Weekly Recipe

Many housewives enjoy making a specialty of rolls of different kinds. The following sweet roll dough may be the basis for twists, braids, hot cross buns, clover leaf rolls or other varieties, says Miss Florence Imlay, food specialist at the University of Kentucky.

Foundation Sweet Roll Dough

2 c milk
3 T sugar
2 t salt
3 T fat
2 eggs
1 cake compressed yeast
7 to 8 c soft wheat flour

Scald the milk, add sugar, salt and fat and cool to lukewarm. Add yeast dissolved in lukewarm water about half the flour. Beat the egg well and add to mixture. Add more flour to make a soft dough as can be handled. Place in well-greased bowl, cover with cloth, and set in warm place to double in bulk. Shape rolls and place on greased pan. Set in warm place, let rise until light and bake in hot oven, 425 degrees, for about 20 minutes.

Cinnamon rolls: When dough has doubled in bulk, divide in three equal pieces. Roll each piece into an oblong about 14 by 8 inches, size Spread with softened butter and sprinkle with 1/3 of this mixture 2 c sugar, 1 T cinnamon. Add c raisins. Roll up lengthwise as for a jelly roll. Cut with sharp knife in 1-inch slices, or use a string with ends crossed and pull carefully. Place cut side up in shallow greased baking pan. Let rise until double and bake as above.

Luncheon menu: Chicken-rice casserole, broccoli with hollandaise sauce, pear salad, cinnamon rolls, butter and coffee.

To Count Mules In Farm Census

The mule, never a serious contender for beauty honors, seems to be losing popularity, too.

Although some farmers maintain the "critter" never could become more unpopular than the first time they met him, there have been fewer mules in every census since 1925. In that peak year, farmers reported 5,860,897 mules in the United States. There were 2,202,264 in 1950.

Neither denying nor confirming mule popularity, the Bureau of the Census will count mules again this year. The 1954 Census of Agriculture in October and November will ask how many mules and mule colts are on each farm.

The Census Bureau, taking complete inventories of farms, livestock, and machinery and implements urges farmers to cooperate with enumerators to save time, cut costs and promote accuracy in census taking.

The mule question is 1 of about 100 that each farmer will answer. It is included with questions on horses, ponies, and colts.

While horse and mule numbers in the U. S have declined since 1920, tractor numbers have gone up. Tractor numbers increased 1056.6 percent in the period, 1920-25, 81.8 percent, 1925 to 30, 70.2 percent, 1929-40, 54.5 percent, 1940-45, 49 percent, 1945-50.

Between 1945 and 1950, horse and mule numbers declined 36.4 percent in the United States. In four southern states, however, horse numbers increased during the 5-year period.

Fee Ruling Issued

County court clerks are not entitled to a greater fee than $10 for recording consolidation agreements between corporations in the county clerk's office, according to a ruling of Assistant Attorney General M. B. Holifield.

The ruling was given to Louis Cox, Frankfort, who wrote that a certain clerks had complained the fee was too small, and had insisted that a larger fee be paid. Holifield cited a statute which limited both the Secretary of State and any county clerk to a fee of $10 for recording such agreements.

Farmers See Silo Filled

Forty-five farmers attended a trench silo filling demonstration on the Roy Turner farm in Rockcastle county. Sudan grass and soybean hay were put up with a diesel tractor equipped with a power take-off silage cutter. Farm engineers of the University of Kentucky attended the demonstration.

TV NOTEBOOK

By Gene Cinkenbrand

Outside of an earthquake, perhaps the most calamitous thing that can happen to some farmers is to have their TV picture tube give up the ghost. We'll try to give a quick glimpse of free manufacturers which can render your picture tube useless as an empty beer bottle.

Open Filaments. The job of the filament, or "heater," is to give off a concentrated and intense heat. When the filaments open up—usually had it Open Grid: The control grid is fed with changing voltage which ultimately adds up to the picture which you see. With an open grid, you might as well go to bed early. Low Emission: A tube with a cathode unable to emit a sufficiently strong electron beam will, if nothing else, take the kids away from the TV set in plenty of time for dinner. Open Cathode: For the picture tube to be able to accept the necessary high voltage, a complete circuit must be made between the cathode and the shell of the tube. Fixed Brightness: This is caused by an internal short in the electron gun.

As we stated, these are five troubles which pretty well cover the field of picture tube failure. However, there's nothing quite as deadly as ramming the handle of your vacuum cleaner through the screen while engaged in a bit of housecleaning.

But, even with reasonably good care and an eye on the vacuum cleaner handle, your set may still develop mechanical trouble. For TV RECEPTION as sharp as a porcupine's hog, call GENE'S TELEVISION, at 71-J TODAY! Our work is fast but thorough and completely reliable.

Somehow there is a haunting fascination in memories of old places, old songs and stories of yester years and we always enjoy reading such articles in different papers. Especially did we enjoy the one last week by Miss Nellie Crump on the "Old Camp Ground." Also the one she wrote on old "Uncle Jim Gillispie," as he was known all over the county. Both were nicely written and gave a very clear picture of each subject. We can't remember having been at Parks Hill but once so we don't remember too much about it, but have often heard our mother speak of the place where everyone went each summer and some of the romances that occured there years and years ago.

We also enjoy the items from old files of the Mercury. There are many clippings in my scrapbook from that column. Also the ones mentioned above will find a place therein some day when skies are gray and a dismal rain beats steadily on the window panes.
