SQUARE DEAL GROCERY

Short-Weight Items Show Sharp Decline

By John S. Gardner,
University Of Kentucky

Only a few odds and ends remain in the inquest of garden crops.

Sweet Corn—Some plantings gave almost 100 percent worm ears, but some escaped because they fell between the generations of the corn earworm. While there are ways for timing control measures of this epidemic, it is safest to spray every planting.? because there may be stragglers between generations. Such spraying is not expensive of labor nor material.

For the home gardener, Methoxychlor is the material, 2 tablespoons of the 50-percent grade per gallon of water. The spray is applied so it hits the silk tips, the first time when silking-out starts. Three more applications should follow three days apart. Such a program has resulted in well over 95 percent worm-free ears.

Late Cabbage—Green worms were numerous on late cabbage in some places. One way to reduce their population is by removing breeding places—the stubs from which early cabbage was cut. Spraying may be Methoxychlor or the 1 percent rotenone dust.

Grasshoppers—As though the drought were not enough handicap for the vegetable grasshoppers shredded anything green in the garden after their usual pasture gave out because of dry weather.

Although grasshoppers spend the day in gardens, their nights are spent in grass close by. Spraying a 6-foot swath of the grass that surrounds the garden resulted in veritable "clean-downs" of killed grasshoppers that died just at the edges of the garden. The material used was Chlordane, 40 percent, 2 tablespoons per gallon of water. Three applications were made, 10 days apart, and grasshoppers were no problem all summer.

Billions in Losses Caused by Rats

It's Easy to Control Rats and Mice with Modern Methods and Materials

Handy Check List for Getting Rid of Rats

Now, that the weather turns cold, is an excellent time to get rid of destructive, disease-bearing rats on farms and in homes. A brief summary can put an end to the ravages of these enemies. This handy check list will help you learn the extent of your rat and mouse problem. Follow every step by step, to complete, permanent control.

Rat Detection
(check signs noted)

Damaged sacks of grain? ____
Visible rat tracks? ____
Droppings "marks" on the wall? ____
"Rub marks" on sacks or stems? ____
Droppings visible? ____
Burrows near foundation? ____

Sanitation

Good sanitation removes all protection for hiding and underground breeding. (Check items as you correct them):

Remove rat-harbor piles.
Clean up all junk piles.
Store lumber and firewood on racks at least one foot off the ground.
Put metal covers on gutter-spouting rats and pits.

Ratproofing

Though often expensive, metal, concrete, and other materials will keep rats out of corn cribs, grain arteries, warehouses; and homes. Helpful bulletins on this control measure are available from the farm bulletin officer or county agent. Ratproofing is recommended for use when:

Building containing food material is accessible to rats.
Interior of building has "dead spaces" where rats may hide (double walls, staircases, etc.)

Place bait for rats and mice before cold weather sets in, experts advise.

Placing Rat Bait

Outstanding among the modern rat and mouse baits is warfarin, a powerful chemical discovered at the University of Wisconsin. Warfarin is a slow killer and does not cause "rat shyness", so bait acceptance is developed; it may be purchased as a concentrate, as a ready-mixed food bait, or in a "tracking powder" form and it is relatively safe to use. Check the following steps when you use warfarin:

Place containers filled with warfarin bait in rat runways.
Place bait where it will show. There is noticeable rat activity.
For excellent baiting success, use both warfarin food bait and warfarin-treated water—side by side.
Protect warfarin bait and warfarinized water with inverted boards or laid boxes. Keep bait stations amply supplied for at least 3 days.
Kill weak or faltering rats; burn or bury carcasses.
Set up a few permanent bait stations in areas of greatest activity to kill newcomers and control reinvasion.
Put rat control on your autumn schedule now. Follow these simple steps and, sooner than you ever thought possible, your premises will be rat-free.

Authority Granted

The Kentucky Public Service Commission granted Louisville Gas and Electric Company authority to raise the gas it may supply a given customer—from a maximum of 600,000 heat units to 1,000,000 units an hour. Comparatively few customers will be affected, but the limit was eased owing to the Company being able to procure and additional 5,000,000 cubic feet of gas a day, and it anticipates this will be raised another 1,000,000 cubic feet.

Consultant Employed

Kenneth R. Foreman, 44, with a background of sixteen years experience in public welfare work, became professional consultant to Commissioner of Welfare Glenn A. Lovern in complete charge of the newly activated Kentucky Children's Bureau.

Foreman, for the past six years has been with the U. S. Children's Bureau, and while on leave from that agency assisted in setting up the new Children's Bureau.

B. L. Ramsey, Monticello, was awarded the honor of having the most outstanding pasture program in Wayne county.

Ruling Given

Kentucky's laws do not forbid Roman Catholic nuns from teaching in the state's public school system while clad in the garb of that order, the Franklin Circuit Court ruled in dismissing a suit that would have forbidden such practice. The Rev. J. J. Rawlings, Bardstown, who brought the original suit challenging the right of the nuns to teach, said an appeal would be taken.

Judge Ardery, declined to pass on validity of an opinion given by the Nelson Fiscal Court to provide bus service for parochial school children on the ground that the Fiscal Court was not a party to the original suit.

stations, groceries and even milk tanks.

Two small scale test units are used for checking warehouse, hardware, feed and seed stores, creameries and like installations, the division also has two large scale test units to check motor vehicle scales such as those in coal yards, junk yards and grain elevators. These units can testra scale up to 56,000 pounds. A large capacity meter test unit makes inspection on delivery trucks delivering fuel oil to homes, gasoline to farms and petroleum products to service stations.

In addition, the Division is building a large scale test unit to be used primarily for inspection of stockyard scales—one of the first units designed specially for stockyards in the United States. It will be capable of testing stockyard scales up to 20,000 pounds.

Muskies Lose To Spiders 26-6; Home Coming Game Friday

By W. L. Woodall

In a tilt on the home field Friday night the Carlisle Muskineers battled a strong Nicholasville eleven to the last minute of the game, but came out on the short end of a 26-6 score.

The game got underway as Conley took the Nicholasville kick on the Carlisle 25 yard line, where he was downed. In three tries, Dampier, Cameron and Feebach were unable to get the Muskie offence clicking, and Conley punted to the Nicholasville 44 from the Carlisle 29.

Stinnett, Nicholasville back, on two attempts moved over Carlisle's left end tackle, down to the Musketeer 40. Rice broke loose around the left end and picked up 7 yards before Cameron brought him down on the 35. A Nicholasville fumble on the next play was recovered by Carlisle's Logan on the Muskie 39.

Dampier began Carlisle's second offensive try by breaking over left tackle for mid-field before being stopped. Cameron tried the right side of the line to the 47, and Dampier picked up a yard to the 46. This was short of the needed first down, and Conley punted to the Nicholasville 25 and the return was to the 40.

Nicholasville Scores

Rice took the pigskin on the first play of Nicholasville's second offensive attempt, and finding plenty of space around right end went 30 yards to score. The extra point was good as Stinnett went through the center of the line to tally.

Conley again took the kick-off, this time on the 20, bringing it back to the Carlisle 37. In three moves through the line, Dampier and Cameron made a first down on the Nicholasville 47. Two incompleted passes and a running play forced the Musketeers to punt. Kenney took the kick-off for the Tarantulas, on their 31, coming back to their 47. King and Booth brought Rice down on the mid-field stripe, after he had broken loose to cover 13 yards. Stinnett moved over right tackle to the Carlisle 7 on the first quarter ended.

Second Quarter

Beginning the second quarter with seven point lead, Nicholasville's Vandergriff fumbled to Rice who came around end to the 41 before being stopped by Bowlds

A Salute To The Giffin Workers

How often do we think of the worker behind the name Giffin Manufacturing Company? Is she a pawn to be fought over?—we think not, for without the loyal Giffin worker, the plant could not have achieved its present day position in the business world.

Let's give credit where credit is due; if it were not for the loyal workers, there would be no Giffin plant as the people of Nicholas County know it. Starting in 1948 with only 50 workers, each encouraging their friends to come to Carlisle for employment, until today there are 225 of you with your very necessary tasks to perform.

We of the Mercury along with countless others of both town and county appreciate what you have done to make Giffin's a successful growing concern.

We know that through your continued intelligent help without outside influence, you will make this county a better place in which to live.

CARRYING OUT HIS DUTY is Nicholas County Sheriff J. Milton Fryman, right above, as he tells Mrs. Clara Kaufman and husband Harold of Lexington, second from left, that no meeting will be held in the courthouse yard Tuesday night. Mrs. Kaufman, a Union organizer represents the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union and for several weeks has been attempting to organize workers at the Giffin Manufacturing plant. After being told that they could not meet in the courthouse, courthouse yard or upon the public square, union officials announced that they would hold forth from Federal property, the local postoffice.—The Carlisle Mercury photo

'From Dust To Dust'...

By Nellie Crump

Hello Central! Hello! Hello! Then a lady familiar voice picked up steam. Plainly I understood. I was being invited to dinner the next day (and a way to get at the Smith camp at Parks Hill on Licking river.

It was Tuesday, July 27, bright, clear and hot as a firecracker when the Lemon Ford with Mos Lucas at the throttle and Mrs. W. T. Robertson, a passenger turned into Morgan street exactly at the appointed moment. I had been ready for hours! The ride down Highway 32 was delightful, the morning air heavily laden with the pungent odor of fresh cedar. High cliffs overhanging with garlands of tangled vines, pictures and various mounted specemens—and oodles, just oodles, of the most comfortable chairs and couches all over the place. Of course if one wants to rough it up a bit there is a large native-stone oven out under the birch trees for fish fries, etc., when the mood moves. Everett Smith takes his Troup for an outing, or entertains more than 100 guests sometimes, at one sitting.

A motto over the brick fireplace, "A woman is as old as she looks, a man is not old as long as he looks," caught one eye while I kept the other on the dog-gonedest-looking six-foot snake-hide flanked by two "bunches" of rattles hanging on the front wall. Being plain afraid of snakes, dead or alive, somehow I got to thinking "what if"—in such case I planned to keep up in the lead if my feet would do their stuff!

Sput! Clank! Sput! Clank! The big shovel was crawling up the opposite hill unbelievably speed (getting a good start on the pipeline to Carlisle), and in musical rhythm punctuated by the frequent thud of a falling tree from the axes of a crew of REA cherpers blazing a trail right by the Smith cottage to connect with their power line near the entrance road and over it sang, "Wa-Wa-Wa-tee! Wa-Wa-Wa-ter!"

Under Suspicion

Trodding the old paths now largely by dead leaves which sleep deep and with the mercury above 90, no doubt my actions did seem a bit bizarre as I almost crawled under the sassafras and cedars along the cliff searching for clues to refresh memories of half a century. One of the choppers found the old cistern on top of the hill which gave me the sense of direction to locate the fountain (now a sinkhole), dining hall, "hitch-rack" and the cluster of wild grape vines (where bushel baskets (honestly) of pies, cakes and all the goodies that make a picnic dinner were hung "high, wide and handsome" the last Sunday in August (generally), closing date of the two weeks meeting. Excursion trains, rear to rear, extended from near the Licking railroad bridge almost to Myers, while horseback riders, and later buggies, crowded the road known as "The Dug Out," it being actually dug out of the cliff with pick and shovel.

At least one man is still living in Carlisle today who as a barefoot boy of 17, driving a team of oxen, helped haul the lumber from the mill at the foot of the hill to erect the buildings for Deering Camp Ground. He is Mr. William T. Roberts of West Main street who can recall many interesting experiences of that period, his favorite being about a "Guinea Negro" who was cook for the Clearing and building crew.
