Washington Report

By your Congressman John C. Watts

Wool Bill

On April 27, the Senate passed a bill to provide "for the development of a sound and profitable domestic wool industry."

Administration's Par For Parity

At the time that this bill was debated on the Senate floor, Senator Ellender offered an amendment to extend mandatory farm price supports at 90 per cent of parity on basic commodities through 1955. This was defeated by a vote of 48 to 40 and was hailed as a victory for the Eisenhower Administration.

The future will tell us whether or not this particular Tuesday's activities on the Senate floor and the rejection of the mandatory price supports for either commodities was in reality a victory or defeat for the Administration. It must be remembered that if no new farm legislation is enacted, the basic farm law passed in 1949 will go into effect, providing for flexible supports and generally lower income for the farmers.

At the same time that Senator Ellender's amendment was defeated, the Senate also rejected a proposal to wipe out cutbacks in the price supports of butter and dairy products put into operation on April 1 by action of Secretary Benson.

"Brannan Plan For Wool

The wool bill has been described by some as a "Brannan Plan for Wool" as it would allow the commodity to seek its own price in the free market. The government would then make direct payments to wool producers in order to make up the difference between the price actually received from the wool and 90 per cent of parity.

The purpose of the wool bill is to encourage the production of domestic wool up to 300 to 360 million pounds a year. At the present time the United States produces only a third of its wool requirements. Although there is a tariff, foreign wool has been selling just under the government's support price on domestic wool. This has resulted in the United States using foreign wool while storing its own domestic wool in Government warehouses.

Social Security Legislation

Early this past month the Administration presented to the House Ways and Means Committee its recommendations for improvements in the social security program. The social security program, though founded less than a decade ago, now holds the hope for most people of a secure basic income in future old age. In the interim period it also provides assurance of an income to the family in the event the breadwinner dies. The Administration recommended that the benefit provisions be made more adequate and equitable for our present economy, and that social security coverage be extended to many occupations and workers not now protected.

Great Farm Coverage

The largest group of individuals not now covered by social security consists of farm operators and farm workers. If the legislative proposals now pending before the committee are enacted into law, social security retirement protection would be extended to about 3.6 millions farm operators and about 2.6 million additional farm workers.

Opposition From Farmers

There has always been considerable opposition among the farmers to social security coverage due in part to the troublesome problem of filing forms and reporting to the Social Security Administrator. It is claimed that the pending legislation will greatly simplify the method and procedure of filing and accounting for income. The proposal would also simplify the complicated methods of determining coverage.

Opinion among the farm groups are still very divided as to whether the farmer and farm laborer should come under social security coverage. During the course of the hearing the American Farm Bureau made it clear to the Ways and Means Committee that it was opposed to extending the coverage to those in the farming industry at this time. While on the other hand two other farm organizations, namely, the National Grange and the National Farmer's union, approved of the extension of greater coverage to the farm operators and farm laborers.

The House Ways and Means Committee has completed its hearings on the legislation but has not reported the bill to the House with its recommendations in regard thereto.

Dr. J. B. Shannon Aids In Book

Dr. Jasper B. Shannon, professor of political science at the University of Kentucky, is a contributor to a five-volume work on presidential nominating politics in 1952 released yesterday by the Johns Hopkins Press.

Dr. Shannon prepared background material for the section devoted to Kentucky and also assisted with that part on Louisiana.

Dr. Shannon is a native of Nicholas county and continues to operate his farm here. He graduated from Carlisle high school in 1925 and the University of Wisconsin in 1934.

Nurses Needed At TB Hospitals

A shortage of registered nurses in Kentucky's tuberculous hospitals may cause a curtailment of medical services if not relieved soon, Joe D. Miller, executive director of the Made Tuberculosis Hospital Commission, said.

The nurses are needed for general duty in the hospitals and for operating room work at Hazelwood hospital, near Louisville. Nurses must be registered in Kentucky.

Starting salaries are $240 a month and go to $320. Full maintenance is available at the hospitals and personnel is on a forty-hour work week.

Inquiries may be made by writing Miller's office in the State Office Building, Frankfort.

Farmers Invited To Experiment Station

The annual spring field day will be held at the University of Kentucky Experiment Station at Lexington May 21. Farmers are invited to see the experimental work being done with small grains, grasses, legumes, pasture crops, livestock feeding and breeding.

Sessions will be divided into two groups. One group will see the crops while the other is looking at the livestock. The groups then will exchange places, so all visitors will get acquainted with all work at the Experiment Station.

Gary Flora Receives Naval Appointment

Gary Flora, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Flora formerly of Carlisle but now of 110 Conn terrace, Lexington, has been notified of his appointment to the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., by Congressman John C. Watts.

Young Flora, a sophomore at the University of Kentucky, will enter the academy in the July class.

He was graduated from Carlisle high school.

Fancy Containers Boost Food Costs

Homemakers in Graves county have been more aware of things to consider in buying since Miss Ida C. Hagman, University of Kentucky home management specialist, had a training school for leaders. Here are some of the points which homemakers told Miss Irma Hamilton, home agent, they hadn't thought of before:

1. Fancy containers which some foods are packed in add to the total cost. An article simply but well wrapped will cost less.

2. Pre-mixed or packaged ready to serve cost more to produce than those combined at home. The housewife who needs to watch her budget will find that home cooking or baking is an easy way to save.

3. Compare costs of bulk and packaged goods when buying staples. Buy in the most economical form.

4. Small savings add up to sizable amounts on monthly food bills. Larger containers usually provide a saving, if the food can be used without waste.

5. Two or more of the same item are frequently cheaper than one bought singly.

6. Buy only those amounts that can be taken home and stored conveniently.

4-H Auctions Help Defray Trip Costs

To raise money to take a trip through several states, the TATHO 4-H club in Clark county had an auction sale of donated articles. Included were farm implements, feed, fertilizer, hardware, clothing, house posts and numerous other articles. Two hundred posts sold for an average of 95 cents each. The boys had to cut the posts, turn earned money baby sitting, washing windows and the like. Club members from Bourbon and Fayette counties also will go on the trip, which will include Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and other states.

Harlan Farmers Fertilize Grass

Half of the Harlan county farmers enrolled in the Green Pastures contest used fertilizers on grass, says UK County Agent James D. Wells. Harlan dealers reported heavy sales of fertilizers for pastures, general crops and for garden. Sixty-five tons were sold in March, much of it 5-10-10 or of high analysis. Few farmers asked for low-test fertilizers.

Many Harlan county pastures were reseeded with Ky 31 fescue, orchard grass, Ladino clover and Korean lespedeza. Bill Hayes, Pine Mountain, said, "I didn't care too much for fescue until the drought last year. Then I wished I had all fescue, for that was about the only grass that provided grazing. Now I am including fescue in all pasture seedings."

Sixty percent of the soil samples tested in Calloway county this spring were from tobacco land.

Girls attending 15 meetings of Logan county 4-H clubs discussed the subject of "How to dress."
