Weekly Recipe

Peach sherbet is a delicacy to be enjoyed for the next several weeks. Its refreshing flavor is retained whether it is frozen in an ice cream freezer or in automatic refrigerator trays, notes food specialists at the University of Kentucky.

Peach Sherbet

4 c fresh peaches
1 c water
1 c sugar
1 t unflavored gelatin
¼ c cold water
4 T lemon juice

Cook the cut-up peaches in water until they are tender. Press through a sieve and add sugar. Simmer 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Add gelatin softened in cold water. Cool. Add lemon juice to the mixture and freeze in ice cream freezer or in automatic refrigerator tray for two or three hours, stirring twice during the period. Serves six.

Menu: Fried chicken, buttered lima beans, harvard beets, lettuce salad, biscuits, butter and peach sherbet.

Pasture Saves Feed Costs For Fattening Pigs

An acre of Balbo rye was equal to $36 to $42 worth of feed in the dry lot when pigs were fattened at the University of Kentucky's Western Kentucky Experiment Substation at Princeton.

In a feeding test, pigs that grazed Balbo rye made average daily gains of 2.18 pounds; those on fescue, 2.16 pounds, and the control group of pigs in the dry lot, 1.9 pounds. The results were reported by S. J. Lowry, superintendent of the Substation, and J. Ralph Overstreet, assistant in animal husbandry.

Pigs having access to pasture reached a 200-pound average weight seven days earlier than did those fed in dry lot. Those grazing rye pasture ate 22.4 pounds less per 100 pounds of grain than did those in the drylot, and pigs in the fescue pasture ate 9.7 pounds less than the controls. It was estimated that an acre of either Balbo rye or fescue had a carrying capacity of 30 to 35 pigs per acre from weaning to market weight.

The rye pasture was cross-drilled at the rate of 3 bushels per acre. Both the rye and fescue were treated with nitrate at the rate of 200 pounds an acre.

Hog farmers can well afford to provide good pasture for their hogs in both summer and winter, noted the herdsmen. They pointed out that the long growing season is an advantage which the hog producer should not overlook. During periods of grain shortages or a narrow hog-corn ratio, pasture is of utmost importance.

In addition to saving feed, good winter pasture assures an improved swine sanitation program, and increases the fertility of the farm.

Mastitis Control Boosts Returns

Mastitis in dairy cows causes enormous losses to dairymen, according to Elmer C. Scheidenhelm, field agent in dairying at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Control of this disease which injures the cow's udder would help dairy farmers meet today's competition, says Mr. Scheidenhelm.

Causes of mastitis, methods of prevention and treatment, and proper management for udder health are described in a recently revised farmer's bulletin by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The bulletin states that even with full chronic mastitis, cows cannot produce as much milk as they could otherwise. As the disease becomes more acute, production may drop as much as 25 percent or more.

Some of the direct causes of the disease listed in the bulletin are: exposure to cold or wet weather; sudden changes of temperature; blows, kicks, bruises, or abrasions on the udder; wounds of the teats; infrequent, irregular, or incomplete milking, and any disturbance of the animal's health.

A single copy of Farmers' Bulletin No. 1422, Udder Diseases of Dairy Cows, can be obtained free of charge from the Office of Information, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C.

District Dairy Shows Aug. 16-27

Members of 4-H clubs and Future Farmers of America will take part in eight district dairy shows to be held in different sections of Kentucky from Aug. 16 to 27, it is announced by the UK College of Agriculture and Home Economics. The one-day shows carry a total premium list of $8,000 provided by the State Legislature through the Commissioner of Agriculture, Ben S. Arains.

Only regularly enrolled 4-H club members of FFA members carrying a dairy project may enter, each to be approved by the supervising county agent or vocational agriculture teacher. Additional information may be had from them.

The places and dates of the dairy shows are: Mayfield, Aug. 16; Madisonville, Aug. 17; Bowling Green, Aug. 18; Campbellsville, Aug. 19; Somerset, Aug. 24; Williamstown, Aug. 25; Flemingsburg, Aug. 26, and Shelbyville, Aug. 27.

Utopia Club Members To Attend Camp

More than 100 Utopia Club members, representing 35 counties, will attend the organization's annual camp at Camp Daniel Boone in Jessamine county, August 6 to 8. Campers will receive training in handicrafts, conservation, program planning and recreation. Members of the UK 4-H club staff will serve as instructors.

A meeting of the state Utopia Club advisory committee, headed by George Finnell, Jr., Kenton county, state president, will be held at the camp on Sunday, August 8.

Cleansing Care For Sprayers

Tomatoes, grapes and cotton are so highly susceptible to such weed killers as 2, 4-D 2, 4, 5-T and MCP that it would be unsafe to use the same sprayer regardless of the amount of washing done.

However, for most other plants the spraying equipment can be safely used if it is thoroughly cleaned, said weed specialist at the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Their recommendations to remove 2, 4-D, 2,4, 5-T or MCP are:

Soak all pieces of the spraying equipment—tank, pump, spray booms—for 24 hours in a solution made of 2 teaspoonfuls of household ammonia to a quart of water. Then rinse several times with clear water.

Saltwell Charge Holds Vacation Bible School

By Mrs. Alexander Kenner

The Saltwell Charge in the Carlisle District conducted a Vacation Bible School at the Rose Hill Methodist church on June 28 through July 9.

This was the second year that this charge had done this and it was considered quite a success. There was an increased enrollment and attendance over that of last year which showed and increased interest in this type of work.

Mr. Forrest Morris, a member of the Rose Hill Methodist church took his truck and went over the charge bringing in the children from all three churches on the charge. They are Rose Hill, Saltwell and Barterville. There was an enrollment of ninety-three with an average attendance of seventy-three.

The workers in the school were: Mrs. Alexander Kenner, the pastor's wife and dean of the school, Mrs. Gardner Fuchack, Mrs. W. S. Gaunce, Mrs. Frazizer Earlywine, Miss Lenore Richey, Mrs. Elmer Ritchie, Mrs. Hargis Earlywine, Mrs. Forrest Morris, Mrs. Earnie Earlywine, Mrs. Spencer Taylor, Mrs. Woodrow Richey, Misses Friend Hollar and Miss Annie Lee Hollar, the other workers in the five departments of the school.

On Friday evening, July 9 a program was given at the Rose Hill Methodist church and an exhibition of the things the pupils had made in the school was put on and all of it was enjoyed by a large audience.

Tid Bits Of Kentucky Folklore

By Dr. Gordon Wilson

"TELL ME A STORY—II"

Last week I began a two-essay discussion of the philosophy of this column about folklore. Today I want to finish it and let you draw your own conclusions.

Among other things I mentioned how hard it has been for people of my generation to get the attention of their children and grandchildren when story-telling is in order. I think I have finally arrived at a reason for this. The younger generation are not disrespectful of us and our yarns; they just do not know our language. Suppose I tell you, my reader-children, a yarn and see how much you understand. I shall not imagine things or draw on the memories of my ancestors, either. Here goes!

When I was a boy at Fidelity, we rode horseback whenever we wished to go anywhere within eight or ten miles of home. That took us several hours, the going and the returning. We knew very few people who lived farther away except some close relatives, whom we visited once a year or such. We could see houses where lived people whom we never knew, because they lived so far away that our paths never crossed—a few miles by way of the roads, even though they were not half so away as the crow flies.

Refrigeration was virtually known. Before I could remember, a few people had ice-houses, but ice was seldom think enough on our few ponds to justify cutting it. Most of our streams were fed by springs and just did not freeze over enough for skating. We would hang a basket full of fresh meat or some such stuff in the well or cistern; some few people had cellars, but I am afraid that no cellars at Fidelity were cool enough to preserve meat for long. Consequently, when we killed a pig or a calf mid-summer, it was necessary to sell or swap most of the meat, so that it could be eaten before it started to decay. That meant that beef or pork in summer was a delicacy, eaten ravenously, because it might not be good when the next meal time came round.

A very large percentage of clothes were made at home, either from the very first process or from cloth bought at the store. I never owned a work shirt before I left Fidelity that had been bought as a shirt; Mother bought a whole bolt of goods and made shirts for the four boys and Father. Likewise, I never owned a pair of overalls or other store-bought work pants. Again a bolt came into our home and was turned into pants. Now, we did buy Sunday clothes and took such excellent care of them that they lasted indefinitely. Such things as stockings were entirely home-made. The wool for them had grown on the backs of our own sheep; we had sheared the sheep, taken the wool to a factory that made the rolls, and brought them back to Mother. She, with a skill that seems to have lessened somewhat, in spite of much remuddling, spun the rolls, knitted the stockings, dyed the finished product, and had to properly clad, like the woman in the Proverbs.

Money was scarce and often hardly needed. Various things took its place. We traded something we had for something we wanted, both parties were satisfied. We turned in at the store some bottles of green hides or eggs and got a bill, which in the proper time, we used as successfully as anyone can use dollars or checks. Work often paid for service rendered, such as the post pay my father received in work for his laboious practice as a doctor. Wood-chopping, plowing, working in the hayfields, helping cover a barn or a roof, stripping tobacco—these can be the same as money.

Now, please explain all this to a youngster who drives the family car, owns a radio or television set, attends a modern high school, has been in half or more states of the Union, would think nothing of starting out on an hour's journey for California or Alaska or Mexico City. You see, we oldsters have outlived our vocabularies, even our language. And the younger generation, willingly or unwillingly, should be told the story of the days that are no more, even at the expense of the tellers.

Wean Lambs Now

Lambs not ready for market by the middle of July should be weaned, dosed for parasites, and turned on the cleanest pasture available, says Richard C. Miller, sheep specialist at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Any lambs that cannot be finished to good weight and condition in six weeks' time should also be sheared.

Homemakers Meet

Magazine; Homemakers creed was read in all clubs; an article in a paper included two pictures pertaining to making braided rugs.

Mrs. James C. Lowe, county reading chairman, reported 372 books read; 3 new books added to library, 16 book reviews; 15,641 Bible chapters read; 159 read weekly papers, 4,981 magazines read.

Three 4-H'ers participated in the morning program: Rebekah Barlow gave a demonstration on "Biscuit making"; John Baker, County 4-H Speech winner gave his speech entitled "Agriculture in a Changing World", and Carold Hamilton, member of recently organized Somerset Teen-Age 4-H Club gave a talk on the organization, another group of this type is the Moorefield 4-H Teen-Age Club and Carolsale also has a teen-age group.

Mrs. Stanley Gajdik, our Homemakers District Director from Woodford County gave a brief talk on the Homemakers organization and brought us this thought, "If every member of my club was like me, what kind of a club, would my club be?"

Assistant State Leader, Miss Lulie Logan, gave a brief talk commending the Homemakers on their work, the chairman on their good reports and praising the 4-H'ers and their work.

"Looking Forward — 1954-55" was given by the home agent which included continued work in reading publicity, citizenship, membership and landscape. The home furnishings project for the year includes "Room by Room Analysis" as living, dining, double purpose and bedroom along with furniture arrangement and accessories in the home. The craft lessons will be Swedish weaving and making copper bookends and planters.

Each club arranged and exhibited in the school gymnasium which included lovely braided rugs, chairs refinished and seated using cane, magazine baskets and waste-baskets.

The invocation was given by Mrs. Elbridge Miller. A solo, "Beyond the Sunset" by Mrs. Aitkin Downing accompanied by Mrs. J. S. Wilson, also group singing led by Mrs. J. A. Standiford, with accompanist, Mrs. Roger Womack was enjoyed during the day.

Mrs. J. A. Standiford, county secretary and treasurer, read the minutes of the last meeting and reported a total of $189.71 in the county treasuiry.

The following county federation chairmen as recently appointed by the county president were recognized; Mrs. Malcolm Hardwick, publicity, Mrs. Roland Boyd, reading, Mrs. Roy Hardin, Membership, and Mrs. Ernest Alexander, citizenship.

During the afternoon program, Miss Jewell Deene Ellis, International Farm Youth Exchange to Israel, talked and showed slides of her trip. Miss Elizabeth Claiborne Missionary to China for 23 years told of her experiences while there.

The Nicholas County Homemakers Association were honored to have as their guests: Miss Lulie Logan, Mrs. Stanley Gajdik, Mrs. Thomas, Mr. Leonard Alexander, Mr. W. J. Clark, Miss Jewell Deene Ellis, Mrs. Jane B. Lucas, Mrs. Frank McDaniel, Miss Elizabeth Claiborne, Miss Marylene Watkins, Mrs. Emogene White, Rebekah Barlow, Mrs. Nelle Brayfield, Carol Hamilton, John Baker, Mrs. Roger Womack, and Miss Bonnie Kay Cable.
