RULING GIVEN

Military personnel on the Fort Knox Military Reservation may be subjected to the State income tax laws, yet are not permitted the right to vote in Kentucky unless they have another residence within the State, it was held by Assistant Attorney General Walter C. Herdman in advice given to the Judge Advocate's staff at Fort Knox.

School Board Meet Held On UK Campus

Approximately 700 school board members, superintendents and other local school officials attended the 19th annual meeting of the Kentucky School Boards Association this week at the University of Kentucky. The association elected J. V. Vittatoe of Owensboro as its new president. Other officers named included J. C. Wallace of Lexington vice president, and Dr. L. E. Meece of the University of Kentucky, executive secretary. Principal speaker at the meeting was Dr. Andy D. Holt, vice president of the University of Tennessee. Activities of the one-day conference were summarized at the close of the affair by Dr. Frank G. Dickey, dean of the University of Kentucky College of Education.

MERGER APPROVED

The State Board of Education approved the merger of the Caldwell County Board of Education and the Princeton Independent District, effective July 1, into the Caldwell County Board of Education. All members of both boards will continue in office until their terms expire, and then the county board will have only five members —one from each county educational division.

AID ASKED

Commissioner of Revenue Robert H. Allphin announced that his department will aid Henderson County in a revaluation of all its property for state, county and school tax purposes. Request for the aid come from the Henderson Fiscal Court. Henderson is the fifteenth county to request this assistance since the program was first inaugurated five years ago. Other counties are Ballard, Campbell, Fayette, Garrard, Hardin, Jefferson, Laurel, Letcher, Magoffin, Muhlenberg, Ohio, Rawan, Simpson and Trimble.

Grant county homemakers are cooperating with other organizations in the county to obtain a county library.

In most cars, ball joint wheel has a kingpin pivot for turning right and left and two hinge-like joints for moving up and down over rough spots in the road.

In the 1954 Ford you won't find either the kingpin or the hinge-like joints which most cars have. In their place are two sealed ball joints about which each front wheel moves both up and down and right and left. This completely new suspension not only makes the car easier to steer but permits greater total up-and-down front wheel travel for a smoother ride.

These new ball joints pivot in specially shaped seats so that wheels roll turn more easily and are far less likely to get "out-of-line." This new ball joint system eliminates 12 points of wear.

Here's how Ford's new Ball-Joint Suspension works

It's just one of the "dividends" you get in a '54 Ford which make it worth more when you buy it, worth more when you sell it!

In addition to this completely new advance in chassis design, Ford brings you the most modern high-compression, low friction engines in its industry. The new 115-h.p. I-block Six and the new 130-h.p. V-block V-8. These two new deep-block engines bring you dividends of greater horsepower, smooth, quiet performance and more GO per gallon.

"Sleeping In The Guest Room"

Is it about ten above zero outside as I write this; inside it is warm enough, with a gas grate burning a few feet away from my typewriter. I have no chilly sensations physically, even though the wind is trying to force open my north door. And yet I do feel informally chilly, for I have just thought of sleeping in the guest room in mid-winter.

As all of the older ones will recall, the guest room—front room to us, not used except for company. If company did not come much in winter, the bed sat and was cold until I arrived. About an hour before I was scared into my room, there would be a small fire built in the fireplace or the stove, enough to warm up some of the Greenland atmosphere in a space big enough to undress by. With many a fond memory of summer time, I would then brave the cold bed. I have never slept on a glacier or any other iceberg; I think I know how that would feel. But a feather bed, however cold, somehow gets warm before morning, warm enough to be comfortable . . . now it is the same old story in reverse, for I must leave my warmed-up iceberg and make a break for the less-frigid area around the stove. But in the living room and in the kitchen-dining room it is much warmer; I never feel dreadfully anyway. A good light breakfast, made up of smoked sausage, hot biscuits, butter, sorghum molasses, hot coffee, and a few more things added for good measure, usually restored the circulation in my legs and made me believe that I might survive another winter.

But I was not a guest in winter only. In summer the feather bed and I sometimes get pretty hot. Recalling the winter experiences, I usually could stand just about the hottest night that came. Since the days were long in the summer, I could wake up early and take in the panorama of the typical guest room, with its enlarged photo, its mantel-piece with all the vases and other bric-a-brac, the wash stand and its inevitable pitcher and bowl. On the center table would gleam the red or green plush-covered family album, with its treasures to tempt me as soon as I was dressed. And on the floor would shine the best carpet of the family, with colors that had not been allowed to fade in bright sunshine.

Somehow I have never felt as important as I used to feel when I occupied the front room where I was visiting a special place set aside as religiously as that front room was just doesn't exist now in most home. The guest is more a member of the family and not some exalted person who cannot be treated like home folks. And even the meal is far more natural than it used to be; the guest is one to eat as he pleases at his own rate, and not be for ever having to swallow hurriedly to say, "No, thank you" when some more food is being forced on him. The guests may go about the house where he pleases, help wash the dinner dishes if his hostess will allow it—and I have had some that would—and help entertain the children when such are around. The guest is no longer a king enthroned, deserted by his hostess, who has made our guests feel like folk, kings and emperors just do not come around as often as they used to.

And the guest room has lost its distinction so much that my friends do not know what I am talking about when I mention the place. I fear that they, like many other younger people than I am, regard this whole talk about other times and places as something made up to sound queer or smart. And thus a simple, accurate historian of simpler things and times is dismissed as a well-meaning old soul who has lost connection with the big world in which he has continued to live. "Run, Sonny, and light a fire in the stove in the front room and tell Cousin Jim to get ready for breakfast."

UK Writing Clinic Set For March 27

A creative writing clinic will be held Saturday, March 27, on the University of Kentucky campus under auspices of the UK Department of University Extension. The School of Journalism, Department of Radio Arts, Department of English and the University Press will offer their services during the clinic. Chief speakers will be Mrs. Janice Giles, novelist of Adair county, and Joe Reuter, manager of the Lexington Bureau of the Louisville Courier Journal. Mrs. Giles will lecture on the novel, while Reuter will discuss feature writing. Also planned during the day is a session on "The Making of Books," during which visitors will be taken on a tour of the University printing plant. The clinic is open to the general public.

PRINCIPALS TO MEET

School superintendents have been urged by Superintendent of Public Instruction Wendell P. Butler to release school principals from their duties for the annual conferences of elementary school principals on the campus of Murray State College, Murray, March 26 and 27.

"Under the foundation program of education the elementary school principal is a very important person," said Butler. "I trust you will permit your principals to attend this conference."

The Liberty Bell was three cast and thrice cracked, says the National Geographic Society. Cracked on its first test after arrival from England in 1752, the famous Philadelphia bell was melted down and recast twice by American bell founders before a satisfactory tone was achieved. The bell then was used until 1835, when it cracked while tolling for the funeral of Chief Justice John Marshall. The crack grew longer when, after attempted repairs, the bell was rung to celebrate Washington's birthday in 1846.

James Webb, Bath county, has been selling eggs at his roadside market at a premium of 10 to 20 cents a dozen.

Many people are amazed to learn of the variety of free publications available from their county agricultural and home agents as direct from their College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Here in Kentucky the agricultural college is a part of the University of Kentucky at Lexington. Many townsfolk also are surprised to find that these publications are available to them as well as to farm people and that many of the titles are of interest to all—as, for example, booklets having to do with establishing and care of lawns, planting and care of shade trees, hedges, gardens, small fruit plantings, control of insects, meal planning, canning and freezing of foods, table setting and service, care of household equipment, kitchen plans, handling money matters—to mention but a few.

Townspeople also are often interested in more general farming subjects. Many urban and village dwellers are themselves owners of farms, or they are interested in the economics and general social implications of farming and rural affairs. For these the "List of Available Publications" of the Agricultural Experiment Station and Extension Service will offer many interesting items. It may be in connection with an appraisal of the price support programs in tobacco, or the growth of the cooperative movement, problems of soil erosion and conservation, soil fertility, rural churches, population changes, town-country relations, livestock production, forest management and opportunities, the marketing of farm products, the economics of small farms.

And then, of course, there is the wide list of "how to do it" circulars and leaflets on almost every conceivable aspect of farming and homemaking—for farmers, for members of 4-H homemakers' clubs, for 4-H boys and girls.

Why are these publications furnished free to the people of the state? The answer is the same as to the question, "Why have free public schools?"—because the economic and social strength of our country depends upon the people being well informed. In farming and homemaking the values growing out of right knowledge far more at times greater than the costs of furnishing the information.

If you are interested in these matters you are cordially invited to write to the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, University of Kentucky, Lexington, for a list of publications. If you desire also your name will be placed on a list to receive quarterly announcements of new publications.

Cornborer In 98 Kentucky Counties

With the addition of six counties last year the European corn borer now has been found in 98 Kentucky counties or in all but the extreme eastern counties. New counties in which borers were found last year are Gallowa[illegible], Crittenden, Fulton, Lyon, Marshall and Webster.

A survey made by the Entomology Department at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics indicated an estimated loss of $763,000 from borer damage in 24 counties in 1953. An average of 94 borers per 100 plants was found in the survey, or about half the average number per stalk in 1952. The reduction in borer numbers was said to be due to drought and hot weather.

Spraying to control borers was done in several counties the past season. The entomologists suggested that care be taken to plow under and completely cover all old stalks, in preparing for corn this year.

Farmers in Pulaski county will set at least 240 acres of strawberries.

Improvement Program For Edmonson County

Under the leadership of UK County Agent Steve A. Callahan, farm leaders and the county extension advisory committee, an extensive program of farm improvement has been set up in Edmonson county.

Contour farming is to be done on 215 farms; at least one silo is to be built in every community, and irrigation systems are to be installed on at least three farms.

Pasture mixtures are to be seeded on 300 farm and sudan grass grown on 200 as emergency feed. Five thousand acres of cover crops are to be seeded. The tobacco soil on 400 farms will be tested.

The dairy program includes expansion of artificial breeding, the vaccination of calves for Bang's disease on 500 farms, and at least 50 members of 4-H clubs to start herds. Thirty dairy farmers will raise their herd replacements.

Vegetable and fruit production is to include 200 acres of tomatoes, 300 acres of strawberries, 300 acres of cucumbers and 150 acres of okra. Fifty thousand tree seedlings will be set.
