge Hatton demonstrated the use of a new machine to be used in priming tobacco. The machine is power driven and was designed by Gene Becker. It is a three wheeled machine, for going between the rows of tobacco, upon which a worker can take a seat and at the same time carry the leaves that are removed from the plants as he goes through the field.

The seven varieties of tobacco that were observed at the field day included No. 16, 58, 41A, 35, and three new varieties grown for the first time, including WF-4-51, WF 12-51, and WF 17-51. The three new varieties grown, in addition to being resistant to root rot are also resistant to wildfire and are being introduced for the first time.

ACP Fall Seeding Practice Approved

For the purpose of providing winter cover crop protection and as an incentive for cropping adjustment, seedings of fall cover crops has been approved as an additional practice to the 1954 Agricultural Conservation Program according to Mr. James R. Rash, Jr., Chairman of the Kentucky State ASC Committee. This practice is the result of an amendment to the National Bulletin which has recently been received authorizing cost-sharing under the ACP for the establishment of a winter cover crop of grasses, legumes or small grains established in the fall of 1954 on cropland which will be shifted for the entire 1955 crop

"Iron lungs and other respiratory equipment have meant the difference between life and death for 1,000 polio patients so far this year and thousands more will need these breathing machines to keep them alive before the end of this year," stated Kenneth S. Landauer, assistant medical director of the National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis.

An old-fashioned supper of ice cream and cake will be a special feature of the Nicholas County Polio Campaign on Friday evening, August 27 between the hours of 6 and 10 o'clock on the grounds of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lew Tyrer.

All Marching Mothers who took part in the January Mother's March within the city of Carlisle are requested to meet in the little courtroom tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 to complete plans for th supper, Mrs. W. G. Irvin announced.

Nicholas County has been unusually fortunate as no cases were recorded in 1952-53. On August 16, 1954, a child from the Maple Grove section was admitted to the St. Joseph hospital and the local chapter is assisting the family in the care of this child.

Mrs. Irvin said that in order to do our share in the National Drive, the local chapter is mailing out envelopes to all box holders in the county. Individuals are urged to make a prompt and generous donation. Envelopes are to be sent to Miss Ralph Hughes, secretary of the Nicholas County Polio Chapter.

Arrangements For Dairy Referendum Aug. 21 At Courthouse Are Completed

One voting place will be set up at the Nicholas County courthouse between the hours of 10:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. CST on Saturday, August 21. Kenneth Stephenson, chairman of the educational program on the dairy referendum has announced. Walter Sheperd, dairyman will be chairman of the Referendum committee and will be assisted by Nelle Gillispie and W. E. Lynam as co-officers.

Some degree of confusion exist in regard to the dairy referendum as to who is eligible to vote. This confusion was in evidence at the meeting held Monday night at the Nicholas County high school. However a careful interpretation of the eligibility rules for voting, Stephenson said, has clearly indicated that Nicholas County will have many eligible voters in the dairy referendum.

In commenting on eligibility to vote, Stephenson points out that any person in Kentucky who has marketed cream, milk or other dairy products to a handler in Kentucky is eligible to vote. This would include all persons who share in the sale of milk or cream. In a statement to further clarify the confusion and misinterpretation of the eligibility rules Stephenson emphasized that it was erroneously reported that a producer to be eligible to vote had to be one who produced 3000 pounds of milk in a month or more. This is not correct. This particular rule would apply only to a producer-handler who not only produces milk but also sells directly to consumers and therefore is a milk handler. Nicholas county has very few of this type of producer and the bulk of the producers are those with small dairy heards and therefore are eligible to vote in this dairy referendum.

The dairy referendum has been called to see if producers in Kentucky would like to contribute up to and not to exceed two cents per
